Research grants would be restricted, a scholarship program deferred and forestry programs with the provinces allowed to lapse next March. The defence budget would be held down as far as possible and the government's own capital expenditures would be restricted, allowing for some postponement in a number of projects. These were not specified.

County Centre Must Pay For Services

PICTON (Staff) — An unexpected bill for $680.88 has come as a blow to those who operate the County Centre at the Fair Grounds. This account was rendered by the town following complaints by residents for the sewage service provided to those properties which are tax exempt. These include the county hospital, churches, schools. These institutions of course buy the water from the town's utilities and this charge helps cover the cost of maintaining the resulting sewage. Bills are based on water use.

The above bill covers only eight months of the year, the curling club and Agricultural society also pay these charges.

Question of Security

When President Johnson visited New England and New Brunswick's Campobello Island, where President Roosevelt used to vacation, he was accompanied by swarms of secret service men.

It would be difficult to imagine a more peaceful spot than Campobello, yet the Americans took no chances. The Mounties were there in force too, helping to ensure the best security possible for both the president and Prime Minister Pearson.

In fact, ever since the assassination of President Kennedy, the United States has tightened the already strict security afforded the president as well as members of his family.

Assassination of national figures goes back a long time in history. Indeed, Julius Caesar was murdered in circumstances somewhat similar to the recent slaying of South Africa's Dr. Verwoerd.

And is it not a fact that the degree of popularity, or lack of it, which a leader enjoys has nothing to do with his vulnerability to attack? As The Ottawa Journal points out, men in public life live in perpetual danger. "The fact is that all leaders share the same vulnerability to madmen."

The killing of President Kennedy, for example, apparently had no rhyme or reason, or basis in political unrest. It was the deed of a man of erratic and unstable character.

Here in Canada, a man of similar eccentric ways carried a bomb into the Parliament building in Ottawa recently, but it exploded in a washroom, killing him. A letter found among the man's possessions revealed he had intended to explode the bomb in the Commons itself.

Since then security has been strengthened on Parliament Hill. There is no doubt whether that the events in Canada will also drive home another lesson with regard to the overall problem of security and of affording protection for men in public life.

September Theme

Slowly but perceptibly summertime is slipping away. Yet the memories are bright of one of the best summer seasons in years.

For some it has been a difficult time, the farmers and market gardeners for example, concerned as they have been with profit levels and drought (relieved somewhat by recent rains), and the housewives who find it increasingly difficult to make ends meet in face of rising prices.

But these problems have been made more palatable by the beauty of the outdoor scene during recent months.

Now it is September — the seventh month of the Roman year — when we experience an end and a beginning, the decline of the summer solstice and the start of what is possibly the most beautiful season of the year, autumn, certainly the most colorful.

There was a time when fall and winter meant a period of recession in the lives of anxious ones in the latter part of the year heralded layoffs and the prospects of months of unemployment. But unemployment is less of a problem today than it was some years ago.

Each season has its own characteristics, features that are different from all others. This is what gives the Canadian climate its charm, even allowing for the cold and the bleakness and the hazards that are inseparable from such factors as summer lightning and winter cold.

Drive around the countryside any evening of any September day and beauty is everywhere. When the sun went down the other night, its light bathed the city and cast shadows over field and stream. At Moscow View it shone in the windows of the station and the ghosts of the old planes parked there seemed to come alive, and the sky was a vast region of color and mystery.

Show Business

The entertainment business covers a wide spectrum and human endeavor. The quality of its products, its presentations, and of the people who make up its ranks are equally varied. They range from the inspirational to the asinine, the sublime to the ridiculous; and of course, what constitutes good entertainment is another thing again, depending very much on individual taste.

One thing is certain, once you acquire a following, an audience that really digs whatever it is you have to offer, you are "in" man. The Beatles are the most recent example of the vastness of the riches that may accrue from world-wide adulation.

As a Hollywood correspondent has pointed out, the Beatles collected $15,000 for their recent 37-minute appearance in the film colony. "By way of social commentary," Associated Press writer Bob Thomas said, "the pay of the four young Englishmen exceeded the combined annual salaries of the president and vice-president of the United States."

The moral is, if you have any sort of marketable talent at all, plus a flair for the exotic or outlandish, clothes-wise (like Liberace) and of course, sound-wise, the world is your oyster.

School Bus Regulations

Oshawa Times

In Ontario more than 267,800 as well.

students ride school buses more than 275,000 miles any school day of the year. These statistics have special significance this week with important changes coming into effect in the school bus law.

Traffic must stop in both directions (approaching or with following) for a stopped school bus when red signal lights are flashing. Traffic must remain stopped until signals have stopped flashing and the bus is again moving.

For some time now, motorists have been required to stop behind a school bus when it is stopped on the highway with red signal lights flashing. This is the new law, effective September 1, requires motorists approaching from the front to stop to harbor it than others. So perhaps differences in our skin has some bearing on the problem.

The way to combat it is to have a dermatologist's help to start with, and then learn how to take your feet unattractive to the fungus by keeping them as clean and as dry as possible.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have always been careful about not going swimming immediately after eating. Recently I read that this rule has been disproved and that one is no more likely to get a cramp with a full stom ach than with an empty one. What is your opinion — Mrs. E. B.

My opinion is to wait an hour after a big meal. Cramping is not a stomach function, but is a matter of water temperat ure and muscle activity — or spasm. However, I am still unwilling to take a chance in the hope that full stomachs have nothing to do with it.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can a woman who has had a breast removed because of cancer have children? Would it be dangerous for her at age 40? — Mrs. J. O.

She could have children, but I think most physicians would discourage her. If cancer should have started in the other breast, the vigorous hormonal activity of pregnancy would make it progress very rapidly.

Australia's Ties With U.S.

Christian Science Monitor

Leaving aside, for the moment the help which Australia is receiving in South Vietnam, Australian-Australian alliance lends greater legitimacy to the United States interest in the peace of the western Pacific. It weakens the claim in some quarters that America has no place in the western Pacific, is not welcome there and should leave the area to be less derisive.

This alliance is further evidence there are freedom-loving, respected and internationally governed lands which look upon an alliance with the United States as a guarantee, not of subjection, but of independence. It means that the whole Pacific as well as in the northwest of Europe there is strong proof of the basically good intentions of Washington — however much doubt there may occasionally be over the manner in which these intentions are carried out.

President Johnson has made it clear that the United States will continue to take an active, immediate and close-eyed interest in the preservation of peace and the propulsion of progress in the Far East. It is of no small help and comfort to Washington that Australia warmly and openly welcomes this American policy. For Australia, whose position just south of the bobbil is the world of Southeast Asia is a highly strategic one, shows itself ready to follow a similar and parallel policy.

In fact, so closely have American and Australian policies meshed at many points that the following question may s oon arise: Has Australia replaced Canada within and without the English-speaking world (and always excepting America's very special relationship with Great Britain) as that land which sees most eye-to-eye with both the United States and with whom the latter has the easiest relationship? So it could seem.

Few Without Jobs in NZ

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

People who need jobs should go to New Zealand. That country has retained the unbroken record it has held for more than 25 years — a low level without unemployment. Sounds fantastic, but nevertheless it's true.

Most recent statistics reveal that the jobless level, of the negotiable figure of 761 a year ago, has decreased still further to 295.

This is the number of registered unemployed for the entire country. Many of these naturally, are unemployable. Some are out of work briefly under special circumstances.

The figure of notified job vacancies at last date is increased by several hundred to 8,200, according to a news item from Wellington. But this total is misleading since large numbers of employers with unfilled positions don't notify authorities because they see little prospect of their current needs being filled.

Most urgent categories of unfilled jobs, for which workers can't be found, are in clothing manufacturing, building and domestic operations, nursing and clerical and professional work.

Cure Not Always Easy For Athlete's Foot

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My 16-year-old son is bothered with athlete's foot, which gets worse in summer months. What can be done for it? — Mrs. G. W.

We would get rid of athlete's foot a lot quicker if we begin to think of it as a fungus. Athlete's foot sound simple. To correct name is fungus infection of the foot, and sometimes it isn't so simple to cure.

There are at least three kinds of fungi which produce this trouble. Aching or burning, usually between the toes, then an accumulation of thick, dead skin.

Some unhappy people are also allergic, and they really are in for misery until the fungus is subdued.

I'm sure you'd like me to give the name of some sort of foot bath or salve that would miraculously clear up the trouble, but what works with one kind of infection may not succeed with another. And there are, besides the three fungi, several skin diseases which more or less resemble athlete's foot, and can be made much worse if the wrong medications are used.

Therefore if the condition is really troublesome, consult a dermatologist (skin specialist.) He can, if necessary, take scrapings of the skin and examine it microscopically.

Let him decide on the correct medications. There are quite a few and they set in differing ways.

After that it's up to the patient to keep his feet in a condition which the fungus will not like. The itching flares up in summer because the feet are warm and moist, and makes it "old home week" for the fungi.

Daily washing and — this is very important — careful drying between the toes, is the first step. Wear clean socks at least daily. (Nylons are a wonderful relief, socks don't need to be boiled. Ordinary washing is sufficient.)

Small pieces of cotton between the toes can help to keep the area dry. Use of foot powder absorbs moisture and thus keeps the skin dry. Sandals or ventilated footwear in summer also can help.

There isn't any way to avoid it, says Dr. Molner, but some people appear to be more likely

U.K. English Foxed Him

Christian Science Monitor

Robert Cassell of Atlanta, Ga., is a high school honor student. But Robert apparently was deficient on one point. He could not understand English English.

He and his companion missed their plane from London to Paris because, he admitted, "We couldn't understand that English of our British cousins on the announcement system."

His plight was that of many Americans touring Britain this summer, in countries where foreign languages are spoken, American travellers keep their eyes fixed on the electronic bulletin boards, knowing they can't understand the announcement. But in England, land of their native tongue, they trust the loudspeaker to tell them the departure gate. When the information comes in some special British accent — Oxford, Yorkshire, Scottish, or some other — they may not recognize it as even referring to their own flight.

But it is not all one-sided. An American asking his way to Tottenham Court Road got no help until a clever Londoner spotted the cause of his trouble and corrected him. "Tiuhm, not Totenham."

We hope to see a new travel manual put on the market, an English-American, American-English pronunciation guide. Such a volume could enable Robert Cassell not only to catch his plane but to make himself understood to the British stewardess if he wanted marmal a de with his cracker (biscuit).

Strictly Personal

The Kinship of Sport

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is difficult to understand passions one does not share; and it is easy to ridicule them. In the past, I have ridiculed our national absorption in baseball; perhaps it's time I tried to understand it.

A close friend of mine, who is an intelligent and educated man, is also a baseball fan. I asked him at lunch the other day why he thinks that he, and so many millions of men, pay such close attention to a game they can hardly play and rarely attend in person.

"I believe there are three main reasons," he said thoughtfully. "And none of them has very much to do with baseball.

"In the first place," he continued, "most men today are so wrapped up in their businesses that they lack a broad grasp of subjects. Their conversation is pretty much confined to their work, and baseball is the only baseball enables them to establish contact with other men in a non controversial area, where they can get in their exercise.

"Secondly," he went on, "base ball is a cheap and effortless way to try to recapture one's youth. Hearing or watching a game on TV brings back warm memories of an age when every morning was a new adventure instead of a dull routine.

"I think there's another important factor," he ventured. "There's a lot of Walter Mitty in every man. He goes dutifully to work, provides for his family, and leads an ordinary, even somewhat unheroic life. But a part of him deeply yearns for glory and distinction.

"The baseball game enables him to fantasize himself — to put himself in the place of the pitcher or the batter who saves the game in the ninth inning. He can't himself in the running, the throwing, the hitting and the out-thinking of the other team.

"Actually, this is the only thing that explains why so many men are fanatically loyal to a team' team. They know that the team is made up of mercenaries from many parts of the country, who play well only so long as they are paid well, and will easily shift their allegiance to any team that buys them for more money.

"But this is of no consequence: the baseball fan has mentally transferred himself to the field, and when 'his' team loses it is a blow to his fantasy, and even to his self-esteem. He gets so excited because his own manhood is being tested on the diamond.

"Baseball does a lot of things for men. It makes them feel younger, more heroic, and more easily able to communicate with their fellows. In England it's cricket, on the Continent it's soccer — every civilized nation needs some dramatic demonstration of a primitive bond between men."

Soldiers and Other Ranks

Regina Leader-Post

Among the latest moves in Britain is the change which does away with the use of the term "other ranks" to describe privates, Heroicforth, declare Brenaks will be known as soldiers, something they had been all along. Those who gain stripes, by the merits of efficient discharge of duties, are still non-commissioned officers and everyone else, from one-pipper up, is a commissioned officers.

Batmen, the privates who have the privilege to get out of the daily drills to attend to the needs of officers, will be known as orderlies. And no one goes on sick parade in the mornings any more. The angles to get out of work will still be the same as ever, but the malingerers and lead-swingers as well as the really ill have to report with the sick. No doubt the army treatment for everything from a sore throat to a broken leg will remain the same: two headache tablets and light duties. In the old days the latter consisted of moving the piano from the recreation hall to the officers' mess because they had arranged to have some show people up from London for a bit of a bash. There'll be no change there.

One other designation has been changed. The term "unclassified families" now becomes "families."

Australia's Sunburned Image

Peterborough Examiner

Canada's main competitor for prospective immigrants from Britain has been Australia and it has had the advantage we have in terms of distance, proximity to other countries of western civilization and so on.we have not always come off best. A recent survey has shown that unfavorable factors cited against Canada have been the lack of medicare and the high cost of living, but the most frequently cited was the weather. Canada, it seems, is still regarded as a land of ice and snow and has difficulty competing with Australia's Bondi Beach image. Thus, next year's Ontario immigration promotion will carry gay pictures of winter sports in Canada to convey the idea that winter can be fun.

This is a sporting approach to take in the contest with Australia for immigrants, But why not always go on to the attack? For instance, Catadian promotional literature could stress the horrors of life in Australia with pictures of burning Australian deserts, marauding swagm en and young men being conscripted to fight the war in Vietnam. We would have to expect th a t Australia would retaliate in kind. But if we could first establish as image of Australia as an arid land, populated mainly by sheep-shearers and aborigines, and about to be swamped by the "yellow menace", we would have gone a long way to counteract Canada's own established image of an Arctic wilderness of bears, Eskimos and the occasional redcoat.

TORONTO STOCKS TODAY

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market greeted Finance Minister Sharp's anti-inflationary program with mixed reactions today as the industrial index eased in morning trade after being up all the opening.

A moderate afternoon session firmed early heavy losses on the market Thursday, although the industrial index continued its fourth successive day of losses.

The index, an indicator of key stock movements, was off .20 to 164.66. It had touched 164.13, lowest since March 25, 1964.

Volume showed a marked improvement as a result of a stronger speculative market and 2,906,000 shares changed hands compared with 2,439,000 Wednesday.

Imco, facing a possible strike, paced the list lower, falling ⅝ to 21¾. It touched a low of 21¾ in morning activity.

Westcoast Transmission was off ⅛ to 21¾, Bank of Montreal ¼ to 53¼ and Massey-Ferguson ¼ to 26 after being as low as 25¾.

Frobex and Area, jointly drilling on the Gaspe property of Wesfrob Mines, were also active.

Frobex jumped 38 cents to 2.03 on 570,836 shares and Area 45 cents to 1.80 on 312,000 shares.

On index, golds were down .47 to 179.94, western oils .03 to 97.09 and the TSE .29 to 138.10. Base metals were unchanged at 57.61.

OFF THE RECORD

"What do you men wipe your greasy hands on when you run out of steering wheels?"

Liberals

they should prove a big help to me."

The premier, who defeated Mr. Normore in a personal race in Humber West, said he planned to leave for St. John's early today to dig his way out from "under a big pile" of work. After a brief holiday, he planned to open a new office for himself and a small staff in Corner Brook, which he said will become a "sub-capital of the province."

TWO-CITY PREMIER

He would commute between here and Corner Brook. "I'll be able to operate from either."

Dr. Murphy said he is "exceptionally sorry about the result."

"After a night's sleep I'll be ready to start organizing for the next election."

He attributed the Liberal victory to "a giant political machine," a lack of funds for the PCs and the fear of some to vote against the Liberals.

Mr. Smallwood's fall cabinet was re-elected, including five ministers appointed this summer without seats in the legislature.

Labor Minister Clyde Wells won personal victory over Mr. Murphy in Humber East. All three party leaders ran in the Corner Brook area.

One Liberal gain was in traditional PC territory in the St. John's area and three were in central and northern Newfoundland—ground picked up by the PCs in 1962.

THE LAST HURRAH?

The premier wound up the relatively quiet campaign with repeated assurances that this was his last election.

"I'm going to get off Newfoundland's back. This is my last election. This is my sixth election in a row and that's enough. I won't be running again."

Although some observers here wondered whether Mr. Smallwood's supporters for politics would permit him to step down, they pointed out that he would be 70 by the time the next election is held—barring an unforeseen earlier vote.

He told a Corner Brook gathering: "You better vote now if you want to tell your children and grandchildren that you voted for Joey Smallwood."

Pearson

feared Pearson would lean much further than African powers.

Pearson later told a press conference that African members are still standing firm on their demand for mandatory UN sanctions and assurance of majority rule before independence.

He said it was possible that no agreement at all would be reached on the Rhodesian crisis at this current Commonwealth meeting. He expected that if no agreement was reached, it would be along the lines of the Canadian position.

He suggested that if existing sanctions fail, consideration should be given to the feasibility of mandatory economic sanctions under Chapter Seven of the United Nations Charter. These would be binding on all UN members and would bring UN penalties if any member failed to abide by them.

Horticulturists Discuss Plans For Centennial

The Board members of the Belleville Horticultural Society met at the home of Captain J. A. Buchanan. President C. A. S. Smith introduced the subject of centennial projects, and many other plans for a very active fall season.

It was decided that in lieu of a September general meeting the Society would attend the annual meeting of the Ontario Horticultural Association to be held at Picton Fair on Saturday, September 24th, the meeting to commence at 10 a.m.

Mr. R. M. Patterson, formerly of Montreal, was welcomed as a new member of the Executive Board.

Refreshments were served following adjournment of the business meeting.

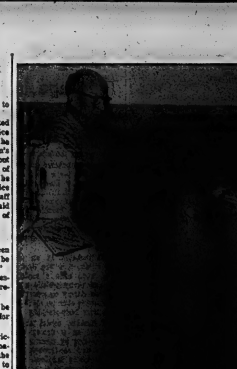
the circumstances in which the announcement was made. "But to go beyond that wouldn't be proper at this time."

Mr. Sharp made it plain that the medical care bill, introduced in Parliament by Mr. MacEachen earlier this year, would continue through the legislative mill with a high priority.



But the clause bringing it into effect July 1, 1967, in accordance with the offer made last year by Mr. Pearson, would be changed to July 1, 1968.

"Many of the provincial governments have indicated that they feel we are attributing too much urgency to the introduction of full medicare programs right away and they do not feel prepared to proceed to put such programs into effect next summer as provided for in the bill before the House," Mr. Sharp said.

Two Killed In Collision Near Lindsay

Dead are Robert Poyntz, 33, of Leeds, Ont., and Mrs. Mildred Kellert, 53, of Haliburton, Ont. In serious condition in hospital are Garnett Kellert, 64, Linda Poyntz, 4, and another Poyntz child who has not yet been identified.

New Chemical Building Started at Waterworks

The foundation walls for the new chemical building at the city water filtration plant in West Belleville are now well underway and plant employees are looking forward to its completion sometime next spring or early summer.

The reason is that the new building and its modern chemical equipment will mean considerably increased efficiency in the operation of the water treatment plant.

It will also result in a worthwhile reduction in the cost of chemicals which then will be purchased in bulk quantities instead of the limited amounts which can be stored in the present cramped quarters.

For instance, in the new building there will be two 6,000 gallon tanks for alum, and one 3,000 gallon tank for fluoride. Also liquid chlorine will come in ton containers instead of in the present cylinders containing 150 pounds.

There will be greatly increased storage space for chemicals in the new building.

WILL BE AUTOMATIC

Introduction of chemicals into the city water supply will be almost completely automatic when the new building goes into operation. This will be in contrast to the present antiquated equipment which must be regularly replenished and constantly watched.

Automatic equipment, however, does not mean that manual supervision will not be needed.

"There is always the possibility that something might go wrong and untreated water would get pumped into the mains," said James Scriven, filtration plant manager.

One of the chemicals used at the filtration plant is liquid chlorine which goes into the city water supply at the rate of six parts per million. At the present rate of water pumping, one to three cylinders of chlorine are used daily. But in hot summer weather, with high water pumpage, this amount can go as high as five cylinders of chlorine per day.

Alum at the rate of 20 parts per million and fluoride at the rate of one part per million are also put into the water. Fluoride goes into the water as a measure aimed at preventing tooth decay.

ON SITE OF HOUSE

The new chemical plant is being built by Tatham Construction on the site of the former residence once used by the plant manager. The new structure, immediately to the west of the plant, is being tied directly into the present pumphouse building.

Last week Mayor Jack Ellis told city council that the city water plant had almost reached the limit of its capacity and consideration must soon be given to expansion or the city would be in danger of a water shortage.

A report from consulting engineers Gore and Storrie presented at the same time, said that expansion of some of the local filtration plant would be dependent upon whether Lake Ontario is used as a city water supply.

It was estimated that lake water would not be available for at least five years while it would be three years before a plant addition could be completed.

Clothes Often Express Our Personality

DEAR DORIS: My parents are always saying things about my boy friend. I'll agree that he does not dress right but if they would only give him a chance!

DORIS CLARK

As far as I can see he has a wonderful personality. I do not like to bring him home any more because they do not like him.

Please do not tell me to forget him because I could not. — B.B.H.

DEAR B.B.H.: Trouble is, the way a fellow dresses is just about all we have to go by, at first glance. Most of us express our personality by the clothes we wear.

But Mom and Dad might well come to like your friend if they came to know him. You both need to give a little.

DEAR DORIS: I would like you to please print a Thank-You for the help and thoughtfulness of the people who so kindly wrote in with information regarding my baby with celiac disease. The baby's doctor is very pleased with his change in health with his new diet and I've found your help and the advice of your readers very helpful. — STUNNED.

DEAR STUNNED: Marvelous! Perhaps now we could dub you "Not Quite So Stunned!"

DEAR DORIS:

To Member of the Younger Generation:

I understand your problem for I have been in the same situation. Above being disillusioned and strict, my parents are very religious. I, too, was in want of freedom until one day I tried to see my parents' side of it. I found they too have a right to be strict.

With all the things happening to young girls today who wouldn't be worrying about their daughter? You might not realize fate until it stands at your door, so it's best for you to obey. I'm sure, above all, your parents love you.

Why not try to be their friend instead of their enemy? It works, for it's worked for me. Try it! — ANOTHER M.Y.G.

DEAR ANOTHER: One worker with teen-agers tells me she spends more time persuading her girls to talk to Mom and Dad about what's on their minds than on any other one thing. When they do manage it, life becomes surprisingly serene.

Your letter is bound to help M.Y.G. and others.

DEAR DORIS: Two years ago we went to a wedding where children had not been invited. The management had to hold up the wedding supper while they set up extra tables for twenty-some children. Some of them were only two years old.

In our case, I want to write on the inside envelope, "Please, no children." My daughter says they don't do this. Doris, I'm paying part of the bill, and my working daughter is paying part. At $1.50 a plate we can't afford them. — WORKING WIDOW.

DEAR W.W.: The guest who brings an uninvited child just doesn't know his manners. The rule is that a family invitation names each child included. If the child is grown up, he gets his own invitation. But if you think some close friend might be wondering, send an informal note separately, explaining your position. Say something like:

"Mary dear, much as we love the children, our guest list has to be limited. Bob and I want to have them come and see us with you later on. I know you will understand."

MR. AND MRS. JAMES C. REID

Reid — Matthews

Rev. H. M. Davis officiated at the wedding ceremony in Bridge Street United Church, on Saturday, September 3, 1966 at 2 p.m., when Lorraine Audrey Matthews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Matthews became the bride of James Carl Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Reid, Belleville. Wedding music was rendered by church organist Mr. Alec Gordon who also accompanied the soloist Miss Roslyn Robertson.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length bridal gown featuring a Chantilly lace bodice with scoop neckline and long lily-point sleeves. The fully bouffant skirt was enhanced with appliques of Chantilly lace and was emphasized at the Empire waistline with a band of organza. A bouffant veil edged with matching lace was caught by a crystal tiara headdress. She carried a white Bible crested with a white orchid and cascading pink roses.

Miss Cheri Matthews, sister of the bride as maid of honor and the bridesmaids Mrs. Rose Sheffield, sister of the bride and Miss Shirley Kleinsteuber and another sister, Miss Mary Matthews, as junior bridesmaid, were identically attired in shrimp colored silk organza over taffeta featuring full length straight skirts with self bows at the Empire waistline. The back of the dress was highlighted with a flowing lace train extending from the shoulders. Each carried a bouquet of pink tinted mums and feathered carnations. Miss Anna Sheffield, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore a white silk organza-over-taffeta dress, accented at the waist with a shrimp colored sash. She carried a basket of pink tinted mums.

Mr. Garnet Reid, brother of the bridegroom was best man, while Mr. Donald Matthews Jr., and Mr. Thomas Matthews, both brothers of the bride, and Mr. Phil Stephens, were the ushers. Master Dave Sheffield, nephew of the bride was ring-bearer and Master Ted Sheffield also a nephew was the train bearer.

The reception was held at the Pinnacle Room, Hotel Quinte, where the bride's mother received the guests, wearing an emerald lace sleeveless sheath dress with matching three - quarter lace coat, bone accessories and a corsage of yellow roses with bronze baby 'mums. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother, wearing a two-piece gold terylene ensemble, brown accessories and a corsage of yellow Sunbeam roses.

Leaving on the wedding trip to Western Ontario and Winnipeg, Manitoba, the bride donned a green and gold brocade dress with matching coat, gold accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid will reside at 89 Emily Street, Belleville.

Dishrag Dresses Now The Rage in London

By BONNIE BUXTON

LONDON (CP)—Some of the most distinctive dresses in swinging London today narrowly escaped the kitchen sink.

They are crocheted in washing-up cotton — soft, thick string used by that vanishing breed of frugal British women who knit their own dishrags. Despite their humble fabric, they can be seen in some of London's most expensive boutiques at prices ranging up to $30 ($150).

Hand-crocheted in an open-work stitch, they are designed to be worn over a matching slip. But many whistle - slim girls are daring to wear these lacy dresses over no more than a one-piece body-stocking.

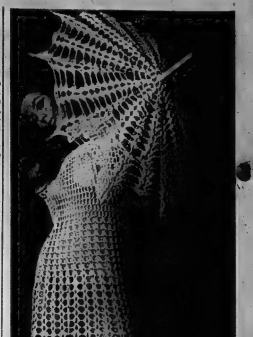
One London model startled spectators at a dressy Ascot race meeting by turning up in a crocheted see-through tunic with matching leggings.

"The dresses are the latest idea from Paris," said the manager of a boutique which has supplied crocheted cottons for the leading actresses of two British films now in production.

In spite of the high cost of these fashions in London, it is possible to produce a do-it-yourself version almost for nothing. British girls with mothers who can wield a crochet hook can in luck, for a crocheted cotton suit can cost only 10 shillings ($1.50), the price of the string.

Washing-up cotton is the ideal crocheting yarn, said one such mother. Because of its bulk, it can be quickly worked into dresses. It's cool enough for summer, heavy enough for winter.

As for laundering, if the fading is separate, the garment don't even need dry-cleaning. Simply wash and block—just like a dishrag.



You can alter them just as easily. To shorten, simply unravel the hem. To lengthen, crochet a few extra rows. One boutique said it could change a street-length dress into a gown, given a half-day's notice and a few extra balls of cotton.

What about the Canadian girl who can't find the dress, the money, or a mother to crochet it for her? She can do it herself, following a simple crochet instruction from any pattern book. If she can't find "washing-up cotton" in a Canadian store, almost any soft, heavy cotton string will do.

The novice should begin with something simple—a crocheted top perhaps—before trying a dress. After the first few trials, she will probably be able to improvise her own stitches and styles.

With skirts tending to become shorter and lacework more open, these dresses will probably become less and less expensive for the girl who is handy with a crochet hook.

In fact, the most recent crocheted fashions shown in the British magazine Queen used little more washing-up cotton than an ordinary dish-rag.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. R. John Webber, Toronto announce the engagement of their daughter, Linda Ann, to Mr. John David Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Nelson, Belleville. The marriage will take place in Islington United Church, on Saturday, October the 8th at 4 p.m.

Mr. Jules Bentley of John Street is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

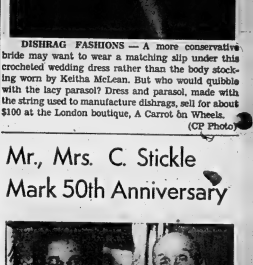
Before her recent marriage, Mrs. James Reid, the former Lorraine Matthews of Belleville, was entertained at miscellaneous showers at Victoria and Grey Trust Company held by the staff; also at the home of Mrs. Thomas Lindale, with Miss Shirley Kleinsteuber as co-hostess. A presentation was made by Mr. E. B. Bracken, of Victoria and Grey Trust.



FIGURES AREN'T CLEAR

TORONTO (CP)—There are no more woman alcoholics today than 10 years ago, says an American authority, "but more women are admitting it and facing up to the problem." Mrs. Marty Mann, founder of the National Council on Alcoholism in New York, says a fifth of the United States' 8,000,000 alcoholics are women.

DISHRAG FASHIONS — A more conservative bride may want to wear a matching slip under this crocheted wedding dress rather than the body stocking worn by Keitha McLean. But who would quibble with the lacy pants? Dress and parasol, made with the string used to manufacture dishrags, sell for about $100 at the London boutique, A Carrot On Wheels.

Mr., Mrs. C. Stickle Mark 50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Stickle marked their 50th wedding anniversary by holding Open House for a large number of guests at their home, Section R. R. 5, throughout Monday afternoon and evening.

The house was appropriately decorated for the occasion with one table completely filled with well-wishing anniversary cards, and a large three-tier anniversary cake adorned the buffet in the dining room.

The honored guests were married in Grace Methodist Church, Trenton, on September 6, 1916 and have resided on the same farm for 46 years. Mr. Stickle is still actively farming, raising dairy cows, beef cattle and sheep on his 100 acres just south of Highway 401. While speaking about his farm, Mr. Stickle commented that it is the only double width farm in the district, meaning it has a width of 80 rods.

Mrs. Stickle was the former Ethel Hovell of the Napanee area and Clayton Edward Stickle was born at Glen Miller only four miles from his present residence.

They have two children, daughter Marie, now Mrs. William Kyle of Port Hope and one son Ross who lives in the house next to his parents and works at the McPherson's Tire Shop in Trenton. There are five grandchildren.

Susanna's Family Fair

AND AWAY WE GO!

Dear Susanna: Now that we are grandparents and still comparatively young at that some of our happiest times are spent with our three half-grown grandchildren.

Several times a year we take them out of town for the week-end to a lodge or motel in the country. We often go in the off season, and always get a family rate, so it's not that expensive in comparison with the good it does us all.

It gives our daughter a break, and a chance to get re-acquainted with her husband. There is plenty for the kids to do so of course they love it, and we can enjoy them without any work involved, as well as treating ourselves to a short holiday.

Now that we're experts on traveling with the younger generation, here's a tip:

If you're staying in a place with miles of corridors the children find it confusing at first to identify their room, so whenever they take off for the play area on their own, tie something on the handle of the door to guide them back.

One of the white hand towels is perfect. — Enjoying Life.

I don't know what this older generation is coming to!

Recipe for Italian Spaghetti Sauce

LETTER: A lady wrote requesting a recipe for Italian spaghetti sauce. The amounts in my recipe can be varied to fit ingredients on hand. I make a large amount and can the surplus. I use it on cabbage rolls diluted with water. Sometimes a bit goes into a pot of soup. Kathleen B.

Answer: Your letter arrived March 1st and ever since I have been trying to fit it into our busy program so I finally did. I wish now that I had tested it earlier for it is so satisfactory. I like it because I can be it is just right as it clings to the strands of spaghetti when they are combined.

NOTE: These amounts make twice as much as you need for a meal for six people. If you want only enough for one spaghetti supper for 4-6 cut the amounts in half.

2 tablespoons olive or cooking oil; 1 large (or 2 medium) onions, chopped; 2 cups finely chopped celery; ½ green pepper, chopped; 2 cloves garlic finely chopped; 8 cups tomatoes, well packed, measured when peeled and cut in eighths; 2 tiny hot dried chili peppers; 6 tablespoons sugar; 2 ½ teaspoons salt; 1-16 teaspoon pepper; ½ cup chopped parsley or dried parsley flakes; 2 ½ teaspoons paste (½ six-ounce can).

Measure oil into very large frying pan or saucepan, add chopped onion, celery, green pepper and garlic and gently saute until they are soaked with fat. Peel the tomatoes by pouring boiling water over, let stand 1 min. drain and slip off skins and trim out cores and cut in eighths and measure. Add tomatoes, chili peppers, sugar, salt and pepper to pan and cook gently, stirring frequently for at least 3 hours. (Kathleen B. says the longer the better.) Now add the tomato paste and parsley and cook ½ to 1 hour longer or until of spaghetti sauce consistency. If sauce becomes too thick do not hesitate to add ½ cup hot water or tomato juice to thin it a little until all vegetables are very tender. Kathleen B. says that when she cooks it a very long time it becomes a beautiful Burgundy color. Fish out the chili peppers if you can find them.

NOTES: To half of the above amount I added ½ pound ground chuck beef which I sauteed separately without adding any fat, tossing with a fork until it became crumbly and brown. (2) I cooked ½ pound spaghetti in 12 cups water to which I added 2 teaspoons salt, until it was tender. I drained the spaghetti and added it to the tomato sauce and gently tossed it with 2 forks until spaghetti strands were coated. I piled it on a hot platter and sprinkled it with Parmesan cheese. We passed additional grated Cheddar cheese at the table. Our crowd enjoyed this spaghetti supper and I want to thank you for the recipe, Kathleen.

CONSULTATION ON BIRTH CONTROL — A mother holding her youngest child consults with a doctor in a hospital clinic in Tunis. The clinic is part of a Tunisian program to cut the country's birth rate, the first such program in the Arab world. It seriously challenges the traditional concept of large families as a sign of Allah's benediction. (CP Photo)

Tunisian Government Plans Program to Cut Birth Rate

By PETER BUCKLEY

TUNIS (CP) — President Habib Bourgiba is tightening the reins on what he has described as the "unbridled growth of population" in Tunisia.

The Tunisian government has started a $1,300,000 program to cut the country's birth rate, becoming the first state in the Arab world to challenge seriously the traditional Islamic concept of large families as a sign of Allah's benediction.

Hospitals throughout the North African country have been drafted as counselling centres and mobile units are to be sent into the countryside, accompanied by a propaganda campaign that can be expected to reach into almost every mud - walled village home and ornate city villa.

A young Tunisian doctor who has been in on a two-year preliminary program said in an interview that a sociological survey "showed an overwhelming number of women in Tunisia are receptive to the idea of family planning and many want to stop having children right now."

Dr. George Brown, 30, scholarly and bespectacled graduate of the University of Toronto, is in Tunisia for the New York-based Population Council, whose work on behalf of the government here is being supported by the Ford Foundation.

"The survey found that the women considered the ideal family size to be four, but the actual size is six on average," Brown said. "It also found that knowledge of contraceptive methods was very limited."

LIMIT BABY BONUSES

Surprisingly enough, however, the survey showed that there would be far less resistance to a mass program than might have been expected.

The Bourguiba government, which has been a pacesetter in social legislation since Tunisia gained independence in 1956, has been slowly heading toward a program of population control, even though the country has only 4,600,000 people in an area slightly larger than Canada's three Maritime provinces.

It had previously passed legislation to fix the minimum marriage age for girls at 17 and limited its child-allowance payments to the first four children in a family.

In 1960, the sale of contraceptive devices became lawful in Tunisia and last year abortion was legalized for the first time in a Moslem country.

The abortion bill, as originally drafted, would have allowed any woman with four children to seek an abortion during the first three months of pregnancy—even without her husband's permission. But in a rare defiant bow toward tradition, the normally docile National Assembly voted to have it apply to women with five children, not four.

CLEARED BY LEADERS

Moslem religious authorities in Tunisia have already ruled that contraception is not contrary to Islamic law. Although Tunisians are not known in the Arab world for any particular piety, Islam still has a strong social influence and the Moslem leadership's clearance was regarded as important.

At present, in fat year or lean, one mature woman in three can be counted on to give birth every year.

That means 205,000 new citizens annually to be housed, educated, subsidized and eventually employed. The population increase, says Public Health Minister Fethi Zoubir, threatens to undo the country's tightly budgeted economic planning.

Dr. Brown describes Tunisia's program as one of the most ambitious in the world.

He came here with his wife and child in 1964 to work with other foreign and Tunisian doctors, establishing more than 30 consultation centres in a pilot program.

About 25,000 women were treated with various forms of contraceptive methods and the results led the government to adopt the intra-uterine device as the safest and most effective in a mass program.

"It has been estimated that there are 650,000 women of childbearing age in Tunisia," Brown said. "It's hoped to reach a third of them in the next two years."

EXPECT HYDRO NEED

Planners estimate Ontario will use 20,000,000 kilowatts of electricity by 1980, compared with today's 7,800,000 kilowatts, self-addressed envelope.

THE INTELLIGENCER, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1966 7

Ann Landers

Hubby Should Assume Duty Wife Neglects

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I've been married for five years to a woman who still wears her Phi Beta Kappa key on a chain around her neck. I don't mind the key, but her neck is dirty.

And so is the house, which is why I am writing. We moved into this brand new duplex when we were first married. My wife hasn't had a rug cleaned, or washed the curtains or walls since we moved in. The laundry is sent out and I've asked her why she doesn't just send the curtains. She says she hasn't got time to take them down.

ANN LANDERS

I'm not a nut on dirt, but this place is more than I can stand. When I ask her to please clean up the hallway before somebody falls down the basement stairs, she says "Housework is for horses".

The woman is a great reader which is what she must do all day. We have no children and we eat out most of the time. Is there a solution or am I stuck forever — DUKE.

DEAR DUKE — Hire a cleaning woman and give her instructions — in other words, take over. If you wait for Mrs. High I.Q to do it, it'll never get done.

Of course it's rotten that you should have to do this, but it's the only realistic solution to your problems.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My sister and I have had a bitter quarrel about her 15-year-old-daughter.

I love my niece and I worry about her. She is going steady with a boy 17. They are each other every evening. On weekends he is at their home from morning till night. My niece has no girl friends and the boy has no boy friends. They are interested only in each other.

When I suggested that my sister should not allow her daughter to spend so much time with the boy she accused me of having a dirty mind, said she trusts both her daughter and the boy and told me to keep my nose out of her business. Am I wrong or right? — WORRIED AUNT.

DEAR AUNT — Anyone who reads my column knows my views on going steady. I am 100% against it. The situation you describe sounds like trouble. But unless your sister asked for your advice you should not have offered it. Unsolicited counsel is generally considered interference.

DEAR ANN LANDERS.— I'm still burning about the folks who criticized that wonderful couple in their 70's who like to dance. That peppy pair should be getting bouquets, not brickbats.

My grandparents are 78 and 81. They still play golf and swim almost every day. They also enjoy hiking and can dance rings around us kids. Grandpa plays a banjo and grandma plays the piano. They are the life of any party.

I'm a teen-ager who thinks it's wonderful when older folks want to do things like that. Don't you? — PROUD OF THEM.

DEAR PROUD — Indeed I do, but it takes a great deal more than just wanting to do things, Dearie.

You are too young to know an old song that went like this: "When the mind has desires that the body can't fill, you're over the hill, brother — over the hill".

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped,

Canada Gives 500,000 Doses of Oral Vaccine To Viet Nam Children

Canada is providing $1,000,000 in medical aid to South Viet Nam this year. A Canadian Press reporter in Saigon talks about the delivery of a gift of 500,000 doses of oral polio vaccine.

By DOUGLAS AMARON

SAIGON (CP)—Before the end of September, 200,000 Saigon children of pre-school age will have received their first doses of oral vaccine provided by Canada as part of a program to control polio in South Viet Nam.

"We can use another 250,000 to 300,000 doses and hope Canada will provide them," said Dr. S. F. Farmsian, regional director of the World Health Organization, with which works closely with the Vietnamese government in the field of preventive medicine.

The Canadian government's gift of 500,000 doses—two for each child—of what is called trivalent oral Sabin vaccine—arrived here in August. Help of United States authorities was enlisted to arrange storage since the vaccine must be kept refrigerated.

A one-week blitz to give children their first doses was organized for the period immediately after the Sept. 11 election. The normal health clinics, maternity services and similar agencies were not enough to cope with such a major program, and special clinics were opened, manned by senior school students, nursing students and other helpers.

POLIO SPREADS

Polio is not a major disease here in relation to others but it has been increasing in the last four or five years. During the last year about 1,700 cases were reported in Saigon but there may have been others unreported since symptoms are relatively light and paralysis sometimes is delayed from one to four years.

"Polio prevention hasn't priority in the health program, where first attention must be given to cholera, sanitation and nutrition, but preventive action must be taken and that is why aid from outside countries such as Canada is welcome," Dr. Farmsian said.

There are about 800,000 children in refugee-swollen Saigon but some already have been vaccinated. In addition to the children of six months to six years aided by Canada, more than 80,000 school-age children were vaccinated in the week that ended six months of this year.

Presentation of Canada's gift, part of a medical aid program to South Viet Nam that will cost the Canadian government more than $1,000-000 this year, was made at a formal ceremony in the new health ministry building.

Victor Moore of Ottawa, head of Canada's delegation on the international control commission, made the presentation to Dr. Nguyen Luu Vien, Viet Nam's deputy premier. Samples of vaccine were on display in the hall and Canadian and Republic of South Viet Nam flags were behind the podium.

Moore told the gathering of government and medical officials that although Canada has a special role to play in this country through membership in the ICC, "this status does not detract from our concern for the suffering of the people of Viet Nam."

"We are impressed with your steadfast courage in the face of bitter hostility. It is with these thoughts in mind that we are pleased to provide assistance of a humanitarian nature such as today's contribution."

Dr. Vien, responsible for health and welfare in his country, said a nation's future depends on its children, and asked Moore "to convey to your government and to your beloved countrymen our grateful appreciation."

New Traffic Pattern Meets Mixed Reception Of Motorists, Walkers

It's possibly still a bit early for a really honest opinion, but the city's new traffic pattern in the Upper Bridge area of Front and Main Streets is to say the least meeting with a decidedly mixed reception.

The new system of one-way streets and channelling of traffic went into effect Wednesday with the commencement of work preparatory to the construction of the new four-lane College Street Bridge.

And almost immediately there was a wave of criticism from motorists, merchants and pedestrians.

The city police traffic department is confident that the new traffic system will work out, but the men on the street and also merchants in the Upper Front street area are not so sure.

Merchants on the south side of Front Street between Pinnacle and the Upper Bridge are particularly unhappy with at least one business man claiming the city has put him out of business.

ONLY ONE LANE

In this area there is only one traffic lane for northbound motorists on Pinnacle Street wishing to proceed down Front Street.

"The city has put me right out of business," complained Carl Jones, used car lot owner at the corner of Pinnacle and Front Street.

Mr. Jones now has no entrance onto Pinnacle Street and his entrance onto Front Street is restricted because of the one - traffic lane and no parking regulation.

"The least the city could have done was to inform me earlier of the traffic pattern intended for this area" he said.

And a Knights of Columbus Hall official was almost as loud in his complaint.

He claimed that with no street parking in front of his Hall, delivery trucks would be unable to stop and requirements would have to be carried.

TRAFFIC REDUCED

Merchants south of the Upper Bridge noted that since the new traffic regulations went into effect, traffic on this section of Front Street had been reduced.

One reason for this, of course, is that westbound traffic on Station Street can no longer proceed on down Front Street.

Such Station Street motorists to get to Upper Front Street must turn up the hill on Church Street and proceed by way of Victoria Ave. and Pinnacle Street. The other alternative would be for them to proceed on over the Upper Bridge, up North Front Street to Harriet, down Coleman to Bridge and then up Pinnacle Street.

However several of the merchants talked to, agreed that the new system of channelling traffic was accomplishing its intended purpose of moving cars.

PEDESTRIANS ON SPOT

One of these was Jack Ireland of Ireland's Appliances, who said that motorists could get around faster as they were less hindered by stop signs and traffic lights.

"When I first saw the plan on paper I felt it was really a monstrosity," Mr. Ireland said, "but now that it has been in effect for a couple of days I don't feel so badly."

He said it was still too early to tell what effect the new traffic pattern would have on business in the area.

But if "walk" lights and signs are to be obeyed it is the pedestrians who are mostly inconvenienced.

For instance, printed signs say that pedestrians cannot cross Front street anywhere on Front between Victoria and Pinnacle street. At least that is what signs at the Upper Bridge seem to indicate.

A LONG WAY ROUND

In order to get to the post office, a person walking north on Front Street must cross the Upper Bridge, cross North Front Street at Moirs, return across the bridge, then continue up Front Street to Pinnacle where there is a "walk" light.

In fairness to the traffic planners pedestrians are given a break at the above crossing by all vehicular traffic being periodically brought to a complete stop.

But for better understanding on the part of the pedestrian it appears that rephasing of the "walk" lights in this area might be advisable.

The reason? Present timing of the "walk" signal doesn't give ample time to get across the intersection before the signal changes to "don't walk".

Drive Started to Bring Party Politics Into High Schools

OTTAWA (CP) — Youth organizers of four federal parties will join hands this fall in a campaign to bring party politics to high schools across the country.

The drive will be mounted in the face of official or unofficial bans on high school politics in some regions. It will coincide with renewed attempts in Parliament to reduce the voting age to 18.

The Canadian Political Youth Council, a new organization grouping 32 members of the student wings of four parties, Tuesday announced its "wholehearted support for partisan political clubs in the high schools."

The council members — Liberal, Conservative, New Democratic and Social Credit — agreed at a weekend meeting here to exert common pressure to gain acceptance of the clubs. The organizers plan to lobby principals, trustees and other school officials.

Although political clubs are commonplace at colleges and universities, they have met official resistance and hostile student interest in high schools.

SOME CLUBS FORMED

In Newfoundland, such clubs are barred from the high schools and Premier Joseph Smallwood is strongly opposed to them. Some high school clubs have been formed in Newfoundland and in six other provinces — Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

In Ontario the teen-age politicians are largely confined to Metropolitan Toronto and are frowned on by school authorities elsewhere, party sources say.

Alan Smith, chairman of the youth council, said in a statement teen-agers are better informed and more interested in the political process than ever before.

"A definite need has been proven in this area due to the interest demonstrated across the country by the high school students themselves."

The Political Youth Council was founded in May, 1965, to co-ordinate certain youth activities by the four parties. Each party has three representatives on the council, which meets every two months on the average.

The voting age issue likely will come up this fall when the Commons elections committee opens hearings on the revision of the Canada Elections Act, unchanged since 1920.

The Liberal and New Democratic parties have promised to lower the age from 21 in elections since then, but some members of all parties privately express fears about this step.

They argue that under-21 voters would tend to adopt extreme views. Some Quebec politicians believe a large proportion of the 18-21 age group in that province have separatist sympathies.

SPORTSLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

Slang-wise the only "dope" that will be around in Frankfurt Germany tomorrow afternoon when world champion Cassius Clay, known in Black Muslim circles as Muhammad Ali will attempt to make hamburger out of his German challenger Karl Mildenberger, will be the forecast of the experts.

Other "dopesters" will be around but they will be busy making rigg history. For the first times in the annals of the "sport" they will take tests of the champion and challenger before and after the bout to make sure neither has been needled in the literal sense.

It is expected that some 70,000 of the Hans and Fritz variety perished with not a few of the curious from other parts of the world including the usual quota of soothsayers, will watch the bazzle in Wald Stadium, an open-air arena of 80,000 capacity.

Clay is curious and Mildenburger is confident, a trifle cocky, and a little bit angry.

The champion's curiosity is piqued because it will be the first time in his unbeaten career he will face a foeman that plickes his boobs, tippercuts and crosses from the portside.

In all likelihood Clay doesn't give a tinker's dam from which side the German tosses 'em. But it furbished material for a publicity build-up and part of trainer Angelo Dundee who quoth solemnly, "The champ is sweating for this fight because you never know about these southpaws. May be the guy will give the champ the toughest fight of his career."

Herr Mildenburger, a handsome Heinie with an Irish touch in his features, isn't exactly happy about the overall situation. The German sportswriters, at least the greater majority, do not figure he can make the proud Muslim bite the dust, or that his hand will be raised in victory after the prescribed fifteen rounds have gone into history.

Besides the Clay image has been deeply embedded in the minds of the general German public. Canny Cassius has seen to that. He has come to Germany with his graceful style and flicking gloves, And they're probably impressed with the fact that the odds boys have raised all a bit for the champ.

The attitude of his countrymen has raised the Mildenberger hackles. At this writing he was said to be angry as hell and declaring, "I will give Clay a fight he will never forget. Come to world with what he will get Saturday all his fights so far have been exhibitions."

Mildenberger's manager Wolfgang Mueller looks at another side of the picture. He says the German public's attitude has made his boy angry instead of depressing him. "It will make him more determined."

"It is ridiculous to say he has no chance as most of the German press does," he says. "Mildenberger has a good chance and if he takes it Clay will retire."

Clay has announced that he will retire after his first defeat.

Mueller claims that he and his boy have discovered the best way to beat Clay, but won't divulge it. That makes good sense.

He did admit that the German won't stick to a firm plan. He claims that if a plan is made before a fight it never works out certainly not against a southpaw like Clay. He says a plan must be made in the ring and Herr Mildenberger has that ability. (Cherubim Sam please note).

Mueller says, "one thing I can say for sure. Karl will not start chasing the champion, he will let him come."

I don't believe for a moment the decision will be Mildenberger Uber All's. Clay as in his fights with Britain's Henry Cooper and London has shown his disdain for his opponent by waltzing through training schedules.

However the basics might give Clay the chance to prove something. A punch with the power of a butterfly's kiss knocked out Sonny Liston. Britain's "Our 'Enery" Cooper bled himself into defeat. Brian London earned himself a commission in boxing's "tank" regiment.

I do not know what Mildenberger's weak spots are. In my book he'll go down as another entry in the Clay ledger of victories.

He may upset Louisville's dancing will-o-the-wisp but don't hold your breath. And somewhere in show biz, the former Sonja Clay will rest assured her next alimony payment will arrive on time.

East Germans Win 7 Events

BLED, Yugoslavia (CP-AP)—Rowers from five continents face another day of gruelling qualifying races in the world rowing championships today, but the East Germans got a rest.

The East German oarsmen, competing separately from West Germany for the first time, won all seven of their heats Thursday and aroused fears in rival quarters that they might win most of the seven final races Sunday.

"They have been claiming that they can win every event except the single and double sculls," one coach said. "Based on their performances Thursday they apparently mean it. I wouldn't bet against them."

Some of Thursday's heat winners advanced automatically to the finals, which take place in all events Sunday, and some advanced to the semi-finals. All of Thursday's losers get a chance today to capture the remaining finals berths.

It was a disappointing day for Canada, placing fourth in two events and fifth in the third. Canada is entered in only three of seven events this year.

The Soviet Union won four of its seven heats and West Germany, which also sent crews in each category, won three. None of the races won by West Germany and Russia was good enough for an automatic place in the finals.

The East German team placed four boats in the semi-finals and three of the finals and won all its events with at least a length to spare.

Brewer Ready To Sue For Freedom

TORONTO (CP) — Carl Brewer is prepared to sue for his freedom from professional hockey and two, wealthy businessmen are ready to pay his legal expenses.

Alan Eagleson, Brewer's lawyer, said Thursday the former Toronto Maple Leafs defence man will go to court if he must to break a suspension that could keep him from joining Canada's national team for the world hockey championships in Vienna next March.

Brewer, 27, a seven - year veteran with the Leafs who quit the team a year ago, announced Tuesday he is seeking reinstatement as an amateur so he can join the Canadian team as a player and assistant manager and coach.

Since then, George (Punch) Imlach, manager - coach of the Leafs, said Brewer is under suspension.

Brewer has been given permission by the International Ice Hockey Federation to play in Vienna if he can get his reinstatement from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. But under an agreement with the NHL, the CAHA cannot reinstate Brewer unless he is waived by all other professional clubs.

LYING IN WAIT

New York Rangers say they will claim Brewer if he's put on waivers and Imlach said nothing.

Wednesday he won't give them the chance.

The anticipate being able to prove to a court's satisfaction that Carl is free of any shackles the NHL thinks it has on him," said Eagleson, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto Lakeshore.

"Once we prove to the CAHA he's free of any NHL obligations, the CAHA will have to decide if they will acknowledge their agreement with the NHL in spite of the fact that Brewer is a free agent."

The subsequent action will be taken within 10 days. Meanwhile, we're going to write to Clarence Campbell (NHL president) asking him to put Carl on the voluntary retired list."

An arbitration at the University of Toronto, Brewer is on the indefinite inactive list. But a suspension imposed by the Leafs after Brewer walked out of training camp last year is still in effect.

Part of the NHL-CAHA agreement is that the CAHA must honor each other's suspensions.

"Two important businessmen in Canada have indicated they'll look after the cost of any legal action because they think the CAHA is using a national team is an important one," Eagleson said.

He would not identify the men.

MP Hits NHL

'Free Men Not Slaves'

OTTAWA (CP) — Ralph B. Cowan (L—York-Humber) said in the Canada's national team ban both NHL president Clarence Campbell and Leaf coach Punch Imlach say this can't be worked out.

They said Brewer must first be waived out of the NHL and that New York Rangers have indicated they'll claim Brewer if he's placed on waivers.

HAS FOUR LIVES, CLAIMS

Mr. Cowan noted that the NHL is made up of two Canadian and four American clubs. Was the league saying that the four-U.S. teams could block a Canadian player from being available to play for Canada in international competition?

What would happen if a Canadian lawyer was told he must work with one law firm or else not be allowed to practise his profession?

Mr. Cowan drew Mr. Pennell's attention to a case in United States where a court ruled that a player had the right to negotiate with any club he wished to for, The same right should extend to Canadian hockey players.

Mr. Pennell told Mr. Cowan had raised a matter "of considerable interest."

Unfortunately, he said, professional hockey does not come under the Combines Investigation Act.

But a study of service industries, including pro hockey, now was being undertaken by the combines branch of the justice department.

Was 91 Years Of Age

Sports Dean Billy Hewitt Dies

TORONTO (CP) — W. A. (Billy) Hewitt, who quietly promoted Canadian sports over five decades, died in hospital Thursday night.

Hewitt, 91, was the father and grandfather respectively of national - hockey sportscasters Foster and Bill Hewitt. But although the name Hewitt is more readily recognized through his son and grandson, Billy was the driving force behind many big league sports in Canada.

He was registrar-treasurer of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association continuously from 1921 to 1934, secretary of the Ontario Hockey Association for 26 years from 1923, steward of the Canadian Incorporated Racing Association for 31 years, and president of the Canadian Rugby Union from 1913 to 1919.

These were but a few of his sports affiliations, however.

He had played a large part in forming the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union after 1953, was sports editor of the Toronto Star for 31 years after working as sports editor with the Montreal Herald during its 1898-1900 and held the post of director of attractions manager for Maple Leaf Gardens.

BORN IN COBOURG

William Arthur Hewitt was born in Cobourg, Ont., May 15, 1875. He moved with his family to Toronto at the age of four and as a youth worked as copy boy for the Toronto Evening News. Later he became a reporter with The News and eventually sports editor.

Hewitt, along with Claude Robinson, took the initial steps in the formation of the CAHA in 1914 and was secretary-treasurer of the association from 1912 until his appointment as registrar - treasurer 10 years later.

Hockey was his first love and he seldom missed a game at Maple Leaf Gardens after 1931.

"I think his ability to come back from the depths stemmed from his great ambition and his love of hockey," his son Foster said.

"If think the beginning of his undoing was when he collapsed in Czechoslovakia in 1961 although he made a remarkable recovery."

HURT IN ACCIDENT

His wife died in a car accident in Pennsylvania in 1952 and Hewitt spent weeks in hospital recovering from multiple injuries, including two broken arms.

"He never got over that," Foster said. "He gradually regained his normal routine, however, and he insisted on going to Czechoslovakia in 1961."

He had a rugged trip to Prague but he was getting on the plane to come home when he collapsed."

More than 500 sports personalities from Canada and the United States gathered in Toronto in 1953 to honor him at a testimonial dinner.

Despite his advanced years, he remained active until about six months ago.

The losers threatened to tie it in each of the last two innings but could not solve winning pitcher Bob Scott's slants when it counted. The losers stranded 11 runners compared to the Bobcats' four.

Drake smashed a base hit through first, stole third on consecutive passed balls and scored on Mitts' throw home after Muirhead's fly ball in the fifth.

Unknowns Big Factor In Flag Race

Proven Many Times

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sometimes a player who isn't even around the opening day carnocides can help his team win the flag.

It's happened scores of times in big league baseball. And it's liable to happen again this year as Pittsburgh, San Francisco and Los Angeles get set for one big National League pennant shoot-out.

The Pirates lead the Giants by one - half game while the Dodgers are third, 1½ games from the top. Action resumes tonight for all three with Pittsburgh's open date in each major league.

All three of the high - ranking NL contenders are home, the Pirates hosts to St. Louis, the Giants taking on Chicago Cubs and the Dodgers meeting Houston.

Remember Floyd Giebel? Bob Hasle? Dick Ott? They are only three players who came out of nowhere to help their clubs win a pennant in the final weekend.

BEAT FELLER

Giebel came up to Detroit from Buffalo of the International League the middle month and pitched the Tigers to a pennant - clinching victory over Cleveland. Hasle for Milwaukee, the Indians' great right-hander, in a brilliant duel, 2-0. Milwaukee Brewer Manager Hyzle, an outfielder, from Wichita of the American Association after the halfway mark in 1957. Hasle responded with a .408 batting mark for 41 games as the Braves won the pennant, and the World Series, too.

Nen, a big first baseman, was brought up from Atlanta of the Pacific Coast League by the LA Dodgers late in 1962. He batted .400 in seven runs in the Dodgers' last night to earn a berth in the Commercial Softball League finals.

Point Ann ousted the Hotel-men four games to two, the one tie, and now meet Stewart Warner for the league title.

The four-of-seven finals set opens in Point Anne Monday next at 6:15. Both clubs may use Alando's Park for their games over the remainder of the series. Games there will start at 6:30.

Ken Maracle let City down with four hits in a route-going performance. The Ox Point ace struck out eight and walked a pair.

Starter and loser Larry Holl was combed for six runs and five of the winners 11 hits in one and two-third innings. He walked one. Dave Flowers neither fanned nor walked a man over the remainder.

Cook's hit, an error, fly ball, G. Maracle's double and Rosebush's single showed across three Point Anne runs in the first. A walk, two errors, a hit and a fly ball upped it to $5 in the second.

Hawkins' hit and errors got the losers' pair in the third but that was as close as they came. E. Maher and Cook hit safely to keep the winners well ahead while Haverson's two-bagger and Maracle's fly ball closed the scoring at 8-1.

Glen Maracle, Eric Maher and Jim Horwood each had a double and single in a winning cause. Mike Cook singled twice, Ken Maracle doubled, Rick Rosebush and Vern Whalen added singles.

Doug Holl doubled in defeat. Moe Hawkins, Larry Potter and Tom Coolen hit singles.

But the Eaks are counting on La Bain to make up for Thomas's absence. Bain was picked up on waivers from the Stampeders with whom he'd played three seasons.

Until hurt a week ago in a game against B.C., Thomas was having his best season in four with the Eaks and was rated the key to the offence. Rival defenders were forced to guard him at the expense of their pass defence.

Also on the Eaks' injured list is defensive back Art Johnson who is out for two weeks with a shoulder injury. But linebacker Ken Perkins has been removed from the 30-day injury list and will dress for the Cleb.

Coach Jerry Williams of fourth - place Calgary may call Les Sparks as tight end to replace Herm Harrison. And there's a good chance George Reed will be recalled from Oregon State to play defensive end.

While the Stamps are hoping to spring Saturday's pro-pects, Vancouver bookies are betting on the Lions with every B.C.'s injured men on the road to recovery.

Eskimos Take On Alouettes Tonight

CALGARY (CP)—The Stampeders and British Columbia Lions, currently low two on the Western Football Conference totem pole, clash Saturday in Vancouver but Edmonton Eskimos take on the East's third-place Montreal Alouettes tonight.

In other WFC weekend action, league - leading Saskatchewan Roughriders will be in Winnipeg Sunday while Edmonton hatties Toronto Argonauts who will be trying for their first win of the season.

Tonight's game is Montreal, Saturday's Calgary - Vancouver encounter and Sunday's Edmonton - Toronto melee will be televised.

The Eskimos left halfback Jim Thomas at home Thursday when they headed East. Thomas, a leading ground gainer in the WFC, is out with a charlie horse.

Planned Merger In Danger

By BOB GREEN

NEW YORK (AP)—Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the National Football League, still is voicing cautious optimism, but there's some danger a planned merger of the NFL and American Football League won't go into effect.

"We are committed to the total plan," Rozelle said in his New York office after appearing before a Congressional subcommittee meeting in Washington Thursday.

"If any aspect of that total plan—the common draft, the host - season playoff, eventual inter-locking play, proposed expansion, any aspect — if any part of it is in danger then the total plan is in danger."

The proposed merger received a mild setback when the House antitrust subcommittee rejected Rozelle's plea for legislation to exempt the merger from anti-trust laws.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., chairman of the House judiciary committee and its antitrust subcommittee, advised Rozelle to go ahead, eventually to combine the two leagues into a single circuit. He warned, however, that no legislation exempting the merged league from antitrust laws will be enacted this year.

NO QUESTIONS, TRY

He said that neither the Justice department nor Congress has any plans of questioning the proposed merger.

Rozelle said in a prepared statement when he returned to New York:

"We are pleased to have his assurances concerning the legality of our plans for an expanded league and his advice to go forward.

"On the other hand . . . we feel hesitant because of the numerous complex commitments that must be made on a long-range basis. For this reason we will continue to urge legislation in Congress."

The two leagues announced plans for a merger earlier this year. The plans include a post-season playoff between the two champions in January of next year, pre-season exhibitions between the two leagues in 1967, a common draft and a complete reorganization — under Rozelle — in 1970.

The AFL, now composed of nine teams, came into existence in 1960. The NFL, now composed of 15 teams, has been in operation since the 1920s.

Quinte Driving, Riding Club

"Don Gallinger Night"

On June 18th Don Gallinger was one of the better harness race drivers of the district suffered severe injuries in an accidental spill at the Quinte Driving and Riding Club meet.

Gallinger was rushed to hospital where he has remained since and his condition is said to be serious.

Harness horsemen like other sportsmen have a common bond. While rivalry is keen on the track there is a spirit of camaraderie that always asserts itself in times of adversity.

It has set aside Saturday September 10th (tomorrow) as Don Gallinger Night.

A Driving Club spokesman said: "Everyone in the Gallinger family will receive one-half of the total net receipts of Saturday night's card.

In addition a collection will be taken from patrons with proceeds to the harris contributing their donations.

Club officials hope that harness racing fans will turn out in large numbers not only to enjoy a fine night of racing but by their attendance contribute to a worthy cause.

Mr. Gallinger, reports state, will be hospitalized for some time while there are possibilities of permanent injury.

The Quinte Driving and Riding Club executive is to be commended for its gesture in coming to the financial assistance of Mr. Gallinger.

Don't forget, tomorrow night is Don Gallinger Benefit Night at the Belleville Raceway. Be there and help.

A cooler donated by the security guards will be presented to the horse chosen through a "lucky draw". Names of all horses will be placed "in the hat".

Namath Versus Norton

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Joe Namath and Rick Norton, two former Southeastern Conference college quarterbacks, will square off against each other for the first time tonight before a national television audience.

But Namath, the flamboyant Football League's Rookie-of-the-Year for New York in 1965, probably won't get the starting call when the Jets launch their season against Miami Dolphins.

Coach Weeb Ewbank wouldn't commit himself when the Jets arrived here, but was expected to open with Mike Taliaferro, who stepped in after Namath was injured and directed New York to four straight exhibition victories.

The game launches the second week of the AFL season. Boston Patriots come out for the first time against San Diego Chargers and Oakland Raiders play at Houston Oilers Saturday night. Sunday, Kansas City make their seasonal debut at Buffalo Bills in another TV contest.

Green Bay Packers, defending Western Division champs, kick off the National Football League season Saturday night in a big game to be televised from Milwaukee.

The rest of the NFL openers will be played Sunday—Cleveland Browns at Washington Redskins, Los Angeles Rams at Atlanta Falcons, Chicago Bears at Detroit Lions, Minnesota Vikings at San Francisco 49ers, New York Giants at Pittsburgh Steelers and Philadelphia Eagles at St. Louis Cardinals.

Premieres of Two Series Well Liked by Viewers

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The audience which seeks to escape the problems and tensions of life via television should have tuned in on NBC Thursday night for the premieres of two series.

They could have had one of two reactions to the new Tarzan series: Hysterical laughter or simple incredulity. Tarzan, Ron Ely, the latest model of the ape man, in his loincloth and swinging on vines even when it would have been easier to walk.

All the trappings seemed pretty silly even for a children's show but there was also the plot. It seems there was this pretty, blind girl who had been living comfortably in a forest loaded with tigers, snakes and crocodiles with the help of her—get this, Daktari fans—devoted seeing-eye lion.

The lovable lion unfortunately had a bad twin and a whole tribe of natives were out to kill him. Naturally the natives confused the good lion with the bad lion, and the girl, who was loved when Tarzan arrived by vine just in time to save everything.

All this and the show was poorly acted to boot. Tarzan, inevitably, will be a hit.

SPACE SHOW FOLLOWS

This soul-searing adventure was immediately followed by Star Trek, which had the captain and medical officer of a 23rd-century space ship landing on a decaying planet for a routine health check on an earth-like archeologist and his wife who were studying the artifacts.

It turned out that she wasn't the scientist's wife at all, but a "thing" from the dying planet with enormous ability who was trying to survive.

The right of the thing may have sent little science fiction fans off to interesting dreams. But then so elders were able to switch channels to ABC to see how Danny's girl, Marlo Thomas, was making out in the premiere of her comedy series, That Girl.

The answer is that she made out very well. Miss Thomas is a very pretty young woman who handles comedy like a pro.

Hawk, the new ABC police story that followed, is a colorful, slick production with lots of sirens, fighting, running and shooting. Burt Reynolds plays the detective, a Mohawk Indian, in a tense, almost hostile manner. But the trappings were not able to conceal the familiar plot running down a madman-turned - murderer because he hated automation.

The show ought to prove a worthwhile addition to the network lineup.

Players Said Ready To Revolt

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) The release of George Conoscos from the Charleston Cubs Canadian Rockets football team was reported today as a move to prevent a possible revolt by the players, and Conoscos said:

"I don't resign—they forced me out."

Conoscos, who came here only six months ago after three years in several stations with Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League, said he now will talk with his lawyer about his unsigned two-year contract with the Rockets.

Conoscos said players would be never signed the contract with the team because the team's lawyer altered it's original agreement.

The Charleston Gazette says some of the team's board members were critical of Conoscos because only about 1,500 season tickets were sold, compared with the 4,000 - ticket goal.

Outdoor Tips And Tricks

BY BOB BLAIND

Duck hunting season opens Saturday September 24th for Quinte area hunters. Partridge season same day.

After a survey, by myself, of local hunting spots around Big Island, Muscote Bay, Hay Bay, Consecon and Bay of Quinte, the duck hunting for this year looks fair to good for Blacks and Mallards with a pretty fair outlook for Wood Duck and Teal.

The beaver pond shooters should have an excellent shoot on Blacks and Mallards. Both of these species seem to have faired well this year in spite of the low water conditions.

For marsh hunting the gunner should use decoys of the type of duck he is hunting. Most puddle ducks will decoy well to Black or Mallard decoys. A good set for the open water shooters would be at least a dozen, mixed hens and drakes set out in a clump type setting. Build a good blind, to provide cover from front, back, sides and top. After being shot at a couple of times, the sharp eyed ducks will not even come near you unless you are well hidden.

Wear clothing close to the same color as terrain you are hunting. Do not wear light colored clothing and if you seek ducks approaching you well only down, do not move about and above all do not look up at the ducks as man's face practically shines when looking down at it from a height.

Wait until a duck is in range before shooting because a wounded duck is very hard to retrieve unless you have a good dog.

Use the suggested size of shot for Ducks 4's, 2's, 6's and in some case 7½'s are all good sizes to use.

A duck hunter tries several shells of each size until he picks the shot size which patterns best his gun. Several gun shoots different even in same maters and models. A duck hunter means clean kills.

There is a gentlemans agreement that one hunter will not hunt within 100 yds. or better of another hunter. In my own experience, I have found there are not as many gentlemen in the hunting game as there used to be in the good old days. Hunting safety is a good reason to keep this agreement. Too many. hunting accidents happen because of carelessness and haste.

When hunting in the beaver ponds a couple or three decoys will suffice as in most cases you do not have to build an elaborate blind, as fallen trees will make a good place to shoot from. When you down a duck in these ponds it is well to retrieve it at once because sometimes with all the brush and trees in these ponds it is very hard to locate a downed duck.

A good shot is not finished until you retrieve your bird.

Remember 5 ducks is the daily bag limit. Do not take more than this. It could be expensive.

Pike fishing is very good in Smith's Bay, pickerel good in West Lake, bass fair to good at Weller's Bay and Point Traverse. Bad weather spoiled a good weekend in Algonquin Park but some local fishermen had good luck with the lakers despite the terrible fishing conditions.

Sunday School Lesson

Covet the Right Things

BY CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Dr. Russell H. Conwell, the late founder of Temple University in Philadelphia, was famous for his lecture, "Acres of Diamonds," based on the story of a Persian named Al Hafed who owned a farm near the river Indus, and considered wealthy and contented.

One day a Buddhist priest told him about diamonds, describing their great value. Then that night, or day, Al Hafed spent his life hunting diamonds. He was "the poor man" because he did not find diamonds. He died a frustrated, disappointed man because he failed to get what he wanted most. He could have been one of the happiest men of his day, but he let his life become unhappy and discontented because of his abnormal craving for diamonds.

Many people are in Al Hafed's shoes. They make life miserable for themselves, and often others by wanting something they cannot, or should not, have. They fail to trim their wants to what they can afford. And so they live unhappy lives because they have never learned to live with what they can afford.

LAND OF COVETERS

America is full of people like this. With luxuries and appliances that would turn an Arabian king green with envy, they still want more. Mass said, "A man's life does not consist in the abundance of his possessions." (Luke 12:15 RSV) But it would be hard to convince many of this. The only way they know to get rich is to get more and more. They have never learned that people can also get rich by wanting less and less.

The Uniform Sunday School Lessons for September 11: "The Sin of Covetousness," Exodus 20:17; I Kings 21:1-16; Luke 12:13-21, 33-34.

This does not mean that everyone must be content with his lot. It does not mean that the poor should not try to improve their condition. It does not mean that we should not seek education. All people should covet a world in which there are opportunities for everyone to share in the wealth of the world. It does not mean that people should covet wealth at the expense of the poor, or covet opportunities they are not willing to work for.

This is not just an individual matter. Nations endanger the peace of the world by coveting power. They covet the land and riches of others, and sometimes they look upon the mistress of a gun. They covet national sovereignty to such extent, they refuse to make even the sacrifices necessary to achieve international co-operation.

We have come to have a tremendous craving for it. Often, it means to want something of someone else, or more than we have. There is nothing wrong in wanting prosperity. But it is wrong in gaining prosperity by wanting property he cannot buy. There is nothing wrong to covet a wife, but it is wrong

NAPANEE BOILERS — Famous throughout the country, another Napanee automatic boiler, the 10,250th, leaves Napanee Industries yesterday. Pretty pickets carry signs saying, "Unfair . . . Napanee boilers have too much quality, too low prices."

Napanee Industries Celebrates As New Plant Addition Opened

By CLAIRE HOY

NAPANEE — The sign on the new building said, "The Plant That Shouldn't Be Built in Napanee."

But don't you believe it.

A- N. Campbell didn't when he was told that 10 years ago, as he became president of Napanee Industries.

"They said it was too far from the steel-markets," like Hamilton, Montreal and Truro. Mr. Campbell commented at the official opening of the new addition to his Napanee plant yesterday. "But we saw in this plant a chance to expand. We decided that with the spirit of the people here and with this kind of town, one could build."

So they built.

And since the present management took over in 1956, the work force there has been expanded 15 times to 450 employees and the value of output 13 times from $1,000,000 per year sales to $15,000,000 annually.

And more. New plants have been erected at the Napanee location which, with the new building opened yesterday, total 121,000 square feet.

Railroad special equipment and railway carbuilding activity were added to the expanding boiler business when Napanee Industries became a part of the Canadian Corporate Management Group then headed by Hon. Walter L. Gordon in 1956. Mr. Gordon was at the plant yesterday.

"Mr. Campbell contin u e d, "You've (i.e., the employees), shown first of all you can build the best boilers. Thanks to you again, we've proved we could build a railway car, inspite of all the skeptics. They said with our little shop, we couldn't produce the quantity needed in competse, so we built the new shop and now we can produce the quantity and quality at a competitive price."

To prove his point, the company made four special presentations to CNR and CPR officials.

Presentations were:

— The 300th CNR 70-ton flat car built at the plant, presented by R. F. Curran, vice president, Napanee Industries, to J. Bemcoe, vice president, transportation and maintenance, CNR;

— The 2,500th special equipment car, in the shape of a mechanical refrigerator car with damage-free and dunnage-free equipment, to R. A. Racine, vice president, Napanee Industries to L. S. McGregor, chief of motive power and car equipment, CNR;

— The 800th new car and first special steel coil car ever built in Canada, presented to C P S and steel industry by C. W. Smith, president, Internatio n a l Equipment Co., (an affiliated company with Napanee Industries), to C. S. Doupe, general freight traffic manager, CPR, and H. W. Hayward, chief of motive power and rolling stock, CPR.

— The 10,250th Napanee Automatic Boiler was delivered by company officials.

A crowd of 850 persons, mostly employees and their families, attended the morning ceremonies. About 200 railway and government officials and dignitaries viewed the afternoon proceedings.

The Hon. E. J. Benson, Minister of National Revenue, officially opened the new plant at an afternoon ribbon-cutting c e r e mony.

The Minister said: "The accomplishments of Napanee Industries have been terrific over the past few years." He said he was pleased a plant of this magnitude was located in Napanee and he hopes its markets will continue to expand.

To illustrate the importance of Napanee Industries to the entire area, he commented that "largely because of this enterprise, employment in Napanee has risen to a level where it is no longer in the category of a designated area."

Former finance minister Walter Gordon assisted in the ribbon cutting, along with company president A. N. Campbell. Mr. Gordon said plants of this nature have to make a real effort to keep costs in line. He said: "Customers and prospective customers of this plant have a great responsibility to keep this plant going."

Mr. Gordon said the railroad should expand production when times are tough instead of waiting until good times. Mr. Benson later said he agreed with this policy.

Lloyd Fell, international representative, United Steelworkers of America, said: "Only through cooperation of workers and employers can we have the kind of success we see here today.

"All we want is the business . . . We'll make the products, and I think we can make them better than anyone else."

MORNING CEREMONY

In the morning prime visiting festivities, Hon. George Gomme, Minister without Portfolio, Ontario Government, did the honors, with an assist from Mr. Campbell, Prince Edward-Lennox MP Douglas Alkenbrack and Frank Thompson, Local 4812 president, United Steelworkers of America.

Mr. Gomme praised company president A. N. Campbell for the enthusiasm he shows. "To be enthusiastic a person must a c t enthusiastic," he said. "I have no fears a company headed by a man who has shown as m u c h enthusiasm as he has here today, along with such great employees will meet with anything but success."

He said he believes three factors determine whether or not industry locates in a particular community, the community itself and its spirit, industrial management and the l a b o r force.

"If you have a combination of these three working in harmony then nothing but success can be yours.

"It is the responsibility of management to provide the best possible working conditions for the labor force, and it is the responsibility of labor to give its very best towards production so that the finished product is com-

Routine Reports Given at Council Meet

DESERONTO — The meeting of the Deseronto Town Council Tuesday evening was quiet, with a routine report from the head of each committee and correspondence limited to such things as requests for live Christmas trees.

The highlight of the meeting was the address of D. W. Maddocks of Belleville, district representative of the community program division of the Department of Education, who enlightened the council and visitors on the establishment and functions of a municipal recreational committee. There was a period of discussion, with the visitors asking questions, and general agreement that such a committee would be a boon to Deseronto. In all probability a bylaw to establish it will be brought in at the next council meeting.

The need for such a committee was brought to the fore this summer when citizens, especially children, began using Centennial Park, when will not be officially opened until next year. Provision had to be made for the training and payment of supervisors, and this can be done once the town has a Municipal recreation committee.

A donation made by council to the Deseronto Fire Department will assist them in entertaining the Hastings and Prince Edward Mutual Aid.

Reeve D. E. Armitage gave a report on the situation as it now stands regarding the establishment of a Hastings County Educational consultative committee, petitive both in style and in price."

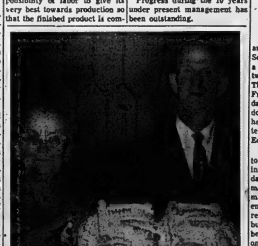
IMPORTANT TO NATION

Mr. Alkenbrack congratulated Mr. Campbell and his staff for the many achievements of the company. "This industry is of importance not only in Napanee and this district, but to the whole of Canada."

He said he had just completed a trip in the far north and in the west and, "I saw Napanee boilers in the Yukon and Napanee railway equipment all across Canada."



He expressed hopes the company's progress will continue.

Mr. Thompson said, "I like to think we will always remember this as one of the brightest days in the history of our plant.

"This day is extremely important, not only to our president and his associates, but also to those of us who work here."

The job of catering to the large crowds was handled by Patrick Raleigh, manager, D a w son's Motel, Deseronto, and his staff. Napanee Industries is not a new industry. It was found ed over 53 years ago as the Dominion Rock Drill Company to make drill bits for the building of Canadian canal systems. After years of experience with Napanee boilers, the company was one of the first in Canada to design a fully automatic boiler which has been sold as the Napanee Automatic Boiler for almost 20 years.

Progress during the 10 years under present management has been outstanding.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Aylsworth, Napanee R. R. 5, were honored on the occasion of their 55th wedding anniversary last Sunday when a surprise family dinner was held at the Voyageur Restaurant in Napanee. The family of eight children, four sons and four daughters were all present to mark the event.

Council Votes To Implement Most of Report

NAPANEE — Town Council Wednesday night approved most of a report submitted by the Police Committee, dealing with a survey of the Napanee Police Force, as prepared by the Ontario Police Commission. Members of the local Police Committee are W. R. Douglas, deputy - reeve of Lennox and Addington; Mayor Lorne A. Smart and Councillors Bert Asselstine and Ernest Marshall. Town Council had requested the survey by the Ontario Police Commission in June.

Included in the list of recommendations made by the OPC, was one that suggested a Board of Commissioners of Police be adopted as the Police Governing Authority Body for the Town of Napanee. This recommendation was not approved by council at Wednesday's meeting. Council estimated that to carry out all the recommendations made by the OPC, would cost about $30,000 per year.

Most of the recommendations approved deal with the handling of police department paper work, and the keeping of records. Proper police accomodation is another item included in the report.

At a Tuesday night meeting, council accepted the resignation of Police Chief Harry Benn and at the same time approved his appointment as a First Class Constable. He had been Chief Constable at Napanee for 16 years.

Urgent Need For Help In Canneries

NAPANEE — The need for workers to help in the canneries and in the harvesting of tomatoes is urgent, T. W. Cox of the National Employment Service in Napanee reports. The work will be only temporary, but there is a shortage of such workers now. He urges anyone who is interested in crop harvesting to 'phone the office.

The Napanee National Employment Office placed 100 people in job openings in August, Mr. Cox states, but adds that there were also 100 applicants registered for work, 100 of them unskilled. This was a drop from the July when there were 234, but is an increase from last year when 162 were registered.

"With the students returning to school and the recall of General Motors workers expected this month, plus the commencement of the high school additional hiring for this project being done through the National Employment Service, we anticipate a good drop(s) in the number of men unemployed during September," said Mr. Cox.

At the end of August 108 females were registered for employment, 11 fewer than at the end of July, and only seven more than the 96 registered a year earlier. Not much change is anticipated in this situation, as most openings are for short-term employment, such as tomato picking.

H.S. Attendance Still Not in Settled State

NAPANEE — The attendance of the Napanee District Secondary School is still not in a settled state, fluctuating between 1256 Monday and 1340 Thursday. Principal Charles Frood states that by next Tuesday things will be better settled down more, and at that time he will have a full report on attendance ready for the Board of Education meeting.

The present urgent need is to find room for 1,240 pupils in a school made to accommodate 1,080. Four more or less makeshift classrooms have been made ready, but these are not enough. There is little hope for relief in the new wing, as building proper has not even begun. The preparatory going on has already made it inconvenient to use the side entrances, and this adds to the confusion.

The school is embarking on a new venture this year, with a timetable which has a six-day cycle, instead of the usual five-day. The first day was Monday this week, and will be Thursday next week. Many schools are trying out this system.

Recess Decision Draws Fire Of Opposition

OTTAWA (CP)—The government was criticized Friday by opposition MPs for adjourning the Commons until Oct. 5 without coping with the inflationary dangers outlined a day earlier by Finance Minister Sharp.

Mr. Sharp, under fire from some of his own members for postponing the national medical insurance program a year, sat calmly at his Commons desk while several MPs hurled colorful and uncomplimentary adjectives at him about the decision to recess.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker accused the government of a "gross perversion" of its responsibilities by delaying action on inflation and rising living costs.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said the government is bankrupt of any program to deal with the problem and threatened to withhold the required unanimous consent to move the adjournment motion unless the government admitted this.

His withdrew his threat after George McIlraith, the government House leader, said the Commons would sit for a short next week for a conference of the International Labor Organization and later, a Commonwealth parliamentary conference.

Before he sat down, Mr. Howard said he is sure ILO delegates would not be inconvenienced if they were asked to sit in the Senate chamber.

"... Good heavens, we have been carrying on the business of this country for the last 96 years without a prime minister. I do not see why we should worry about his presence in London."

The Commons sat for two hours Friday and, as it dealt with legislation to end a national railways strike and a bill to place the transportation under a single super-board.

It was called back from a summer recess that began in early July, and now will recess until the originally - scheduled resumption date of Oct. 5.

The 14-day inflation debate began late Thursday with Mr. Sharp's anti-inflation speech that included a one-year postponement of a start on medical insurance to July 1, 1968.

Mr. Sharp also announced deferment of other government spending programs and indicated a baby budget will be brought down after Parliament resumes.

Mr. Sharp also promised long restraints in the rate of increase" for federal spending on research.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimated that federal spending in all fields of research in 1965-66 totalled $365,000,000.

The dollar difference this restraint will make is difficult to determine.

Modest Curbs Placed

By DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP) — In dollars and cents, the anti-inflationary moves announced Thursday by Finance Minister Sharp will place only modest curbs on over - all federal government spending.

He mentioned eight specific decisions apart from a tax increase as measures to keep down spending. But he promised only that Ottawa would "moderate the rate of increase" in its programs.

In the major area of the defence budget, which must absorb a record pay raise in October, there was no anticipation of actual reductions.

Defence Department spending estimates for 1966-67 are $5,572,000,000. The armed forces pay increase expected next month will require a supplementary multi-million dollar appropriation by Parliament.

BUILDING TO BE CUT

Further restrictions were promised in the government's construction programs. Mr. Sharp promised in his budget speech March 29 that $20,000,000 would be knocked from construction plans totalling $840,000,000, but he did not indicate Thursday how far the government would or could go in making more slowdowns and postponements.

Deferment of one year in the starting date of the government's medical care program to July 1, 1968, would involve little saving.

Only Saskatchewan would appear ready to benefit by next July 1 and the federal share of per-capita payments towards its plan would have totalled about $6,350,000 in 1967-68.

Mr. Sharp said provincial plans for a greater share of tax revenues will be turned down this year. But he has little precedent for making any reduction in the existing over-all level of payments.

One specific reduction will occur in forestry spending, which shared-cost programs with the provinces will be allowed to expire next March, saving $15,500,000.

Mr. Sharp also mentioned the cancellation of the winter house building bonuses, which had cost Ottawa about $16,000,000 a year for the last three years.

Mr. Sharp also promised

Father of Four Killed In Crash Near Napanee

NAPANEE — Marshall Sweet, 29, of R. R. 3, Napanee on the Hamburg Road, the father of four children, was instantly killed yesterday about 6.30 when the car he was driving was hit by a car driven by Calvin Campbell 43, of Dorland.

Melvin Sweet, 21, a brother of the victim, was a passenger, in the car. He was taken to Lennox and Addington County General Hospital with minor injuries and was released late last night.

Campbell and his passenger, Robert Lewis, 21, also of Dorland, were admitted to hospital with severe injuries. Lewis was transferred to Kingston General Hospital at 3 a.m. today. He is reported to be in poor condition. No information has been released as to the nature of the injuries sustainld by Campbell and Lewis.

Reports indicate Campbell's car went out of control on a curve on the Hamburg Road about one and one - half miles south of Napanee, Dr. E. B. Paul was called to the scene. Mr. Sweet's body was removed to the Wartman Funeral Home by that company's ambulance. Also at the scene was Tierney's Ambulance.

Railways Estimate New Bill To Cost $2,667,000 a Year

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's two major railways, CNR and CPR, told the government - sponsored transportation bill, which will wipe out their present municipal tax immunity, will cost them $1,000,000 and $1,667,000 a year more respectively.

An 1880 agreement gave the CPR perpetual exemption from municipal taxes on its main lines passing through then federal government-owned lands—the three prairie provinces and the territories.

The same exemption was later applied to and extended by the state-owned CNR.

The bill, which the railways say is unfair because it will discriminate against them, was introduced immediately to proclaim the act and the cabinet would proclaim a state of emergency under the act very quickly," Mr. Thatcher said.

Union leaders were told the final offer was "not negotiable" but it was rejected by the union which reduced its original de-

United Church Will Vote For Union With Anglicans

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—The general council of the United Church of Canada today might get a redrafted church resolution on the question of union with the Anglican Church, but it was not expected before Tuesday.

A resolution on the acceptance of principles of union was sent to a special committee, which met last night. Its report to the council failed to agree on major points.

Moderator Rt. Rev. W. C. Lockhart, who appointed the special committee, said he felt important commissioners were in favor of union.

During a heated two-hour debate Friday most commissioners who spoke were pro-union but had some reservations. They were concerned with how far the United Church should commit itself at this time.

The Principles of Union which the council is asked to endorse is a report of a joint Anglican-United study on union which the Anglican Church approved last year.

Reds Launching Widespread Election-Eve Terror in Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — Communist agents launched widespread election - eve attacks on Saigon today, bombing a train and scattering grenades.

With the polls scheduled to open in less than 24 hours, the Viet Cong appeared to be bolstering its promised anti-election campaign to a peak.

On the eve of the U.S. command announced that three late-model Communist MiG-21s swirled in on a flight of air force F-105 Thunderchiefs over the north Friday. The 15 planes took evasive action and contact with the MiGs was broken, a spokesman said.

The action took place about 50 miles northeast of North Viet Nam's major port of Haiphong the spokesman said.

Further north, between Haiphong and the Chinese border, navy planes from the U.S. Constellation sank one North Vietnamese patrol boat and damaged another.

U.S. marines clashed with the enemy 25 miles south of Da Nang and killed 11 of them, spokesmen said. Marine casualties were said to have been light.

As the election violence mounted, Saigon was ringed by artillery fire and air strikes Friday night as Viet Cong guerrillas operated on the city limits. This morning the capital was awakened by a train bombing and a quick burst of grenade attacks. At least 12 persons were wounded and one killed.

One grenade exploded in a schoolhouse voting booth and another was aimed at election workers.

The train was raked by machine - gun fire and derailed by a bomb just outside the city limits on the route to Bien Hoa. Six persons were injured and six cars of the 20-car train were damaged.

Gemini 11 Postponed Till Monday

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Gemini 11 rendezvous and spacewalk mission was postponed again today, this time because of problems with an automatic pilot system in Gemini 10's Atlas - Agena target rocket.

A new attempt will be made Monday morning.

The launching was called off at 9:26 a.m. EDT as the astronauts, Navy Cmdr. Charles Conrad Jr. and Navy Lt.-Cmdr. Richard F. Gordon Jr., were in their ready room quarters about 1,200 feet from their launch pad.

They were on the verge of entering their spacecraft just an hour before when the trouble developed in the Atlas booster rocket on launch pad 19; 9,000 feet away from the Gemini launch pad.

They took the elevator down to the ground level and returned to their quarters in a white van while engineers wrestled with the problem in the Atlas autopilot.

As they walked to the truck carrying them to the suit-up trailer, both astronauts had wry faces.

"Tomorrow" Conrad, normally a chatty man, said.

Gordon, right 5 in a 6 1 hin, commented: "Well, we got a little farther today." This was the first time the astronauts had been still asleep when trouble developed, forcing a 24-hour delay.

STYMIED TWICE

It was the second straight day the astronauts had been stymied in their effort to take off on an 11-orbit, three-day space adventure, during which they were to attempt man's fastest rendezvous and docking with an Agena satellite.

The launching was postponed Friday when a tiny leak developed in the fuel system of the Titan II. This occurred in the Titan II, the countdown clicked while the astronauts were still sleeping.

The leak is repaired with a gooey substance called "water glass" which has a penny.

The problem was never grasped up as the countdown on the Atlas booster progressed and at 23 minutes, aiming for a 9:48 a.m. liftoff.

Then suspicion on Gemini 11's Titan II at that time stood at 120 minutes.

Launch control centre said the problem showed up when instruments in the blockhouse indicated that the Atlas's main engines was not swiveling as planned during a last-minute check of the engine and control system.

The guidance system, located in the nose, building on the Atlas sends radio signals to the autopilot, which then feeds them to the engines.

During the flight, this system

British Govt. May Accept Pearson Compromise Formula

LONDON . (CP)—The British cabinet today was reported considering yielding in part to Commonwealth demands for tougher action against the rebel white-minority regime in Rhodesia.

A morning session between Prime Minister Wilson and his ministers stretched into the afternoon amid speculation that Wilson might accept a compromise formula for dealing with Rhodesia put forward by Canada's Prime Minister Pearson.

At the same time, other delegations at the conference of Commonwealth heads of government used a weekend adjournment to seek a consensus on a middle way. The Africans demand United Nations mandatory sanctions while the British aim is that a UN-ordered economic embargo could cause wider repercussions, such as the withdrawal of South Africa from UN membership.

Pearson has proposed compromise answers to demands supported by all but a few of the 22 Commonwealth delegations for effective mandatory sanctions and a clear British assurance of Africas majority rule before legal independence is granted to Rhodesia.

The Canadian leader has been supported in his Hedlating role by varying degrees by India, Kenya, Malaysia and Uganda.

Pearson suggested selective mandatory sanctions against Rhodesia's oil imports and its exports of pig iron, asbestos and chrome.

Rhodesia has been receiving oil through South Africa and its chief exports go principally to Britain through to the United States, Germany, France, Belgium, Japan — despite the voluntary sanctions called for after Ian Smith's white supremacist government declared independence last November.

On Rhodesia's constitutional future, Pearson suggested British clarification of its stand that any settlement must be acceptable to the Rhodesian people as a whole, perhaps with promises of democratic measures and provision for testing opinion among the African majority as well as the white minority.

Some British government officials believed today that the Pearson proposals could be acceptable to the British and Wilson might give way in his scheduled response Monday in the Commonwealth conference because of the pressure put by delegates since the conference opened last Sunday.

But the British have argued that mandatory sanctions would likely be resisted by South Africa and could lead to a split in the Commonwealth.

In the report of the Commonwealth sanctions committee set up last January, Britain also made clear that a compulsory oil embargo would be a costly venture demanding a naval blockade of 2,000 miles of African coast.

Defence Budget Going Up

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—The defence department under - spent its 1965-66 budget of $1,561,000,000 by $15,000,000.

The taxpayer won't be so lucky this year.

Officials say the 1966-67 defence budget of $1,572,000,000 wouldn't have been all used up either except for one thing—the pay increase for the armed forces expected next month.

This pay increase will require a supplementary appropriation by Parliament, probably around $25,000,000. This will bring the defence outlay in this fiscal year whieh began April 1, 1966, to nearly $1,600,000,000 compared with $1,548,000,000 in 1965-66.

The pay increase will run in much more than $25,000,000. But savings in other fields will limit the supplementary appropriation required to that amount.

Officials said Friday spectacular savings have been made through armed forces integration since the big defence building of 1951-52 brought on by the Berlin crisis of that period.

SAVED MONEY

They said that without integration the defence department now would be requiring an extra $150,000,000 annually.

Since 1952, the number of servicemen has dropped by 20-, 000 to 105,000 and the number of civilian personnel in the defence department by 7,000 to 46,000.

This alone represents a saving of about $125,000,000. Other savings have been made in administration and in the closing of some defence installations.

However, pay increases and rising costs for weapons and equipment have tended to wipe out most of these savings. For instance, despite the loss of the 7,000 civilian personnel, the civ-

Increase Milk Return

By FRITS ROOS

OTTAWA (CP)—Ontario farmers' demands for a manufacturing milk return of $4.35 a hundredweight were partially met Friday when J. J. Greene, agriculture minister, announced an immediate eight-cent increase to $3.35 in the base price.

The increase, to be passed on to the consumer through a two-cent raise in the minimum selling price of butter, brings to $4.06 the maximum a the farm return for his 3.5-per-cent milk.

The previous return was $4. 06 on a 3.5-per-cent butterfat subsidy. The base price was raised to $3.25 last April 1, shortly after the announcement of the federal government's new dairy policy.

The increase also promised a further 3.5-per-cent increase in the base price this current dairy year, provided the Quebec and Ontario governments promise the raise will be fully passed on to farmers.

At present, only Ontario, through its marketing board, could implement this.

SETS CONDITIONS

A second condition for the $3.5-per-cent increase was equalization of the present difference in milk subsidies between Ontario and Quebec. Farmers in Quebec receive an additional provincial subsidy of 17.5 cents a hundredweight in the summer and 40 cents in the winter.

No such provincial subsidies exist in Ontario where the farmers and government officials have claimed the Quebec subsidies distort the free flow of milk between the two provinces.

Mr. Greene said removal of the provincial differences was in the interest of a sound national policy. Equalization could be achieved by either Quebec removing its subsidy or by Ontario launching a provincial subsidy of the federal level.

He made his announcement at

the end of an open meeting attended by several provincial agriculture ministers, delegations of farmers and their organizations and representatives of dairy processors' organizations.

Ontario Agriculture Minister Stewart, who in July told angry dairy farmers massed at Queen's Park that his province was a federal responsibility, reiterated his earlier view that Ottawa should up the base price with 25 cents to $5.50.

"Never before has the Canadian consumer been asked to pay for the increase," said Mr. Stewart, who spoke before Mr. Greene's announcement.

He said farm costs again would increase dramatically in view of recent 30-per-cent wage settlements for dock and seaway workers, new wheat sales to Russia resulting in higher feed prices, and the recent provincial rail strike settlement.

GETS QUEBEC'S SUPPORT

Mr. Stewart was backed by Agriculture Minister Vincent of Quebec who promised he will propose a change in his province's milk subsidies—but only after Ottawa would come up with a 25-cent base price increase.

Mr. Vincent said the subsidy could not be removed immediately because it was law. He would propose removal of the $10,000,000 total Quebec milk subsidy into modernization of dairy plants, reconstruction of dairy farms, reconstruction of the cheese-producing industry and subsidies for dairy farmers whose transport costs were intolerably high.

Representatives of Ontario and Quebec farmers' organizations asked Mr. Greene for a better deal for the cream producers who say price deductions for the skim milk they use themselves are unfair.

Mr. Greene said that paying more to cream producers would only increase inefficiency instead of cutting it down.

SAYS ITS ARDA'S JOB

Government aid in this field appeared much more a task for the federal-provincial Agricultural Rural Development Agency, he said.

He warned that blanket increases would only result in driving consumers to cheaper substitutes.

Ontario agricultural spokesmen welcomed announcement of the better price increase, but warned that the higher subsidy must go to the producer and not the processor.

"Most of this (milk subsidy) was taken by the processor," said Harold Martin, secretary-manager of the Ontario Milk Producers' Marketing Board.

James V. Ross, director of information for the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, said steps should be taken to see that the increased subsidy not go to the processor "as has happened so many times in the past."

ISN'T ENOUGH

FORT WILLIAM (CP)—Dele gates to a public housing conference were told Friday that low-rental housing is not always enough to help poor families climb out of trouble. Georgina Gibbons of the Catholic Children's Aid Society in Hamilton said money spent on public housing is often wasted unless the families are also receive such services as day nurseries, homemaker services and budget counselling.

Sidney Street Has Become Through Street

With the installation of new curbs and traffic island completed, Sidney Street at the intersection of Moira Street, West, has become a through street instead of Moira Street.

The by-law approving the change-over making Sidney Street the through artery was passed last year by city council.

The reason for the change was that a great percentage of cars and trucks crossing the intersection is now going north and south on Sidney Street.

Ottawa at A Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

FRIDAY, Sept. 9, 1966

The Commons adjourned to Wednesday, Oct. 5, over the objections of some opposition members after a 14-day debate on inflation.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, saying inflation is picking the pockets of all Canadians, challenged the government to keep Parliament in session to fight it.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) threatened to force a Monday sitting but relented, saying the government was bankrupt of program or legislation.

Labor Minister Nicholson announced extension of unemployment insurance to farm and horticulture workers, effective next April 1.

Agriculture Minister Greene announced a two - cent increase to 50 cents a pound in the government's support price for butter — meaning also an increase of eight cents a hundredweight for manufacturing milk.

Defence Minister Hellyer said the identities of army regiments will be retained in the "unit level" in the planned unified defence force.

Driver Escapes Injury, Car Hit by Train

A Belleville man, William D. Hickson of 19 Stanley Park Drive, saw his car damaged to the extent of approximately $1,000 early Friday morning when it was struck by a CNR train at the Airport Road east of the city on the second concession of Thurlow.

Mr. Hickson had turned onto the Airport Road and as his car went over the tracks his wheels dropped off the crossing planks stalling the vehicle.

He left his 1963 foreign model car to get someone to help push it off the track and when he returned found it had been struck by the train. The damaged vehicle was pushed 200 feet down the track.

Children Get Awards for Growing Plants

The Belleville Junior Horticultural Society held its annual bush marrow and sunflower growing contest Thursday at the first fall meeting of the group.

Donna MacGowan, 11, won first prize in the marrow contest, with Donna Boyce, 9, finishing second. In the sunflower group, Cathy Smith, 10, was first, and Jim Watson, 9, was second.

The contest was sponsored by the Belleville Horticultural Society who gave the children sunflower seeds and bush marrow seeds to grow early in the spring.

The winning exhibits will be forwarded to Toronto and entered in the Ontario competitions at the Royal Winter Fair. Judging was under the direction of Capt. J. Buchanan and Mrs. William Yates, both directors of the Senior Society.

The report, which was unanimously accepted, seeks a five-per-cent annual increase in the budget. It said the United Church is spending less than ten cent per member per day on overseas missions.

Dr. Wilfred Butcher, general secretary of the Canadian Council of Churches, told the council that the burden of Christian guilt lies in the superior attitude towards other religions, particularly Judaism.

Dr. Butcher, a Presbyterian minister from Toronto, said Christians claim to believe in love but they say they can't love towards unity, yet they act otherwise.

A general council of the church turned down an attempt to get financial assistance for Russell Horsburgh, former United Church minister from Chatham, Ont., who was convicted of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

A resolution before the council asked for a grant of up to $5,000 for Mr. Horsburgh, who was dismissed from the ministry following his conviction in 1964.

The financial committee quashed the resolution saying that financial assistance had already been given and no more is available.

Mr. Horsburgh has appealed his conviction to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Ontario Will Demand More From Ottawa

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario will demand more money at next week's federal-provincial tax talks despite the government of medicare, says Premier Robarts.

"We want more help from the federal government, and we will put this position at the conference," he said in an interview.

"I thought this was a matter to be discussed at the conference, but apparently the decision has been made before we get there."

Mr. Robarts said the postponement of medicare will enable Ontario to continue its own plan for another year.

Takeover Bid By Bell Co. Is Opposed

BY IAN MacKENZIE

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia government declared open war Friday on a bid by Bell Telephone Co. of Canada to take over Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Co. Ltd., but the final battle could be fought in the Supreme Court of Canada.

Progressive Conservative Premier Robert Stanfield introduced a bill at a special session of the legislature to limit the voting powers of shareholders in M. T. and T. and thus prevent any individual, group or company from gaining control of the Nova Scotia utility.

The bill, in the form of an amendment to a 1930 act incorporating Maritime, received second reading after little more than two hours debate and then went to the private and local bills committee for further study.

The committee was to meet again this morning and then return the bill to the house for third and final reading.

The legislation would limit a person, group or company with more than 1,000 shares in Maritime to 1,000 votes at meetings of the utility. Proxy voting would not be affected.

Dead Premier Described as 'Man of God'

PRETORIA (Reuters) — The orator at the state funeral for assassinated South African Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd declared today: "We have lost the man but thank God we have not lost the message of his life."

Rev. J. S. Gericke, moderator of the synod of three dutch Reformed churches in South Africa and a close personal friend of Verwoerd, described the dead prime minister as "a man of God."

"No attack from outside . . . no assassination can destroy the message of the testimony and the action of a man of God," he said. "Even death cannot detract from it—it becomes the passion of generation after generation.

"Dr. Verwoerd's legacy is a determined nation," he said. "His people will face the world and the future with the same determination and good will which were the guiding principles of his life and work."

For this reason, defence department plans a 1967-68 defence budget of about $1,600,000,000, an increase of $220,000,000 over the 1965-66 defence expenditures.

HOLDING COST DOWN

Finance Minister Sharp said Thursday: "We are seeking to hold down the size of the defence budget despite the inescapable increases in pay and in the prices of what we have to buy."

For this reason the armed forces pay increase probably won't be as large as the 14 per cent previously predicted.

In the current fiscal year, Finance Minister Sharp has aimed at increasing the weapons allotment to 37.5 per cent of the defence budget company, with about 23 per cent in 1965-66.

Officials said his objective of raising ofthis percentage still further to 20 or 25 per cent is unlikely to be realized until the present inflationary period is ended.

EMPLOYMENT NEWS

By J. R. STAVELEY,
NES Employer Relations Officer

The activities of the local National Employment Service Office during the first two weeks of September were influenced by two factors:

Due to the recent railway strike a substantial number of normally employed persons registered for temporary work. Conversely, during the same period other organizations in the transportation field increased their demand for additional workers. This particular trend continued during the past week.

The second factor affecting the employment field was the number of senior High School students seeking permanent work in career positions. These young people had been employed in temporary jobs while waiting for their examination results. In this connection, it is emphasized that more than ever before, higher educational and other training requirements are being demanded of the current labor force. The majority of the large Canadian business organizations are insisting on a Grade 12 educational level at least to commence at the career entry employment level. A career entry job is one requiring a sense of responsibility and ambition to undertake and complete any necessary training in order to prepare for future promotional opportunities. Other enterprises will accept those persons possessing a Grade 10 educational level.

Today many people are unemployed because they do not possess either the necessary skill or the required education which would enable them to compete successfully in the modern labor market.

COURSES AVAILABLE

Persons who are now finding it difficult to secure regular employment should give serious consideration to various Government programs which are designed to accomplish an upgrading of education and provide vocational and technical training. The Special Services Officers at the NES Office can readily be contacted for further information and counselling on these programs.

The following job opportunities represent only a few of those now available at the local National Employment Service Office.

In Trenton an attractive position is open for an experienced secretary. The requirements call for five years of experience in shorthand, typing, and dictaphone use. Locally-a partimes position is available for a saleswoman in a retail shoe store. The successful applicant must have previous experience in selling and possess preferably at least a Grade 11 education. Urgently required is an experienced cashier for regular work in a variety store.

Other female employment opportunities cover demands for baby-sitters, waitresses and short order cooks.

In the male division of the NES there are employment openings for skilled machinists, sheet metal workers, gasoline and diesel engine mechanics, and cooks.

For those young men possessing a Grade 12 or 13 education, there are career opportunities in the retail, banking and consumer credit fields.

Elsewhere across Canada there is a demand for the skilled and educated worker. Anyone at present unemployed and interested in these positions is reminded that the Canadian Manpower Mobility Program is designed to provide financial assistance under certain conditions, to Canadian workers who are unemployed in one area and find it necessary to move to other areas in Canada for employment.

If you are interested in any of these positions or seeking employment, whether locally or elsewhere, contact the National Employment Service Office, at 324 Church St. Belleville, Ont.

ANNOUNCES BUTTER PRICE INCREASE — Agriculture Minister Greene announced an increase in the minimum selling price for butter of two cents a pound providing farmers with an eight-cent base increase at $3.33 a hundredweight for their manufacturing milk. Quinte Tomato Crop Smaller But Quality High This Year

The Quinte area tomato crop is a bit short on quantity this year but extremely high on quality.

J. D. Baxter, manager of Baxter Canning Co. Ltd., Bloomfield, says the crop is progressing well. "The quality is excellent. The color of our juice is as good as I've ever seen it.

"This has been good weather for tomatoes because you don't want too much moisture when the crop is starting to mature or you get a lot of blight.

"The quantity of the crop is no more than 60 per cent of the normal pack though. One bad thing the dry weather does to the crop is to cause many blossoms to set but fail off, rather than form into a fruit."

J. G. Sprague, manager of Sprague and Son Canning Factory, agreed that the quality of the crop was good but expressed some concern over the size of the crop.

"Some are picking their third crops now," he said, "and aren't getting as many tomatoes as they got on the second pickings. That's what concerns me. Usually the third and fourth pickings are the best, but because of that dry spell in early August, a lot of blooms were lost and the third and fourth pickings will probably be small."

A Massassaga farmer said he normally gets 500 bushels an acre but this year he won't get over 250 bushels. He said the quality is high because there is little instance of blight.

There seems to be no shortage of pickers this year, perhaps because, with a 60 per cent crop, the usual number of pickers are not required.

PC's Will Pick Candidate In New Riding

The Hastings Provincial Progressive Conservatives are holding a convention Wednesday, September 14, at 8 p.m. at the Madoc Armories to name a candidate in represent the new riding in the next Provincial election.

Hon. Wilfred Spooner, Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs, will be guest speaker.

The nomination meeting will be the first one in Ontario in a riding affected by redistribution legislation passed at the last session.

The sitting member for Hastings East, Clark Rollins, has announced he will stand for nomination.

is used to steer the rocket into the proper orbital path.

Apparently some defect in the autopilot prevented the signal from reaching the No. 2 Atlas engine. The autopilot is located in a canister on the side of the Atlas.

It was one engine of a similar Atlas that swivelled widely in flight on the first attempt to launch the Gemini 9 mission in May, thus causing the Agena and Atlas to plunge crazily into the sea.

Officials at first thought they might be able to replace the autopilot in time for a launching today, but evaluation of the problem indicated it would require two to three hours to do this and an additional two hours to launch the rockets.

On this timetable, they said, the planned first - orbit rendezvous would not be satisfactory.

Conrad and Gordon planned to pursue the Agena across the sky, catching it in just 90 minutes. High over Texas and latching onto it 10 minutes later.

For the rendezvous, the astronauts require at least seven minutes of darkness so they can see guiding lights on the Agena. The actual docking would occur in daylight.

A successful docking would begin three adventurous days in space, in which the astronauts would push man's exploration in this strange world of space to new horizons.

County Council Will Hold One-day Session

Hastings county council will hold what if hoped will be but a one day session in September this year. The date is set for Tuesday, the 20th.

The reason for the expected one day session is that there is only a limited agenda to go before councillors, the main item to be ratification of the contract for the new addition to Hastings Manor.

In addition there will be several road by-laws to deal with.

It is expected that in October council will again meet to receive the consultants' report on job evaluation.

Workers

mand for an eight-per-cent increase to six and one-half per cent, the premier said.

"We gave the union leaders to 9 a.m. Monday in order that they could put the final government offer before their membership."

No further meetings were to be held with the union during the weekend unless the union indicated a willingness "to accept our final statement," he said.

Under the act a cabinet proclamation of a state of emergency would require the union to get its workers back on the job within 10 days or face decertification.

Union and management have five days from the date of proclamation of emergency to name one member each to an arbitration board. If the two members failed to name a chairman—a judge of any provincial court—the cabinet has power to appoint a chairman. The board's decision would be binding without appeal.

Within 30 days of the board's decision, union and management would have to sign a collective bargaining agreement incorporating the board's decision.

Recess

consider this resolution and a steering committee meeting is scheduled for Wednesday to set a date for the start of hearings.

Mr. Diefenbaker urged the government to keep the Commons in session immediately to consider legislation and a baby budget.

"We say stay here, let us act," he said. "If you have any policies, act."

Charging that "inflation has picked the pockets of all Canadians", the Opposition Leader called for a thorough investigation of price-fixing and a combination price spread study "unjust and unfair profiteering."

He said the real reason medical insurance legislation was postponed was a "power struggle in the cabinet"over the inflation.

Reports Thursday and Friday said that Health Minister MacEachen was unhappy about the postponement and was considering his position in the cabinet.

George Hees (PC—Northumberland), former Conservative trade minister, said Mr. Sharp's measures are "negative, sterile and out-of-date."

He said the government should boost productivity by expanding its technical training program, attracting more immigrants and bringing in fiscal incentives and loans with reasonable interest rates to help industry expand.

John Matheson, parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Pearson, defended Mr. Sharp as having the "courage and guts" to take action to curb inflation.

He said the opposition had pressed for greater spending but "pumping more money into the situation will simply blow the top off."

Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) said the finance minister so far has offered a "punish-the-poor" policy to handle inflation.

She said when the chips are down the government looks out for the interests of financial and corporate institutions.

Interim Budget

"All Canadians will suffer if a continued boom should lead to bust."

There, briefly, is the essence of Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp's interim or "baby" budget. Mr. Sharp made the comment while announcing curbs on the country's swift rate of economic growth and spending.

The controls involve the raising of taxes amounting to some $340 million in a full year, postponement for a year (until July 1, 1968) of the national medicare program, which when implemented will cost the government about $340 million annually, and deferment or abandonment of other federal spending programs.

The additional taxes will be needed to cover higher pay for the armed services and higher pensions and allowances for veterans, as well as a guaranteed minimum income of $105 a month for old age pensioners.

At the same time Ottawa plans to set an example to the nation by applying the brakes to its own spending programs. Postponement of medicare is one such measure. Another is the plan to provide $10,000,000 worth of scholarships for university students. The latter measure is an example of how an election commitment must be set aside, at least temporarily, in the national interest. Prime Minister Pearson had promised that the scheme would be in operation this year, providing about 10,000 scholarships worth up to $1,000 a year each for four years.

Mr. Sharp's measures are a sequel to the long-felt need to reduce a booming economy to more manageable proportions. As the minister explained, it was better to proceed with social reform (presumably a reference to the costly medicare program) only when the country could afford it than to produce "excesses" by trying to do everything at once.

From Washington, significantly, comes word of similar trends in the economy. President Johnson is quoted as saying it is time for the booming U.S. economy to be cooled off. He has asked Congress to suspend temporarily special tax benefits for businessmen building plants and buying new machinery.

Fall Activities

Soon Belleville will be moving into its program of fall activities, as evenings darken earlier, and Canadians at large turn from the outdoors to study and night classes and group creativity in many spheres.

This weekend for example Belleville Theatre Guild, in co-operation with the Community Programs Division of the Ontario Department of Education, and the Eastern Ontario Drama League, will hold the first of four weekend workshops on acting and stagecraft, under the leadership of John Faulkner of Toronto. Subsequently, the guild will start rehearsals for a production in December.

Next month the popular Kiwanis travel series gets under way. This program of films and commentaries on various countries, by world travellers Curtis Nagel and Dr. Gerald Hooper, are ideal for those of us who for one reason or another cannot make such journeys ourselves.

There will be other programs aplenty. Anyone who has seen the Rotary Club's Science and Hobby Show, for instance, knows that there is a lot of talent in Belleville which helps to shorten the long winter months until once again summer returns and we respond to the call of the outdoors.

Smallwood Again

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland has been premier of Newfoundland since the island province joined Canada in 1949.

One of the most dynamic personalities in the political life of this country, Mr. Smallwood has scored another overwhelming victory in the 18th provincial election since the province entered Confederation.

Just as we associate British Columbia with Premier Bennett and his long-enduring Social Credit government, so the Atlantic province would not seem the same without Mr. Smallwood and his Liberal administration.

Assassin's Complaint

Worried about the cost of living in South Africa, the parliamentary messenger who killed Prime Minister Verwoerd is reported to have told colleagues the government was spending too much on non-whites, while neglecting "poor whites."

This bears out the fact that, for all the evils of apartheid (racial separation), the South African government has spent large sums on clearing African slums and providing modern housing, as well as hospital and other facilities, for the African population, in the Johannesburg area of Soweto.

Sept. 10, 1966 . . .

Austria signed the treaty of St. Germain with the victorious Allied powers 47 years ago today—in 1919—and the largest land empire of Europe was formally dissolved. In fact, when the Hapsburg monarchy dedicated, Galicia, Czechoslovakia, Transylvania, Hungary, Croatia and Bosnia broke off Austria to make it an ocean. The huge Austro-Hungarian empire gave way to a republic of fewer than 8,000,000 people, forbidden ever again to join Germany except with permission from the League of Nations. But there was no national unrest in Austria until and after the destruction of democracy in 1934 by Chancellor Dollfuss in 1933.

1905—Captain John Smith was elected governor of the Virginia colony at Jamestown.

Fifty years ago today—in 1916 — British and Sweden engaged over Sweden's territory of mail bound for Russia; British forces from Salonika crossed the Struma River; Russians recaptured Dobric and Dobacci on the Bulgarian frontier.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1941 — Joseph Terboven, German governor of Norway, imposed martial law in Oslo and ten Norwegian labor leaders were reported executed; four RAF bombers were lost on a night raid on Turin; Russians counter - attacked at Gomel.

Sept. 11, 1966 . . .

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1916—the Allied advance on the Salonika front continued; Bulgarians were ousted from Lake Ostrovo; Belgians in German East Africa captured Tabora.

It is no secret now that Social Credit has been waging an election within an election that bids fair to bring about more changes in the provincial legislature than redistribution, the sapping opposition, or even perhaps the votes themselves, on September 12.

No fewer than seven Social members of the last legislative assembly have been put out to pasture.

The first to go was Health Minister Eric Martin, retired for health reasons from Vancouver-Burrard. Defeated at nominating elections were Stanley Carnell of Peace River South, Alex Matthew of Vancouver-Centre, J. Donald Smith of Victoria, Jacob Smith of Peace River North and Arvid Lundell of Revelstoke. And Donald Robinson, whose Liberal riding was merged with Yale, has forsaken politics for a career in carnival.

It is an upheaval unprecedented even in Social Credit's stormy history, and it has led to more than idle speculation that, it cannot be mere coincidence. What, then, is the reason for the cataclysm?

Is it respectability at last, as secret Socreds have emerged from the long grass to jump on the bandwagon? Is it grass roots rebellion symptomatic of distrust and dissention within a decadent machine?

There is another possibility, one which the two opposition leaders, Messrs. Strachan and Perrault, have raised and which they view with alarm. As they point out, it is significant that most of the ousted members were rambunctiously critical, sometimes at embarrassing or inopportune moments, of their own party and government.

The opposition leaders suspect that what has occurred is a purge of deviationists, a flexing of power so arrogant it overrides old loyalties.

Mr. Strachan claims Premier W. A. C. Bennett is ruthlessly trying to silence all opposition. Mr. Perrault fears the premier's goal is a one-party legislature.

If this is the case, all voters should take the alarm, and beware lest they become too generous on election day in aiding the consolidation of the power that purges.

Gurkhas May Be Phased Out

Milwaukee Journal

An ominous shadow looms over Britain's famed Gurkha brigade now that the confrontation between Indonesia and Malaysia has ceased.

The Gurkhas, tough mercenaries from Nepal, have provided the backbone of Britain's military presence in Malaya or Malaysia for almost 20 years. And with growing pressure upon the pound sterling, Britain must cut back on overseas expenditures. There are reports that not the brigade will almost certainly be cut from 15,000 to 10,000 men, and possibly reduced to 8,000.

The Gurkhas, dark, sticky mountain people, have written one of the most absorbing chapters in British military history. Strangely, it began during a fight-they had with each other. It was in 1814, when the Gurkhas of Nepal and the British colonial rulers of India both expanding their empires, clashed. Four British columns totalling 34,000 men attacked 12,000 Gurkhas. Three columns were soundly whipped and forced to retreat; the fourth was stopped cold. A peace and alliance pact subsequently was signed, leaving Nepal independent, with the proviso that Britain could recruit Gurkhas — Nepal's ruling Hindu caste — as mercenaries.

Ottawa Move On Inflation

Montreal Gazette

Inflation in Canada long ago ceased to creep and has been running, and running wild. The absence of any serious leadership by the Government in the face of a mounting national crisis has been dismal. But now Hon. Mitchell Sharp, as Minister of Finance, has spoken out.

Inflation has not taken this country by surprise. It has long been evident that Canadians have wanted to enjoy more than they were willing or able to produce. By exceeding what their productivity could provide, they were gaining no advantage, except the sort of advantage that one group might gain at the expense of others.

The attitude has developed that now is the time to grab, no matter what warnings economists might raise, or what the ultimate results might be, or even what the law might require. The kind of recklessness with the future, a sort of "save himself who can" rush, has to be checked and ordered.

Inflation has obviously been coming in other ways. It is not only persons or groups that have been running ahead of what the country can afford. Governments have been doing the same.

The country has been moving into the fool's paradise of believing that everything can be done at once. The idea that one thing has to be done only after another, with adequate space between to allow the means of paying for them to catch up — that idea has been discarded. Not only have all the 11 governments in Canada been spending ahead, with little care for what one another have been doing; the federal Government, which has a special responsibilities of leadership, has often set the worst example.

Yet it is no more than obvious that a country with an average increase of 4 per cent in its Gross National Product cannot support wage increases that often far outrun that allowable margin. And it was never reasonable that a country overburdened with unprovided-against policies (malformation of babies) was so disastrous, the mere term "side effects" has created instant fear.

Where the patient unduly frightens herself, I suspect, is in thinking that side effect may occur will occur. If one applied to life the statistics of side effects, we would never cross the street because we might be killed by an automobile. And at times people are hit, but usually because of carelessness on somebody's part, the driver's or the pedestrian's.

The side effects fall into much the same category. Virtually every medicine we know has some side effect if used without proper caution.

In the case of cortisone, as with many other drugs, a substantial dose may be given at first, after which the amount is reduced to a "maintenance dose" or just enough to maintain the good effects.

In this fashion the medication can be continued for a longer period. Used in short cycles, cortisone can indeed be troublesome. One common consequence is retention of sodium and hence water in the body. Once the drug is stopped the trouble stops.

Cortisone can be unsatisfactory in many ways, skin blemishes, changes in blood pressure, mental disturbances, altered metabolism, and so on. Just reading a list of what might happen becomes rather scary.

What we forget is that a great deal now depends on careful exercise, and the physician giving it knows what to look for.

The dangers of side effects arises mainly when the patient takes more than the amount prescribed, or when she doesn't see her doctor regularly and the doctor does not have a chance to detect early indications that the drug needs to be stopped.

True, cortisone cannot be taken indefinitely, but you follow the two rules — taking only the amount prescribed, and seeing your doctor at regularly intervals — you have little to fear.

It's like crossing the street. As long as you know that it might be dangerous, you take pains to be careful.

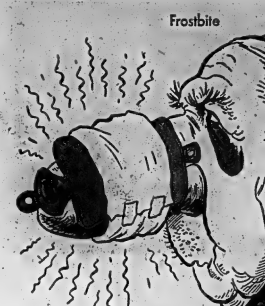
Dear Dr. Molner: Would you discuss "hormonal arthritis"? Will it leave later? — Mrs. S. L.



The term has been used, but there is some doubt as to whether it really is a separate type of arthritis. Hypetrophic or osteo-arthritis often appears at about the same time in life as menopause, but it is likely that this is coincidence rather than cause and effect.

Dear Dr. Molner: My son is 13 months old and has a ruptured navel. The doctor tells me it will go away in about four years. I keep an adhesive bandage on it. What should I do? I don't want it to harm him later. — Mrs. R. C. Jr.

These usually disappear by keeping them taped, as you are doing. There is no cause for concern under the circumstances.

Civil Service Swingers Sweat at Productivity

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Whatever is wrong — and there is plenty — don't blame the technocrats of the Federal Civil Service.

Blame the politicians, especially those who have the directive responsibility for government.

Blame even Parliament which goes along with most of it.

But exonerate the faceless senior administrators who can only carry out the government's and Parliament's orders — often reluctantly against their own better judgment.

Or that is the way it is told by an encouragingly persistent and exceedingly senior executive administrator, familiar with the public business often in terms of private and public enterprise, who has returned to Parliament Hill after a couple of eye-opening years inside the Civil Service-directed Federal departments.

The two years was a voyage of administrative discovery that the public knows often is done in a far more sense-making way Off Shm On Parliament Hill.

At least on the basis of the way so many things on The Hill have been going so frighteningly out of whack.

After years of executive experience in the hard, hustling worlds of business and politics, this administrator had ventured out into what is supposed to be the Never-Never Land of the Federal Civil Service.

ALL CHANGED

But, it was a new and different Civil Service world.

Young, dynamic, tough.

No longer the quiet sanctuary it once was, a refuge from the grinding wear and tear of the work-a-day week.

It used to be that was a nice, easy, nine-to-five breeze.

And if something didn't get done "mañana" there were always tomorrow. And tomorrow. And tomorrow.

Those days are good. The fringe benefits better. The pension best in the country.

But something's happened to that leisurely nine-to-five day. There is a sense of feeling that tomorrow's soon enough.

In the upper echelons of administration, the work day now begins around eight and ends only when the "must" jobs get properly done.

And if the work quota can't be fitted into the five-day week, there is always the weekend — Saturdays and Sundays.

Unpaid overtime at this level isn't regarded as anything above and beyond the call of routine duty.

It is expected. Normal procedure.

And if you don't like it, then you don't want any part of this new, exciting executive world where interesting and challenging things are getting done in the name of public service.

Or that is the way this new young breed of administrative mandarins says they feel.

But this new, dynamic approach to things isn't as great a switch as is the type of action-man that populates it.

RACE FOR THE TOP

And the new brand Mac-Who-Matter are all rivals.

"Tough babies," they're described, "with hard knuckles and sharp elbows," punching and pummelling and politicking for a place in the Civil Service sun.

The Members of Parliament are supposed to do a lot of bitching and moaning, back scratching and stabbing for such Party plats as Cabinet secretaries and Commons Committee chairmen.

They're softies, though, just about all of them, I don't know how to get tough compared to these new Technocrats-in-a-Hurry.

But apart from the frantic scramble for room at the administrative top, what, actually, do things go in the Federal departments?

The word is productivity.

These young Civil Service executives are being given the all clear to be Deputy Minister of National Revenue's Taxation Division for what they call productivity.

They live for ideas, projects, programs. Push is the active verb for them.

They're in demand, too, by business, industry, local government, and their salaries run up to an annual $27,000.

These hot-shots are in their late 30's and early 40's and in this company you're old at 50.

The swinger in this government action world is the activator who's got a couple of programs rolling with the department-mental deputy and gets to talk it over with the Minister.

It is a new age of mustard-cutters.

Side Effects of Drugs Cause Undue Concern

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am taking cortisone for arthritis and have been told it has many dangerous side effects. I am afraid to take it for any length of time but my condition becomes very painful, almost unbearable. Please explain its effects and if it is safe to take it for prolonged periods. — Mrs. Q. R.

A few years ago patients rarely thought or asked about side effects. Now it is almost obligatory — correctly enough — that the doctor should watch for side effects and whether to use them or take such other action if necessary.

The public interest in side effects zoomed suddenly after the disastrous (in some instances) use of thalidomide, a drug which stopped the proper development of babies' arms.

Where the patient unduly frightens herself, I suspect, is in thinking that side effect may occur will occur. If one applied to life the statistics of side effects, we would never cross the street because we might be killed by an automobile. And at times people are hit, but usually because of carelessness on somebody's part, the driver's or the pedestrian's.

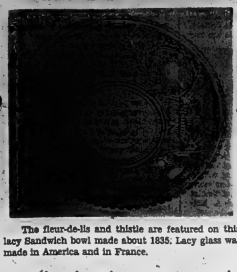
Spanish Courtesy

James H. Gray in The Winnipeg Free Press

. . . Living and dying without ever knowing the meaning of political freedom or social justice seemingly leaves the Spanish people unmarked. After the sinfulness we encountered in southern France, the pleasantness and unfailing courtesy of the Spaniard was indeed a delight. The people who collected on the village streets at dusk were happy people, obviously happy people. In the cities on their evening promenade the conversation of the strollers was laced with laughter.

Wherever we went the people smiled easily, even pridefully. Certainly when the five-foot Spanish guides talked of their country's history, their mien was of men seven feet tall. And the happier, pleasanter people we encountered on our tour were waiters in the hotel in a Barcelona slum.

A Smile Helps



Windsor Star

The other day we noted a winsome lass, alone in her office, talking on the telephone. All the while she was speaking, with her facial expressions altering brightly as the conversation proceeded.

Our first reaction was that she looked rather silly. After all, she was alone in the office, so none could see her (except through a glass partition) and certainly the person she was talking to could not see her. So her smiles seemed wasted on the empty air.

But were they? As we meditated we came to a different conclusion. After all, smiles emanate from our own spirit — even though they may be sparked by something said or done by others. We do not smile to impress others but do so as an expression of our own personality.

Sandwich Glass Was Made With Small Bumps in Glass

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Sandwich glass is the name given to the works of the Boston and Sandwich Glass Company of New England. It is the most famous of the American glass factories. They made numerous styles and types of glass, but the favorite is the lacy Sandwich glass of the 1830's. The glass was made with many small bumps inside the glass ware. These bumps were made to reflect the light so that the lacy Sandwich has a sparkle and brilliance that was unknown to other pressed glass of the period at that time. The idea for making the glass originated in France, but the most famous lacy glass is from Sandwich, Mass.

BRANCH 99 L.A.

Thursday was the first general meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary for the winter season. Plans for the bus trip to Montreal for the weekend of October 1st were completed, and quite a number of members are expected to go. For those unable to enjoy this trip, plans are being made for a visit for one day to Toronto for sightseeing and an evening's entertainment.

Comrade Hodge discussed arrangements for the bazaar to be held November 7th and the rummage sale to take place in October.

The Legion this Sunday has been invited by fellow veterans of the Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans Association to attend Decoration Day at the Belleville Cemetery to honor fallen veterans. This is a special occasion and it is hoped many will attend including the general public.

Preliminary arrangements for Poppy Day will be discussed at a meeting called for by the Poppy Committee. Three members of the Auxiliary have been invited to attend.

Zone Commander Hope Begley took a few minutes to report on resolutions to be brought before the convention to be held the end of this month at Windsor.

In August the Auxiliary's part was conducted at the Salvation Army in a moving ceremony conducted by Salvation Army Envoy Jean Humphreys, the Branch's Padre, and Captain June Dwyer. Those will be carried on Decoration Day.

The social evenings have started again on Saturdays and all members and escorts are welcome. Darts, cards, shuffleboard and other activities can be enjoyed.

Further sports activities will start in the near future.

"Trish Thursday" Auxiliary will be serving free cornedbeef at the Belleville Shopping Plaza from 7-9 and the Hallowe'en party will take place October 29.

The evening concluded with a lunch and social get together.

Widow Kept Bargains Then 'Friends' Left

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been a widow for almost two years and I wouldn't wish this life on a dog.

Before my husband died he told me about two business deals he was meeting with a couple of friends. They were not in writing — merely oral agreements. My husband passed away before the deals were consummated.

The two friends couldn't do enough for me. They included me in their plans, took me places, and I was touched by their consideration.

After the estate was settled I followed through on the two deals and paid both parties every cent. The friends threw money "at" their hands, the friends disappeared. I have not seen nor heard from them since.

Don't tell me I did the right thing and that I should not regret it because now I can live with my conscience. It is just as hard to live with the kind of money "at" their hands, the friends disappeared. I have not seen nor heard from them since.

Don't tell me I did the right thing and that I should not regret it because now I can live with my conscience. It is just as hard to live with the kind of money you get when you've been cheated. If you don't, please write again. That's what I'm here for.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your advice to the 19-year-old girl not to give away free samples hit home. A girl who is not determined to keep her moral standards high will find plenty of guys who will help her lower them. I'm one who gave away free samples and I'll regret it to my dying day.

I, too, tell for the line about learning if we were compatible and now I see how dumb I was. What kind of test is it when you have to lie to your parents about where you've been, sneak around like a criminal and pray to heaven nobody sees you?

If I could offer just one bit of advice to teen-age girls it would be this: If a fellow tells you because you wouldn't "prove your love," (what a line) the wounds will heal a lot faster than if he drops you because you let him have his way. — SMARTENED UP DUMMY.

DEAR SMART: Go to the head of the class. Despite the pain, you've learned your lesson well. I hope you won't forget it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A relative of ours has a very attractive 15-year-old son. It is embarrassing to be in their presence because this mother and son are always holding hands, or sitting close to one another with their arms entwined. If she-TV is on, the mother has with her head in the boy's lap, or he lies with his head in her lap. Either he is stroking her head or she is stroking his head. After a couple of hours, I could throw up.

Do you think something should be said to this mother, or the boy? Or should nothing be said? I believe family affection is beautiful but this is ridiculous. — NO NAME.

DEAR NO NAME: It's more than ridiculous. It's pathetic. The mother is encouraging very unhealthy emotions and I'll bet she is unaware of it. Unless something is done, the boy may be crippled emotionally for the rest of his life. It may be that tremendous damage has already been done. By all means, speak to the mother privately, of course — and urge her to talk the situation over with someone who can explain it well.

Couple Mark Anniversary

WELLINGTON — Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ogilvy, Wellington, were "At Home" to relatives and friends on Sunday on the occasion of their Silver Wedding Anniversary.

The house was bright with plaidsil, snapdragons, roses and mums. The tea table was centred with a three-layer anniversary cake flanked by silver candelabra. The guests were met at the door by the couple's son Donald, who was in charge of the guest book. The Misses Linda Channell and Nancy and Sandra Morris served refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvy were married at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Way of Wellington by the Rev. Edmund Grant, pastor of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Mrs. Ogilvy is the former Aleta Way and Mr. Ogilvy is the son of Mrs. Alfred Ogilvy and the late Mr. Ogilvy. Mrs. Bev Beals of Ottawa (formerly Marguerite Way) who was bridesmaid 23 years ago was present, but the groomsman, Mr. Clayton Bowers, now residing in the United States, was unable to be present.

Editorial Favors Women For Ordination

TORONTO (CP)—Despite all the practical problems "created by the fact that women bear babies and men grow beards," ordination should not be denied to women, says an editorial in the United Church Observer.

The editorial says "no discrimination on grounds of sex should be practised ever, by anyone, anywhere."

"No office, of priest, bishop or pope should be denied a Christian because she is female."

Ecclesiastical offices will likely continue to be held chiefly by men, for practical reasons.

"But there is no basis, religiously or otherwise, valid argument against a woman being a minister or a bishop."

Symbol of Arab Womanhood Has All But Disappeared

By PETER BUCKLEY

TUNIS (CP) — The veil, symbol of Arab womanhood's cloistered and restricted existance, has all but disappeared from the streets of Tunisia.

Throughout North Africa, young women have begun to adopt Western clothes as they move, timidly but in-growing numbers, into the universities, factories and offices.

But nowhere is the evolution of the Arab woman more marked than in Tunisia.

Among the first measures taken by independent Tunisia after France's protectorate ended in 1956 were laws to end polygamy and parentally arranged marriages and to confer equal rights on women before the laws.

There has been no total ban on veils, but the government has decreed they are not suitable either for school or work.

The older generation of women, particularly in the villages, may still draw their head cloths instinctively across their mouths when they pass a man, but their daughters have almost unanimously given up the practice and adopted bare heads to go with their nylon blouses and print dresses.

STILL AVERT EYES

The old modesty is likely to be apparent now only in the habit many educated, emancipated Arab women have of averting the eyes discreetly when talking with strangers.

Tunisians are regarded by most North African experts as a case apart—less bound by the religious precepts of Islam, more open to change. The difference in their attitude to women's rights is stunning for visitors who have also sampled the neighboring Morocco and Algeria.

Morocco's urban women are evolving gradually. A few have gone over completely to Western dress but most still wear a rudimentary veil, reduced to a small transparent wisp of fabric which conceals little of the face. The ankle-length djellabah has begun to look more like a form-fitting sheath than an all-concealing cloak.

And the approach of a modern Moroccan women is more likely to be heralded by the tap-tap of high-heeled shoes than the whisper of open sandals.

Algeria's attitude to women remains an enigma.

Its leaders have trumpeted abroad their dedication to modern social and economic experiment. Yet the Algerian woman seems to remain still in a medieval backwater.

LEAD SEPARATE LIVES

Except in the early morning, when the markets have just opened, few Arab women are to be seen in the streets of modern Algiers. Those who venture out almost inevitably go with faces closely covered and all but one downcast eye concealed behind the folds of their head scarves.

Even secretarial and clerical jobs in the offices and banks of Algeria are held down by men.

"Every Algerian wants emancipation for women—except for his own wife," one young Algerian explained ruefully.

In some respects, the old practices still hold true throughout North Africa. Even in Tunisia, the husbands often lead a life apart, preferring to sit over demi-tasses of strong coffee at the cafes during the evenings with their wives than to stay at home with the women.

The Arab woman's world has traditionally centred exclusively on the home. Rather than resent the narrowness of her life, she was expected to regard it as a happy sign of her husband's protectiveness and jealousy. It is a patriarchistic society where the husband is king.

Canadians who have taken up assignments in North Africa find the seclusion of Arab women makes it more difficult to bridge the gap to the Arab world generally.

Accustomed to entertaining their friends in couples, they are disconcerted to find that only the husbands will venture into their homes for social occasions.

"And even the husbands who are familiar with Western customs seem to think they are free to come and go at all the women, married or not," said a Canadian wife living in Morocco. "It makes it difficult to arrange a dinner party for mixed company, to say the least."

MR. AND MRS. JAMES R. IRWIN
Irwin — Alexander

St. Columba Presbyterian Church, Belleville was the setting on Saturday September 3, 1966 at 7 p.m., when Diane Claire Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Alexander, Belleville became the bride of James Reginald Irwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Irwin, Belleville. Rev. Norman Hutchinson officiated at the ceremony, while wedding music was rendered by organist Mr. Clifford Trepper. Appropriate vocal selections were sung by Mrs. Douglas Shaw.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length sheath gown featuring a scoop neckline with long lily-point sleeves and enhanced with Chantilly lace on the bodice. A flowing train of matching material edged with lace extended from the neckline. Her headdress was a cluster of seed pearls from which fell a shoulder length tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white glamelias mingled with carnations and ivy.

The matron of honor was Mrs. William Parm who wore a full length sheath gown of silk organza over taffeta in apple green shade and featuring a bodice with Empire waistline, scoop neckline and Mona Lisa sleeves. The back of the dress was enhanced with a train fall-ing from the waistline. Her headdress was of matching green leaves with orange blossoms and veil. The bridesmaids were Miss Ruth Fraser and Miss Linda Irwin, were identically attired to the matron of honor. Miss Joanne Alexander junior bridesmaid wore a full length gown of yellow silk organza over taffeta styled similar to the other attendants. Her headdress consisted of small rosettes with seed pearls and veiling.

Mr. William Parm Jr. was groomsman, while Mr. Gordon Irwin Jr., Mr. Bruce Alexander and Mr. David Irwin were the ushers.

For the reception at the Belleville Shrine Club, the bride's mother chose for the guests wearing a yellow Italian brocade coat and dress enhanced with gold accessories and a corsage of golden garnets. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother who wore a beige lace ensemble, brown accessories and a corsage of golden garnets.

The bride chose a three-piece melon shade suit with black accessories and a corsage of white Sweetheart roses for the honeymoon trip to western points.

Upon return Mr. and Mrs. Irwin will reside in Belleville.

Need Workers Urgently At Red Cross Rooms

The workrooms of the Belleville Red Cross Society at the corner of Cedar and West Bridge Streets will open for the winter season on Tuesday, September 13. The rooms will be open every Tuesday afternoon thereafter from 2 to 5 p.m.

Mrs. G. K. Graham sr., chairman of the Women's Work Committee, says sewers and knitters are urgently needed to carry out the work. Sewing for tropical countries is now in progress and completed garments are shipped overseas for use in Red Cross relief work in developing countries. Recently sent to India, Mrs. Graham saw a class of 40 school youngsters in their classrooms all wearing dresses bearing the Canadian Red Cross label. Anyone wishing to knit or sew for children such as these should contact Mrs. Graham at WO 8-9644. The Red Cross will deliver supplies and instructions to those who prefer to sew, knit or crochet at home.

Odds and ends of fine wool, three and four ply weight, is needed by the Women's Work Committee for knitted or crocheted afghans. The afghans must be lightweight, not over one and one-half pounds, and all scraps of woollen yarn can be put to good use.

WOMEN OF THE MOOSE

The first meeting of the month for Women of the Moose was held in Moose Hall with Sr. Regent Nora Kaiser presiding.

A euchre will be held on Thursday at Glady Cragg's home, 97 Humewood Drive. Co-workers will donate lunch and prizes.

Plans were discussed for the convention and Ruby Stapely is in charge of arrangements.

A corn roast is to be held at Nellie Scryngeour's home this Saturday evening.

WANTS BOOZE LAW

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A law requiring alcoholic beverages to be labelled hazardous to health was proposed Friday night by the president of the U.S. Women's Christian Temperance Union. Mrs. Fred J. Toone of Evanston, Ill., told the group's convention that the label should be similar to one now required on cigarettes.

Successful Living
Many of Today's Senior Citizens Are Proving Old in Years Only

DEAR DORIS: About senior citizens: they are getting younger, such as the Grimsby, Ontario gal you mentioned a while ago who celebrated her hundredth birthday. My 85-year-old aunt visited a 103-year-old biddie on her March birthday.

DORIS CLARK

Contrary to "decrepit expectations," the birthday lady bounded down the stairs like a 21-year-old, tittivated to the bit. Her body complaint was slightly impaired hearing.

Mrs. Waller, Carrying Place area, looks about 60 in her picture, bejewelled and bedflowered; she has no trouble seeing without glasses, doesn't believe in diets, has an astute memory, recalling she was seven at the Confederation and heard Sir John A. Macdonald speak at a political rally.

DEAR SISTER-UNDER-THE-SKIN: Your centurions (?) (centarians, century plants, centennial celebrants) seem to have found the secret of adding life to years. Tell us more.

Confidential to BADLY HURT: Believe it or not, it is human nature to resent the person who has helped the most. We don't like to be reminded of a time when we couldn't cope with things, and had to have a helping hand.

The person who rescued us becomes anathema to avoid or to find fault with — that is, unless we are really grown up and can face facts with something like realism.

Hard to swallow your time of life is adding to your depression, I'm sending you my tenscent leaflet, "Facing Forty." Read and digest. Then start surrounding yourself with something new and different.

DEAR DORIS: I wish you would put in a few words on behalf of us non-smokers. Smokers probably don't realize it but they and their clothes simply reek of cigarette fumes! I can tell a smoker right away.

You can tell where a smoker has been too, by the trail of cigarette butts and ashes. I have to watch some of my guests or they will put their butts in my potted plants even though there are ash trays.

I have a friend(?) who fills my car with smoke, drops ashes and butts on the floor, blows clouds of smoke in my face when we are eating anywhere and leaves her empty packets on my coffee table. I am tempted to leave candy wrappings on her coffee table!

If one dares to say a word to these walking chimneys they immediately say you are a crank. The last time I was in hospital for bronchitis I wasn't exactly helped by chain-smoking visitors who didn't ask if it would bother me.

Surely someone could come up with some rules of behavior for smokers to follow. — ASHES CLASHES.

DEAR A.C.: Agreed. Here's my version of Smokers' Etiquette:

1. Request for permission to smoke.
2. Proper disposal of ashes in ash trays.
3. Elimination of the S.O.P. (Smoke Other People's.)
4. Avoidance of asphyxiation of person in nearby chair from smoke fumes.
5. Proper hand care to avoid yellow stains.
6. Adequate life insurance.

Nurses Registry Plans Lectures

An executive meeting of the Belleville Community Nursing Registry was held Wednesday evening at the home of the registrar, Mrs. Joan Young, 66 Highland Ave., for the purpose of preparing for the fall educational lectures for graduate nurses.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Jean McDonnell, after which it was agreed to advertise the lectures at a later date.

This is only one of the many services provided by the Belleville Community Nursing Registry. Another service, the Nurses Registry, telephone number 962-1480, may be called any time, day or night by those wishing to obtain a private duty nurse.

PLAN VILLAGE

WATERLOO (CP)—A multimillion - dollar student village will provide accommodation for nearly 1,300 students at the University of Waterloo this year. There are 28 residences, dining halls and coffee shops. The village has three dining halls, each with a main room for 320 students, and a town hall. A chapel is also planned.

Contraceptive Pill May Become Legal in France

PARIS (Reuters)—A serious move is under way to make some contraceptives, including the pill, legal in France by the end of this year.

After four months of study, a commission appointed by Industry Minister Raymond Marcellin has given the contraceptive pill a clean bill of health. Its report states: "Most contraceptive products used at the present time have the effect of temporarily suspending fecundity, which is re-established once the product is no longer absorbed. A study of the risks involved by the use of these products does not reveal any major counter-indications."

The first leading politician to get the pill rolling was Francois Mitterand, left-wing runner-up against Charles de Gaulle in the December's presidential elections.

Last October, he made what was then considered a bold stand by declaring: "French women must have the right not to have children, just as they must have the right to have them, and to be able to bring them up properly."

Since then the Gaullists, the Socialists, the Radicals (centre) and the Communists have all come out in favor of the bill by Lucien Neuwirth, a prominent Gaullist member of the National Assembly.

"I am convinced that before the end of the year, all French men and women will be able to get chemical or mechanical contraceptives from any chemist's shop on production of a doctor's certificate," says Neuwirth.

The sale of contraceptives is to become legal, Parliament will have to adopt two new laws.

There must be a bill defining the conditions under which such contraceptives can be manufactured, obtained and used, and another to abolish certain clauses in the nineteenth-century law of 1920, adopted soon after the mass slaughter of the First World War, which forbids the sale and advertising of contraceptives.

At present, it is estimated, some 30,000 French women use the pill illegally. This compares with an estimated legal use of the pill by between 2,000,000 and 4,000,000 in other countries in Western Europe.

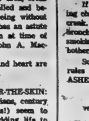
Perfectly Scrambled Eggs

Question: I saw your recipe for Devilled Eggs for a young cook a week or so ago. I am trying to get her to cook for my father and need your help. I saved both of the egg recipes you have given but would be grateful if you would print one for scrambled eggs — nice sort of ones, and like mine. Aged (15 years old)



Answer: Welcome to the club, Agnes.

PERFECTLY SCRAMBLED EGGS

Note: You need a heavy frying pan or iron frying pan with sloping sides to make proper scrambled eggs. These are sometimes called Omelette aux Fines Herbes.

4 small eggs
2 tbsp finely chopped parsely (optional but recommended)
3 teaspoons fresh or bottled chopped green onion (optional but recommended)
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon M.S.G. (Accent)
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons warm water
2 tablespoons butter

Mary
Moore

Spaghetti supper (see Fri.); combination salad; melon ball fruit cup, cherry pound cake; coffee.

Beat eggs a little until barely foamy. Add parsely, onion flakes, Worcestershire sauce, M.S.G., salt and warm water and beat until just mixed.

Heat the butter in heavy slope-sided frying pan until bubbly and beginning to turn pale gold. Tip pan until sides and bottom are coated with butter. Over high heat add egg mixture and tip pan to make liquid run up sides. As soon as bottom is set, with a rounded spatula, lift firm part of mixture and tip pan to make uncooked part flow under. Continue this tipping and lifting and flowing process until all is softly set and bottom is golden. Carefully fold over and turn out on hot platter and serve at once to 2 people.

QUESTION:

In your menus sometimes you suggest quick-cooked cabbage. Would you tell me what you mean?

Mrs. W. R. G.

ANSWER:

QUICK-COOKED SHREDDED CABBAGE (serves 3 or 4)

4 cups finely shredded (not grated) new green cabbage.
2 tablespoons milk.
2 tablespoons water.
1½ tablespoons butter.
½ teaspoon M.S.G. (accent).

Shred cabbage thread-thin, preferably on Feemster shredder, or by hand with long razor-sharp knife, as thinly as possible. Add all remaining ingredients and mix. Cook, covered, over fairly low heat, until cabbage is nearly tender. Do not let this burn. Watch it and when water has evaporated it will be ready to serve. This is easy and quick to make, and good.

Elders Irrelevant

By DR. STUART E. ROSENBERG

If young people look upon their elders as largely irrelevant, it is because in many ways they are.

There has grown up in our society a youth culture that is not only indifferent to the adult world but belligerently so. It is a culture disengaged from adult values, unwilling to become part of a world in which glitter, gilt and adult delinquency parade as "permissive morality."

A hundred years ago parents felt to quote Scripture to their children: "Thou shalt not!" Fifty years ago, parents twisted this into: "Perhaps it would be better if you didn't." Now Spock says: "Love me and do as you please!"

The point is that they are so afraid of being rebelled against or rejected by their children that they stand for very little. Often they do not even dignify the sovereignty of parents by "honoring" them with an ecclesial rebellion. No longer do they walk over their parents — they see through them.

The odd thing is that permissiveness is precisely what does not win the hearts of children. One does not encounter parents who are truly admired, loved or revered who have not, at some point, been "tough" teachers, who have set given assignments that had to fulfilled, who have not been disciplinarians at least with regard to certain basic moral rules; who haven't, in short, taken a stand!

Those who are in the business of communicating values are often distressed to see that the "action-reaction" pattern has now reversed. In our society today, action is normally taken by young people; adults merely react to what the young people have already done.

Not until those who lead youth are aware of the deficiencies in respect of their own vision and social hope, can the older generation hope to become believable to the younger. For precisely because adults are often not believable, in the eyes and the hearts of so many of our young people, that they go their own way, walking around their elders because they see through them so transparently.

Lighting the Way

LOST: ONE HOUSE TRAILER

William Pirie, 21, of Marion, Iowa, recently drove onto the Kansas Turnpike at Kansas, pulling a 14-foot house trailer behind his car. Thirty miles later, while stopped at a service station in Lawrence, Kansas, Pirie discovered that his trailer was missing.

Retracing his route, Pirie found the trailer seven miles back. State Police were already there. They found the trailer in a ditch, where it had worked loose from Pirie's car and crashed. Apparently, Pirie had not been looking through his car's rear-view mirror very often.

Many of us are prone to travel life's road, taking too much for granted. It might be our jobs, our opportunities, our friends, or even our loved ones. It could be our health, or other forms of value. Carelessness is on our part, in any of these areas, is bound to result in loss to ourselves. It's a good thing to look into the mirror frequently, and keep an eye on our attitudes and actions.

TEXT FOR TODAY: "Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have gained." (2nd St. John, verse 8)

TREES

"Individual trees I do revere." — Jessamyn West.

* * *

"The happiest thing that happened to me this summer," recalls a Belleville lady, "was going to see an old tree I'd known since childhood. It was like meeting an old friend. A precious one."

And this is the story she told:

"The tree is a magnificent maple, which stands in the school yard entrance of the little red school house which I attended as a child. Beneath its shelter I waited for, played with and departed from, my school mates, and it was like walking into a world of memories just to see it again.

"At one time there was an avenue of 14 such maple trees along the road leading up to the red school house.

"The farmer who had just bought the land on which they stood decided to cut the beautiful trees down for timber.

"He remarked to a neighboring farmer who happened to pass by:

"'This, the last tree comes down tomorrow,' as he pointed to the tree shading the school yard entrance.

'You don't mean it!' exclaimed the neighbor.

'But — of course I mean it. Why shouldn't I?'

'Well, I don't know what ever the school children will do when it rains, for it has sheltered many of them for years. Every boy who has gone to school here has played marbles under it.'

'You don't say! Well, now . . . and the new corner stroked his beard thoughtfully.

'The next day the tree was left standing with a decree in writing that it be left so, as long as the red school remained."

Such a charming tree story, indeed.

And while Christopher Morley wonders why it is "... that a man can sleep and smoke better under an apple tree than in any other kind of shade" ... and Alexander Smith feels trees are "your best antiques", Dion Calthrop believes that the trees in a town " . . . get more love than any country trees. They mean so much."

This could be true of Belleville, for its citizens and visitors do admire the majesty and beauty of its trees.

"I remember my father saying he was just a lad when the trees were planted along Bridge Street, East," recalls Mrs. George Ross Beamish, 206 John Street.

When we were told a certain tree along our street, now tall and stately, was planted on Labor Day by a small lad, as his father stood by to help if need be, we thought of Marcia's Aunt Cora's declaration that " . . . no one ever entirely gives up the ownership of a place if he has planted a tree there."

The Ancients endowed trees with legends such as the one concerning the devoted, elderly couple, Philemon and Baucis, whom the gods transformed into an oak and a linden tree respectively, that they need not be separated at death, as was their wish. They grew so close together, their branches interlwined at the top. Their story was the subject of paintings by Rembrandt and Rubens, as well as an opera by Gounod, first given in Paris in 1860, entitled Philemon et Baucis.

The famed Oliver Wendell Holmes, author of the Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, had a kindred fondness for trees and speaks of them as " . . . looking down on us with their sweet meekness which belongs to huge but limited organisms, — which one sees in the brown eyes of oxen, but meet in the patient posture, the outstretched arms, and the heavy drooping robes of these vast beings endowed with life but not with soul — which conscience us and entice us, but stand helpless — poor things! — while Nature dresses and undresses them, like so many fullsized but under-witted children."

Have you a favorite tree in Belleville?

Won't you please write in (in care of this column) and tell us about it? We would like to know.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Retirement Wedding Bells Can Ring a Pretty Tune

By THOMAS COLLINS

Here's a blueprint for marriage after you're 65 years old.

Don't laugh now — the U.S. Government reports that more than 35,000 couples past age 65 are now marrying every year, and that the number is growing. Five years ago many of these people had spouses sitting on the sofa next to them as your spouse may be sitting now.

The blueprint comes from John Y. Watson, 68, a widower for four years, and his bride of five months, Eugenia Watson, 64, a widow for five years. Both owner homes at the time of their marriage. Both have now sold them. They live in a trailer, parked in a tree-shrouded park in the Scotland.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson obviously are happy. But they aren't giddy about it. They have a quiet, pleasant, companionable marriage. Not a cute one.

Out of their experience together they have formulated the following points which they feel will make a good retire m ent marriage:

The older couple must understand that for them marriage is not a something-borrowed — something-blue affair. It is for companionship, which means both somebody to talk to and the security a home ownership gives you, and it is for economy. "Together, we are living for about 60 percent of what the two of us spent living separately," according to Mr. Watson.

The older couple should have a wedding ceremony and invite all their friends. Not to solicit gifts, not for their own vanity. But for the friends. Who will love it. And who will remember it from here on with parties and letters.

GET MEDICAL REPORTS

The older couple, before marrying, should go to their individual doctors, tell their plans, and get a full report on their physical condition. Whereupon they should tell each other what the doctors said, so that a case of arthritis or a backache a one midnight won't come as a shock.

The older couple should decide very carefully, but firmly, with any children each might have, "You mustn't ask the children," says Mrs. Watson. "You must tell them. There's nothing dishonorable in older people marrying. There's nothing disrespectful to the children's deceased Mother or Father if older people want companions life again. It may be necessary to point this out, but it is unwise to get into a discussion over whether the remarriage is right or wrong. This is your decision, not the children's."

With regard to the children, it is wise to give them some reassurance that somebody is not marrying you to get "Daddy's money" or "The money Mother helped you make."

This reassurance can be property given through a financial arrangement which any older couple who remarries should work out, either through a lawyer or through an exchange of letters with each other. "In general," says Mr. Watson, "Eugenia and I agreed that any money each of us had that had come out of my marriage to my deceased wife or her marriage to her deceased husband should be retained in each's separate name. And passed on to each's individual children, if feasible. But we also agreed that since the children mean more on their feet we came first. And each of us would contribute our assets to insure the lifetime security of the other before giving anything to any children, if the were necessary. Our children understand fully our willingness to look care of this."

CHECK INCOMES

The older couple, before remarrying, should check every form of income they have to make sure it will not be endangered by a remarriage. Women can lose everything on some pensions and some life insurance benefits.

The older couple should agree, before marriage, that each will contribute, from each income, a proportionate amount of it to the household budget. But that each will have the same sum for personal spending money.

The older couple, according to the Watsons, should talk about sex before they marry. "You may find some surprises in it," they said. And that was all they would say.

The older couple is seldom as cranky a pair of nuts as the textbook says. "About all any older couple needs is good will," Mr. Watson says. "Most have it. If the man or woman is not trying to make a good fling out of the other or looking for a meal ticket — if they come together for good and honorable reasons they will iron out their problems with children, and any other problems that come up."

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate

"What's Your Problem"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Very frequently letters are received where readers complain that in spite of the fact that they engaged an attorney, the experience has been less than satisfactory. When these complaints are analyzed, it is found that most real estate problems are not legal in nature and, logically, one can't expect competency from a lawyer in nonlegal matters.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I'm raising a delicate question. I would blame you in the least if you ignore my letters. If you answer I'd be most surprised.

I'm an assistant person e l manager for a large company. One of my main jobs is finding homes for newly employed executives. I also help employees sell their houses when they are transferred.

I have always insisted that our employees be represented by an attorney when buying or selling. The result, however, has not always been satisfactory. I keep getting complaints about poorly built houses, the wrong mortgages, paying too much when buying or not getting enough when selling, locating in the wrong neighborhood and many others. Yet, every book I have ever read tells me I am following the right method. What is wrong with what I am doing? — Mr. T. R.

ANSWER: The lawyer is learned in the law; he is not a real estate specialist or presumed to have knowledge of real estate problems. On matters relating to contract, title, and drawing of legal instruments, it is proper is consult an attorney. On matters such as, structural adequacy, value, financing, buying or selling, a lawyer usually has no training or knowledge. It is foolish to expect competent advice from an attorney on these matters.

From experience, I have found that less than 10 percent of the decisions to be made in a real estate transaction are legal in nature. Yet, many people expect an attorney to have full competence in all phases of real estate. Unfortunately, some attorneys will advise and counsel on matters outside their competence.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: After every heavy rain a miniature lake collects in my front yard. The township inspector has told me that I will have to install an 18-inch diameter, concrete pipe to solve the problem. It will require about 300 feet to drain to a near creek. Before I agree to this work, could you please give me an approximation of cost? — Mr. G. F.

ANSWER: The pipe will cost about $2 per running foot and the installation cost per foot will be about $1.50. Therefore, it will cost about $1,200 to get rid of the miniature lake in the front yard.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Noise is very bothersome to me. To get some quiet I am adding a game room to the house and will put my three kids in there to watch television, play the bongo drums and for their other high decibel activities. I want to make sure the noise stays in the game room and doesn't get into the rest of the house. How do I do it?—Mr. L. Q.

ANSWER: In general, the heavier the wall, the more resistant it is to the travel of noise from room to room. The ideal (but impractical) partition would be a wall of thick lead. I could recommend staggered stud wall construction with acoustical insulation, but it is costly and difficult to build. The best, the most practical, and the cheapest way that I know of to prevent noise from passing through a wall is to build it of heavy 12-inch cement block.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

Sharp's Anti-Inflationary Policy Sparks Markets to Resurgence

By LARRY DWORKIN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Finance Minister Sharp's anti-inflationary policy acted as a tonic to Canada's sagging stock markets Friday.

The markets showed strength on the day, snapping a four-day slump. Despite the improvement, however, the market was down for the week.

Mr. Sharp outlined Thursday night increased taxes, postponement of the medical care program and some other federal spending programs in a bid to control inflationary pressures.

At Toronto, this week, the industrial index, an indicator of buy stock movements, dropped 1.43 to 145.28 which included a .52 advance Friday. At one point the index fell to 144.15, lowest since March 25, 1964.

The market declined, despite announced record sales by Canada's major automobile producers for August.

Banks were among the major losers with Nova Scotia off 1¼ to 64¼, Montreal 1¼ to 59¾, Royal ¼ to 68 and Imperial-Commerce ⅝ to 57. Toronto-Dominion edged up ¼ to 55½.

Ford of Canada was off 4¼ to 127¾, General Motors 2¼ to 77 ¾ and Westcoast Transmission and Canada Cement 1 each to 23¾ and 37.

On the pipe side, Argus Corp. rose 3 to 18 and Brazilian Light and Power 1¼ to 9¾ after the announcement of net income that had jumped to $14,738,000 (U.S.) in the first six months of 1966 compared with $7,460,700 last year.

Volume for the week was down as a result of Labor Day holiday, totalling 11,877,178 shares compared with 13,395,833 last week.

Frobex and Area, who are jointly drilling on the Gaspe property of Wexford Mines, rocketed, after a company announcement that they had encountered copper showings.

Frobex jumped 1.15 to 2.48 on 1,267,000 shares and Area 96 cents to 2.36 on 814,000.

Candore, which traded more than 500,000 sharep Friday, increased 8½ to 23¼ cents on 837,000 shares.

Inco, which is facing a possible strike, paced the base-metal group lower. It dropped 2¾ to 81¾. Cominco declined 1¼ to 53¾, Falconbridge 1 to 87¾ while Pine Point jumped 1¼ to 9.

Western oils were stronger with Dome ahead 1¾ to 19¾.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

Belleville's entry in the OHA senior "A" hockey league will be known as the "BELLEVILLE MO-HAWKS."

After various consideration of some 41 suggestions submitted by city and district fans, the name was selected by a panel of five sportsmen of the city.

The winning entry was submitted by Don Lee, well-known city sportsman and former president of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association. Mr. Lee will receive the season ticket award.

It will be noted that the name "MO-HAWKS" is a hyphenated word.

In a note accompanying his entry Mr. Lee explained that the reason for the hyphenation is a tribute to various aspects of sport in the city and district.

While the name is an indirect tribute to the tribal name of Indian sportsmen of the area, Mr. Lee says there is other background to it.

"For instance," he wrote, "the "MO-" could remind one of the city's river the Moira, also of some noted hockey players: a mensurium to Jerry "Mo" Maher and then we have "Mo" Benoit, "Mo" Hunter and "Mo" Keillar.

"Also," he added. "The Chicago Black Hawks sponsored a junior hockey club here several years ago. The district's illustrious Bobby Hull is a member of the Hawks. And various species of feathered hawks make the area their habitat.

The selection was not an easy one. Many outstanding names were submitted by fans. The great majority were sent in by serious-minded people but a few smacked of humor, cynicism and satire. One or two had a touch of both.

A political digger sent in "Pearson's Pets." The panel discarded "Beatles" because wigs are not part of standard hockey equipment.

Two dug into the past with their entries "The Taxes" and "The Reminders."

Repeats included "Centennials" and "Centennial Saints." Three names the panel felt would be suitable for 1967 only.

The greater majority of the suggested names were short and punchy as requested by the panel. A number were the same as used by professional and amateur clubs in other part of the country.

The "Bandits" and "Raiders" names with an aggressive if illegal touch received favorable comment from the panel. Nor was the animal kingdom forgotten with "Beavers", "Bisons", "Bobcats" and "Cougars" being submitted.

Other names sent in were, Rockets, Blazers, Royals, Canucks, Aces, Redmen, Clippers, Beehives, Dynamos, Diamonds, Bell-Boys, Barriers, Tempests, Merchants, and Hawks.

SENIOR TALK

Minnie Menard, former McFarland star, who has severed his hockey connections with American interests is expected in town tomorrow to talk terms with coach Floyd Crawford and business manager Ken Francis. . . After organization, a "Meet the Mo-Hawks" night open house is planned. . . Toronto senior interests are still holding out for a 24-game schedule. Other clubs can't see it that way. . . The Bill Green Memorial Trophy now in keeping of Doug Green, son of the former Belleville hockey great, will be presented to the Mo-Hawks to be awarded to the season's most valuable player. . . Dr. Tom Woodley has consented to become the club physician. . . Season tickets are on sale at Carl Thompson's Variety Store.

Herman Out ★★★★★ Bosox Fire Manager; Back In Cellar ★★★★★ Yanks Win

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Boston - Red Sox, down so long that minds above are beginning to look like up, welcomed their new manager by returning to the cellar.

Wednesday, the Red Sox had climbed out of the cellar, where they had dwelled for much of the season. Friday, with Billy Herman out as manager and Pete Runnels in, they returned to the depths, losing 2-1 to New York Yankees who climbed out of that place.

Boston owner Tom Yawkey, in explaining the late - season firing of Herman, said, "I think Billy did the best job he could. However, I think a change was in order. It was that simple."

Runnels, twice the American League batting champion, is strictly the interim manager and not in the running for the job next year, Sox officials emphasized. The prime candidate for the post appears to be Dick Williams, former utility infielder and now farm director of Boston's International League farm club, Toronto Maple Leafs. Another possibility is Ted Williams, now a vice president of the club.

In other games Minnesota Twins beat Baltimore Orioles 6-1, Kansas City Athletics took Detroit Tigers 2-1 in 10 innings, Chicago White Sox edged Washington Senators 1-0 in 10 innings and Cleveland Indians beat California Angels 8-7 in 10 innings.

Jim Kaat became the winningest pitcher in the majors and Tony Oliva surged ahead of Baltimore's Frank Robinson in the batting race in the Minnesota victory. Now 23-9, Kaat allowed the first - place Orioles just eight hits, and Oliva went three-for-four, raising his average to .315, two points above Robinson who had one hit in four trips.

After getting three outs with the bases loaded in the ninth, Mickey Lolich walked in the winning run for Kansas City in the 10th.

Pete Richert lost a heartbreaker to the White Sox, giving up just one hit in nine innings and then a 10th-inning double to Tommy Agee who eventually scored when Bill McMullen booted a grounder by John Romano.

Bill Davis, just up from Portland, hit a two-run homer with two out in the 10th, shooting the Indians past California.

Pirates, Dodgers Win Cub Rookie Blanks Giants 6-0

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ken Holtzman, student prince of Leo Durocher's Chicago pitching staff, picked up another summer credit Friday night by blanking San Francisco for 7 2/3 innings as the last place Cubs ambushed Juan Marichal and the Giants 6-0.

It was the ninth victory—high among Cub pitchers—for the rookie lefthander who will return to the University of Illinois at Chicago later this month to begin his senior year.

Until mid - June Holtzman, 20, a 205.000 bonus baby, was a once-a-week pitcher while concentrating on his studies. He beat Los Angeles 3-0 for his first decision in the majors but had won only three games when the school year ended. He's made the most of his summer vacation, however, shutting four of his last five decisions for an over - all mark of 9-13.

Holtzman stopped the Giants on two hits for seven innings while nursing a 1-0 lead. The Cubs gave him a two run cushion in the eighth, but he needed relief help with two out in the bottom of the inning when the Giants loaded the bases on a single and two walks.

Bill Hands, an ex-Giant, came out of the bullpen, struck out Ray Hart to end the eighth-inning threat and completed the four-hitter, pinning the loss on Marichal, now 20-6.

DROP INTO THIRD

The Giants' fans dropped them into third place in the tight National League race, two percentage points behind the Dodgers and 3½ games behind league - leading Pittsburgh Pirates. The Dodgers blanked Houston Astros 7-0 on Claude Osteen's three - hitter and the Pirates edged St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 on Bill Mazeroski's bases - loaded sacrifice fly in the 13th inning.

Atlanta Braves trimmed New York Mets 8-5 for their ninth victory in the last 10 games and Philadelphia Phillies downed Cincinnati Reds 7-6.

George Altman singled off Marichal in the 6th inning, stole second and scored the first Cub run on a single by Adolpho Phillips. San Francisco errors helped the Cubs push over five unearned runs in the last two innings, wrapping it up.

Osteen, pitching his first complete game since July 6, scattered three singles and brought his record to 15-10 while the Dodgers punished four Houston hurlers for 16 hits, including five doubles. Successive two-baggers by Wes Parker, Willie Davis and Ron Fairly delivered two runs in the third, giving Osteen all the help he required.

BREAKS 2-2 TIE

The Pirates loaded the bases in the 13th on Matty Alou's single, a sacrifice, an intentional walk to Roberto Clemente—who had stroked four hits—and an unintentional pass to pinch hitter Manny Mota. Mazeroski then came through with his fly to centre, breaking the 2-2 deadlock.

US National Tennis All-Foreign Semi-Finals

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)—Fred Stolle's rejuvenation service returns helped defeat American Clark Graebner 6-3, 6-4, 6-8 Friday and set up an all-foreign semi-final in the U.S. tennis championships.

Queenslander Roy Emerson, winner of the title in 1961 and 1964, gained his Davis Cup teammate into the round of four with a 10-12, 6-4, 6-0, 6-3 triumph over another Aussie, left - hander Owen Davidson.

In women's play, Rosemary Casals, 17, of San Francisco, battled her way into the women's semi-finals with a 6-3, 6-4, 8-4 victory over fourth-seeded Francoise Durr of France.

Miss Casals and Nancy Richey of San Angelos, Tex., the only American survivors, face a bleak prospect. Miss Casals' semi-final opponent today is Margaret Court of Brazil, who Friday crushed Norma Baylon of Argentina, 6-0, 6-4.

Would Prevent Merger

File $12 Million Suit

CHICAGO (AP) — A group called Chicago Football Associates, previously seeking an American Football League franchise, Friday announced filing of a $36,000,000 suit to prevent the planned merger of the National and American football leagues.

Robert Nussbaum, Chicago stockbroker and head of the group, said the suit was filed in United States district court Friday.

Nussbaum, who formerly operated the Chicago Panthers, a semi - pro team, said: "Our suit frankly was prompted by the stand taken by the government."

This was the rejection by Emanuel Celler, chairman of the House of Representatives judiciary committee and its anti-trust subcommittee, of a plea by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle to exempt the NFL-AFL merger from anti-trust laws.

The suit charged that Chicago Football Associates were illegally denied an American Football League franchise in Chicago as a result of the intended merger.

Celler, in rejecting Rozelle's plea, instructed the two leagues to go ahead with plans to combine the two leagues, commenting: "There hasn't been any suit filed or any questions raised."

World Rowing

Three Canadian Crews Out

BLED, Yugoslavia (AP)—The second world rowing championships went into the semi-finals in four events today with races officials keeping up their watch for anxious crews that jump the start.

Interest centred on the eight-oared crews and on the battle for finalist positions between East and West Germany, competing as two different teams for the first time in rowing. All seven crews of each country survived the last two days of qualifying heats—at least that other of the more than 30 countries competing here could say.

The three Canadian entries were eliminated.

In the eights Canada, represented by St. Catharines, Ont., winners of the Royal Canadian Henley Regatta, were third in their heat with a time of 6:05.36. Holland won the race in 6:03.13 and Hungary was second in 6:04.95.

Daryl MacDonald and Tony Bjarnarson of St. Catharines were fourth in the coxless pairs in 7:26.11 with Denmark six lengths in front. The U.S. was second with 7:09.21 and Yugoslavia third in 7:10.04.

The Toronto Lake Aquatic Association of Vancouver supplied the entry in the coxless fours which was won by Romania in 6:27.71. The U.S. was second with 6:30.47 and Canada third in 6:33.32.

Leafs Lose To Jets, Trail 2-1

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs, accustomed to coming from behind all season, find themselves on the brink of elimination tonight in the best-of-five International League semi-finals.

The Leafs, who came from last place after the first month of the season to finish third, lost 5 - 2 to Columbus Jets Friday night and now trail the series 2-1.

Rochester Red Wings, who finished the regular season in first place, defeated Richmond Braves 3-1 Friday night and also trail the series 2-1.

World's Richest Horse Race

CHICAGO (AP)—A field of 13 willing, but mostly unbargained, juveniles will make a crazy charge for the world's biggest payoff in the world's richest horse race at Arlington Park today.

It's the Arlington-Washington Futurity for two-year-olds which will gross $367,700 with 15 starters and reward $185,200 to say winner, except Freeman Keyes' Lightning Orphan, a supplementary entry.

Lightning Orphan can't share in the $25,000 supplemental fee paid by Keyes, who could have made his colt eligible for $25 last year, and thus would get a winner's share of $182,700.

Champion Archer Here On Sunday

Canada's woman champion archer Joan MacDonald of Toronto will be in the district over the week-end.

She will be the feature at the Third Annual Invitational Meet of the Belleville Archery Club on Sunday starting at 10 a.m.

A club spokesman said today that some 70-80 top archers from Ontario and the United States will take part in the tournament.

The Belleville club has some crack archers and "archer-ettes" in its ranks who rank with the best in the province.

The club also reads with the best in the province.

Archery, one of the oldest sports in the world is gaining in popularity in the district and elsewhere.

Archers were the backbone of armies in the olden days. Bowmen often turned the tide of battle.

Surtees Sets New Track Mark

MONT TREMBLANT, Que. Some of the world's greatest racing car drivers burned up the 2.8-mile Circuit Mont Tremblant Friday while attempting to qualify for Sunday's International Grand Prix, America's richest sports car race.

At the end of the first day of a two day qualifying period, John Surtees of England, last year's winner, emerged with the best speed in a Lola T-70 after setting a track record of 1:38.4. The previous mark of 1:41.1 was set by Bruce McLaren earlier this year.

McLaren did it in 1:40.5 Friday for third place.

Paul Hawkins of Australia flipped his Lola T-70 but escaped with only a cut on the back of his neck. He later finished second in 1:38.8.

Lothar Motschenbacher of Manhattan Beach, Calif., was fourth in 1:42.1, followed by John Cannon of Montreal, 1:42.6; Mark Donohue of Stoneybrook, N.Y., 1:42.8; and George Follmer of Los Angeles, the 1965 U.S. road racing champion, and Jim Hall of Santa Ana, Calif., both in 1:43.7.

Chuck Parsons of Carmel, Calif., the only U.S. road racing champion, was ninth with a time of 1:44.1 and Ronnie Buchanan of Playa Del Rey, Calif., rounded out the top 10 qualifiers with a time of 1:47.4.

The winner of the race receives $8,000. It is the first of six races in the new Canadian-American Challenge Cup series which offers a total of $300,000 in inducements to participating drivers.

Brian Thompson and Don McTaggart hit singles for the Lions' only two hits.

Andy Ricketts punched a pair of triples and double and Rutherford a double for Deseronto.

Kenora Eskimos Nip Larks 8-3

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Neill Armstrong's Edmonton Eskimos share first spot in the Western Football Conference today, but don't ask the coach or the official statistician how they got there.

The result is a win, but we should have done better," Armstrong said after his club had edged Montreal Alouettes 8-3 Friday night before less than 18,000 fans.

"We weren't moving as fast as we should, even though most of the boys tried hard," he added. "We'll have to do a better job than this if we want to finish on top or somewhere near the top."

The Edmonton victory moved the club into a first place tie with Saskatchewan Roughriders and marked the team's fourth game in the last 15 days.

"Even so, we're probably slightly less tired than Montreal," Armstrong said.

In the Eastern Conference dressing room coach Darrell Mosher said the Montrealers had "1,000 chances' to win, but couldn't get the job done.

And the official statistician would have to agree with him. OFFENSIVE stats tell the tale.

The Als worked for 18 first downs to six marked up by the Eskimos, rolled up 340 yards in total offence to 97 for the Edmonton club and netted a respectable total offence of 313 yards—307 of that amount coming from the passing combination of quarterbacks Bernie Faloney and George Bork.

By contrast the Eskies ran for only 65 yards without their top rusher — halfback Jim Thomas—laid up at home in bed through the air. Thomas suffered a severe charleyhorse against B.C. Lions one week ago and didn't make the eastern trip.

However, the winners had enough points on quarterback Bobby Kerbow's 42-yard second-quarter single and a 37-yard pass-and-run touchdown from Kerbow to end E. A. Sims and Tommy-Joe Coffey's convert to sink the punchless Als.

Sims broke a tackle by Montreal's Jim Walter near the 15-yard line and went in for the major standing on the play.

The game's only touchdown came as a result of a fumble by the Als.

Halfback Don Lisbon took a handoff from Faloney on the Montreal 38 yard line, but dropped the ball. Linebacker Bernie Schmum pounced on it and three plays later Sims was in the end zone.

Dave Kempf picked up the Als' only points as he connected on one field goal. He has now edged Lisbon for all 10 points the Alouettes have scored in their first four games and is the East's leading goal-getter with 32, eight more than Hamilton Tiger-Cats' Ken Ploen.

MISSED THREE TIRES

Kempf's point - getter was from 10 yards out and came in the opening quarter, after he had missed on an earlier attempt from the 20 yard line. He missed one from 25 yards out in the third quarter also, and only managed touchbacks by Lu Bain and Trent Walters kept the Als from picking up singles on these attempts.

Montreal had a touchdown called back early in the fourth quarter after Jerry Shaw's screen pass to Lisbon at the Montreal 36 and the speedy halfback was nailed by two tacklers on the field. However, a clipping penalty was called against Montreal's Ted Smith on the play.

"That clip by Ken Lindquist was nowhere near as bad as the play," coach Mudre said. "It was a useless clip and we lost 10 yards—as we should have won by 10 points."

Kerbow threw 14 times for the win, completing seven passes for three of his passes. Faloney and Bork combined for nine of 20 passes for the Als and two interceptions. The Eaks had one picked off.

Bain was Edmonton's top ground gainer as he carried seven times for 33 yards, while Lisbon's show was forced to keep ball 10 times for a net loss of seven yards.

Kempf was Montreal's top receiver at his flanker spot, catching four passes for 59 yards. Along the ground it was Lisbon picking up 73 yards on 13 carries and Faloney getting the same distance on 19 tries.

The Eskimos now travel to Regina for a Saturday game against the winless Argonauts, a game which will be televised over the CTV network.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Jockey Wayne Harris, 19, formerly of Vancouver, Friday was suspended for 20 days for attacking another rider as they polled up after the sixth race Thursday.

Stewards Ed Gorman and C. Van Straubenzee, representing the Ontario Racing Commission, and John Finn of the Jockey Club issued a suspension from Sept. 13 to Oct. 2, inclusive.

The ruling said Harris was suspended for "attacking and almost unseating Jockey Jim Fitzsimmons."

Films of the race showed that Harris, riding Allejollie, struck his whip toward Fitzsimmons as the horses passed the finish line.

GRABS JOCKEY

Further down the stretch, with the horses still in a gallop, Harris reached across and grabbed Fitzsimmons, riding Guidecca.

Fitzsimmons was almost pushed from the saddle but managed to hold his seat aboard Guidecca, who finished second in the race to Royal Herod.

Allejollie finished third.

Harris said he lost his temper because Fitzsimmons hit him repeatedly with his whip as the horses neared the finish.

Harris was the fifth - leading Jockey in Ontario at the time of the suspension.

In the day's racing, apprentice jockey Wayne Coombs won the first half of a long-shot daily double, winning with Ourzycomb in the first. Music Circle won in the second for a double of $305.10.

Jets Rally To Shade Dolphins

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — New York Jets staved off a furious last - quarter rally by Miami Dolphins and squeezed out a 19-14 victory in the American Football League Friday night.

Mike Taliaferro, who had led the Jets to four straight pre-season victories, completed only four of 16 passes in the first half. The Jets had gone ahead 9-0 on a safety and a 30-yard scoring pass from Taliaferro to George Sauer.

Then the Jets scored 10 quick points on John Sample's interceptions of two passes from the Dolphins' veteran quarterback, Dick Wood.

Namath hit Pete Lammons with a 34-yard pass after the first interception, then fed the ball to Bill Mathis for a four-yard touchdown.

Mistake to Think Nazis Were Nothing More Than Gangsters

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—It is a mistake to think of Adolf Hitler and his lieutenants as gangsters and nothing more, says George Hulme, Canadian - born playwright who is preparing a work on events leading to the Second World War.

"There's a popular feeling that they must have been mad or gangsters only, lacking intellectual attainments," says Hulme, who is conducting his research in Germany and here under a $5,000 Canada Council grant.

"Nazis and their henchmen got to the top by their willingness to kill, but it's dangerous to think that they were idiots. They were very clever."

Hulme found the combination of gangsterism and brains—and will—most exemplified in the career of Reinhard Heydrich, diabolical deputy chief of the Gestapo who devised the "final solution" for the Jews.

Heydrich was already scheming bigger things for himself when he was assassinated at 38 by Czech patriots in 1942—a killing avenged by the martyrdom of Lidice. "He was much more dangerous than other of Hitler's henchmen."

"Heydrich was a cultivated man who in between slaughtered bold musical soirees where he played the violin," said Hulme in an interview after returning from Berlin and other German cities where he spoke with the former Nazis and prominent figures.

WORSE THAN HITLER

"My guess is that he had lived, he would have succeeded Hitler. He would have been far worse than Hitler ever was. He already had a plan completed on paper for the murder of 30,000,000 Slavs."

It is often forgotten that Goering and Goebbels were both

PLAYWRIGHT STUDIES NAZIS — George Hulme, a Canadian-born playwright working in London, is absorbed in the complexities of the German character as he prepares to write a new play on events leading to the Second World War. (CP Photo)

PhDs, the playwright added.

Hulme, 35, says West anti-Semitism now is manifested—"in my opinion there's still a good deal of it"—among middle-aged and older folk, rather than among the young who escaped Hitler and other indoctrinees.

One factor tending to keep German hatred of Jews within narrow today was that they did not want to offend the United States, where they would be affronted at anti-Semitism.

Many Nazis have "gone to ground" and Hulme—at the outset of his study—was warned by German friends that he might not be able to meet such persons. He was more fortunate than they expected, however, and he found a great quenling in intellectual circles for information on the Nazi period. There was no "conspiracy of silence."

Incidentally Hulme, who was born in Orillia, Ont., and educated in Toronto, saw West Germany's leading stage actress, Maria Becker, performing in the lead role of one of his plays in a Swiss television production.

MANY VISIT DACHAU

This is the role of Sharon O'Connor in Displaced Affections. Hulme, who has lived in Britain since 1952, has had plays produced in England, Ireland and West Germany and hopes to see a production in Canada, especially during Expo 67.

Still immersed in research, he has not yet begun writing his new play which will deal with events leading to the war and the leading persons involved. He is absorbed in the complexities of the German character.

"The Germans are, of course, a cock-a-hoop race, full of confidence. Although the general opinion is that the young are an entirely different lot than their fathers—that they never know the Nazi period and have no interest in it—I noticed a tremendous number of young people visiting Dachau, the notorious concentration camp."

At Dachau Hulme had a strange conversation with a group of middle-aged German women, when he asked directions to the old camp.

"I suppose you get a great many tourists here," said Hulme.

"Yes, you indeed," she replied.

"Why do you think they come?"

"They come because we have a beautiful English garden here."

Many Arguments for, Against Canadian Membership in OAS

By ARCH McKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Scratch most Latin American diplomats and you bare arguments for Canadian membership in the Organization of American States.

But it's coupled with considerable cautiousness about mounting any pressure play. That applies to the United States state department and the bureaucracy of the 20-nation OAS itself.

So, when Secretary-General Jose A. Mora of the OAS visits Ottawa next Monday to address the Western Hemisphere regional meeting of the International Labor Office, he is not expected to expound on his long-nourished hopes for Canadian entry.

The fact that Ottawa is the host for this eighth ILO regional session is a symptom of interest. All others have been held in Latin America.

Dr. Mora, in the ninth year of a 10-year term, made his own position plain a few years ago when he said:

"The member countries of the organization have always considered Canada a natural force whom a place is ever ready in all the organs of our regional institution. Canada's contribution to progress is such as to assign it a place of first rank in the Western Hemisphere.

OLD CHAIR WAITING

A dusty old Spanish - style chair bearing Canada's name and coat of arms, fashioned in 1910 when the Pan-American Union Building was built here, still sits in an attic waiting. In fact, the weekly meetings of the OAS use Danish modern chairs fitted with removable name plates.

Meanwhile, Canadian interest in Latin America has been expanding — in the form of aid and to some extent trade, although there are criticisms that Canadian businessmen could bustle up more trade with little trouble.

Latin American hopes of Canadian entry to the OAS have been stimulated by both the former Progressive Conservative government and the present Liberal one.

The former external affairs minister, Howard Green, visited after a Latin American tour a few years ago that Canada might find itself outside regional ties if it kept talking shape these. External Affairs Minister Paul Martin has been the leading exponent of Canadian entry within OAS. It is a question which has divided the federal cabinet.

Qualified Latin American observers here say they think their main reason for desiring Canadian membership—the addition of a voice which they think would be useful in playing off the power of the U.S.

Less frequently stressed, although perhaps as important, is a desire for regional alliance ties with Canada for aid purposes. Canada now has $30,000,000 deposited with the Inter-American Development Bank being put to development work with headquarters in Ottawa.

Martin in June raised the sum to $90,000,000 and said more than $200,000,000 would be available by the year 2000—a figure which many observers consider conservative.

But, say some Canadian observers, the OAS itself must demonstrate that membership has yielded substantial trade benefits.

Again, would OAS membership for Canada create friction in relations with the U.S. over such delicate developments as the rise of Fidel Castro in Cuba or the unconstitutional American intervention in the Dominican Republic?

The ready response is two fold: Canadian opinion would have more weight about such events inside the OAS than outside; Mexico's refusal to follow the U.S. lead in severing relations with Cuba, or sanctioning the Dominican intervention, has not harmed American-Mexican relations.

However, as one Latin American source put it: "The ball now is in Canada's court."

WOOLER—Mrs. S. L. Terrill, Mrs. Robert Read, Mrs. (Dr.) Wilson and Mrs. Vera Treal, attended the flower show in Brighton on Saturday.

Miss Annie Richards with Mrs. L. E. Bryant spent the weekend with Mrs. Blake Richards and daughter Verna at Consecon.

Mr. and Mrs. Leighton and two little daughters of Toronto spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry McColl.

MOIRA — Moira United Church opened its new membership in the Organization of American States.

Sharp's Plan Opposed by Labor Leaders

TORONTO (CP)—Labor leaders Friday said organized labor will not voluntarily comply with Finance Minister Sharp's proposal that annual wage increases be restricted to four or five per cent, under a similar ceiling on profits and prices is enforced.

BEST CATTLE

William Mahoney, Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America, said Mr. Sharp's proposal is unfair in that workers in industries where the profit increase had been more than 10 per cent would get a relatively small increase while underpaid workers would get virtually nothing.

L. M. (Casey) Dodds, Canadian director of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers (Ind.), said he is opposed to Mr. Sharp's proposals because in many cases they are using up for renewal the wage rates are as much as $1 an hour below the prevailing rates in industry.

QUEBEC (CP) — Henri Joly, president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, Friday expressed the association's support for Finance Minister Sharp's announced program for fighting inflation.

One of the anti-inflation decisions—the postponing until 1968 of a new medical insurance program—will give authorities a chance for more adequate preparation of such a program, Mr. Joly in a statement.

He said he regrets "that the increase in production is largely absorbed by exorbitant wage increases obtained through extreme pressure."

Name Fair Horse, Cattle, Sheep Winners

R. 3, Napanee, had the best mare or gelding three years old, Clark Trent of Oak-ville the best team, and H. Scrimshaw of Yarker the best heavy stallion in the show. Many Special Attractions At Mohawk Fall Fair

TYENDINAGA — All that is needed is good weather to bring a record crowd to the Mohawk Fair Saturday, September 10. The fair has a character of its own, with many special attractions, some of them no longer used by other fairs, but all the more attractive to this generation when brought to the stage of perfection at which the Mohawks aim.

The Colborne Baton and Corps Band will be in attendance for the day, and the Canadian Indian Dancers of Toronto will demonstrate various tribal dances. The dancers are members of several different tribes, Cree, Ojibway, Ottawa and Mohawk, now working and living in Toronto who have banded together to preserve the traditions of their elders.

At one time every small fair featured school parades and exhibits, and, while exhibits are still shown, there are seldom school parades. The four schools on the Reserve make elaborate plans for the big day, and vie with each other in creating colorful costumes and in marching. The exhibits are always of interest and the articles of surprisingly good quality, as the Indian, by nature, is a good craftsman. The children are especially skilful in crafts, and the art is above the ordinary for children of any particular age.

HORSE FOR SALE

There will be indian work for sale on the grounds, and there will be Indians in costume mingling with the crowd- the three best-dressed receiving prizes. There are rides for kiddies, a nail - driving contest, and a free turkey supper for the oldest couple on the grounds, and for the couple coming from the greatest distance.

It is a great home - coming event for the members of the band, and all who can possibly get away will be there, many from the Buffalo district, and from other points in the United States. Last year one lady from nearly 100 years old came from Tonawanda.

It is one of the big days of the year for the Mohawk's, a day they never can take pride in their accomplishments, when they can meet friends and relatives living at a distance, but perhaps most noteworthy of all, a day when their inherit gift of showing hospitality can be extended to the public, Indian and non-Indian alike.

COME FLY WITH ME — This combination of helmet and umbrella has been dubbed a "helmetta" by its Japanese manufacturer. But the gadget, although suggested for use in rainy climes, has yet to be tested in high winds . . . a situation which could promote sightings of unidentified flying objects. (CP Wirephoto)

South Africans Pay Tribute To Verwoerd

By ANTHONY BAKER

PRETORIA (Reuters)—South Africans prepared to pay a last tribute to assassinated Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd in a massive and solemn state funeral here today.

About 200,000 persons were expected to turn out either to attend the services or to line the streets as the cortege, including two military bands, at most 2,000 troops, police, naval and armored cars and gun tractors, passes by.

Overhead, a formation of airforce jets spelling out the letters H.V. was to fly past at 3,000 feet.

Millions throughout the country were expected to close down all business and listen to the services on the radio.

Two ceremonies were scheduled—a memorial service at an open amphitheatre and a burial service in Heroes' Acre, where many prominent South Africans are buried.

It was not yet known whether non - whites would be put in segregated areas for the funeral of the man who led the system of racial separation which angered worldwide controversy.

CHIEF TO ATTEND

Among those—whites due to attend the funeral were Chief Kaiser Matanzima, prime minister of the Transkei first "bantustan" areas set up by Verwoerd under South Africa's "apartheid" plan to keep the nation's 14,000,000 non - whites separate from its 3,320,000 whites.

Seating for 10,000 was arranged at the amphitheatre where a service of Afrikaans and English was scheduled.

Afterward, a 19-gun salute was to boom out as a gun-carriage bearing the coffin moved off at the head of the cortege to the cemetery.

Rev. C. W. H. Bosboff, one of Verwoerd's sons-in-law, was to conduct the burial service. Rev. Bosboff, along with Verwoerd's five sons, a brother and another son-in-law were to carry the coffin to the grave.

The prime minister was stabbed to death by a white parliamentary messenger, Dimitrio Tsafendas, in Parliament Tuesday.

Hospital Official Opening Climaxes Years of Efforts

NAPANEE — Today was the official opening of the Lennox and Addington Hospital. The hospital has been in operation since March but the official opening ceremonies in front of the hospital at 2. p.m. marked the climax of years of effort.

Since that spring day when the hospital admitted its first patient, it has been a boon to hundreds. Up to August 21, 730 patients had been treated there, 90 babies born there, and there had been 38 deaths.

The hospital was 31.3 per cent occupied in April, 67.3 per cent in May, 68.3 per cent in June and 72.2 per cent in July. The average length of stay for patients, medical and surgical, was nine days, 5.4-days for obstetrical patients and 8.3 days for babies.

There were 390 minor and 43 major operations performed up to July 31, and 3,315 persons were treated in the outpatient department during that time.

Up to the end of July, the radiology department has performed 4,141 films and made 1,482 examinations, and the laboratory units totalled 11,500.

The Lennox and Addington County Hospital has a full-time staff of 30 with an average monthly payroll of $37,982.

Viet Nam Election Success

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP)—Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said today that 80 per cent of South Viet Nam's voters had turned out for the general elections which spelled "the beginning of the end for the Communists."

The general in charge of the elections said some of the voters cast blank ballots of protest.

"We now have the conditions for final victory," the premier said at a press conference at which all members of the ruling military council appeared.

The new assembly of 117 representatives elected to write a new constitution will meet Sept. 20 and Ky said they should finish their work "as soon as possible."

The new assembly, as announced by Maj.-Gen. Nguyen Duc Thang, who was in charge of the elections, included 22 teachers, 20 military men, 18 civil servants, 17 provincial councillors, 9 professional people, eight farmers, three judges and three others.

Only one woman, of 36 female candidates, was successful. The average age of the assembly is 40.

Thang said that on election day there were 5,280,822 eligible voters. Of this number 4,274,812 went to the polls.

GAVE NO FIGURES

Thang admitted that among the voters some cast blank ballots of protest, but said the number was far smaller than the 15 per cent who cast defaced ballots in the 1965 provincial elections. He gave no figure, however.

Ky said "never before have the Communists tried as hard to sabotage anything as they did yesterday. Never before have they failed as yesterday.

"This announces the beginning of the end for the Communists."

Chief of State Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu said: "The final victory over the Communists is drawing near."

Nuclear Test Blast "Clean"

From Reuters-AP

PAPEETE, Tahiti (CP)—Informed sources reported today that France's third Pacific nuclear test was in the 100- to 200-kiloton range—equivalent to 100,000 to 200,000 tons of conventional explosive—and was "clean" with practically no fallout.

President de Gaulle watched the explosion from the bridge of the cruiser de Grasse only 7½ miles away.

The atomic device was launched shortly from a balloon at the French Polynesian atoll of Mururoa at an altitude of about 1,900 feet. Officials said it was the largest French nuclear explosion to date.

Informed sources here said that U.S. planes took samples of radiation from the blast. At least one American submarine was detected nearby.

The experiment was one of a continuing series designed to give France the hydrogen bomb as soon as possible. France is expected to test its first H-bomb by 1968.

HAS TO WAIT

De Gaulle had to wait an extra day aboard the cruiser as unfavorable wind conditions forced a 24-hour postponement of the test, originally set for sunrise Saturday.

De Gaulle flew to Mururoa Atoll, 800 miles from Papeete,

Astronauts Begin Rendezvous With Target

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—The Gemini 11 astronauts successfully linked up with an Agena satellite high over the United States today, climaxing a dramatic space chase in which they caught their target in record time.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) The Gemini 11 astronauts thundered into orbit today, ending three days of frustrating delay, and began stalking an Agena satellite in space at five miles a second.

U.S. Navy Cmdr. Charles (Pete) Conrad Jr. and Lt.-Cmdr. Richard F. Gordon Jr. aimed their spacecraft and link up with the Agena in record time.

The seasoned pilots, who endured two postponements last week and a last-minute, quarter-hour delay of their scheduled three days in space, relied on sensitive instruments and their judgment as flyers to seek out the target.

"You are go for M equal one," the control centre told the astronauts as their tiny Gemini spaceship, boosted into space by a Titan II rocket, swept into orbit more than 100 miles above the earth.

"M equal one" is the designation for Gemini 11's plan to rendezvous with the Agena target satellite in the first orbit.

"Roger," replied Command Pilot Conrad.

As the Titan booster rocket rose skyward, green lights flashed across the boards in the control centre in Houston, Tex.

"Everything looks good," the control centre told the astronauts about half way through the six-minute flight of the Titan II.

"We're right down the middle, the flight dynamics officer reported.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the liftoff time was only one-half second late.

The fiery double-shot launch, scrubbed twice last week, ran into a final problem just two minutes before the lift-off of the Atlas-Agena target vehicle.

Technicians could not cast the spacecraft hatch on Conrad's. They reopened it, then closed it again and finally pronounced it

Tires Slashed On Former Chief's Car

FRANKFORD, Ont. (CP) — Two slashed tires on the former police chief's car caused a blowout and a nasty accident on the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway Saturday.

William Hockley, who resigned in August over "political interference," says someone is out to get him.

When he checked the tire after the blowout he found a four-inch knife slash in it.

"When I got home I checked my wife's car and found two tires slashed as well."

Frankford is 14 miles northwest of Belleville.

Fate of Commonwealth In Balance as Wilson Yields Little Ground

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Wilson responded today to Commonwealth demands for tougher action against white-supremacist Rhodesia amid indications that the future of the multi-racial organization is in the balance.

The conference of 22 Commonwealth leaders adjourned after a 75-minute morning session in an atmosphere of tension.

The so-called African caucus went immediately into session at MacDonough House, Commonwealth headquarters, to decide on whether to accept Wilson's policy, which apparently envisages that rebellious Rhodesia might one day get legal independence under majority rule—that is, Negro rule.

Arnold Smith, Canadian secretary-general of the Commonwealth, summoned reporters to state that "there will be no discharge at this stage of anything said today by any delegation."

Canada's Prime Minister Pearson said Wilson's 30-minute speech was "a very comprehensive and, I thought, quite helpful review of the British position.

"The conference agreed, however, that nothing should be said about the substance of the statement until it has been discussed by the conference."

PLAN MORE SESSIONS

The conference scheduled further afternoon and evening sessions on a restricted basis—that is, with only the heads of delegations and one adviser each present, instead of the regular delegations of four or five members each.

Pearson, leading a move to find a middle way between Wilson's stand and African demands on Rhodesia, conferred briefly with the British leader after the 75-minute morning session, at Wilson's request.

Before the morning meeting, Pearson made a last - minute personal appeal to Zambia's foreign minister, Simon Kapwepwe, at breakfast, making a hasty decision on walking out of the conference.

The Canadian leader attended a previously-scheduled luncheon given by the Zambian delegation, which has been working with the Canadians for a compromise between the demands of delegations, who also are invited to an early-evening reception by Secretary - General Smith.

The eight African delegations met at Marlborough House in the morning session in a move in which President Milton Obote of Uganda has been prominent. Obote has tended to side with Pearson's moderate, mediating line against the conference opened last Tuesday. The three Caribbean delegations were invited to the caucus.

SHIFTS ONLY SLIGHTLY?

Before Wilson spoke at the morning meeting, British informants had indicated he would shift only slightly towards meeting African demands for tougher economic

Ottawa and Quebec Likely To Clash Over Tax Share

QUEBEC (CP)—This week's meeting of Canada's tax structure committee, following so closely upon Finance Minister Sharp's rejection of demands by the provinces for a bigger share of taxes, may be the occasion for the sharpest-ever clash between Quebec and Ottawa since Confederation, Quebec government sources said Sunday.

They recalled that Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec said Friday his team at the talks will be a "very aggressive one."

Mr. Sharp announced last week that the federal government will be forced by its financial situation in the years ahead to turn down the demands from those provinces seeking a bigger share of taxes gleaned from their inhabitants.

Premier Johnson replied to this by comparing the federal government to a hockey team which had launched an attack before the other team was on the rink.

He said: "Play starts only Wednesday, when the teams of other provinces will be on the ice. Quebec is well-prepared for the game. We have a very aggressive team."

Strike Threat Ended

TORONTO (CP) — Settlement in the dispute between United Steelworkers of America and International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., was reached here Sunday night, but long to-day shut down its Sudbury operation while pickets at the Port Colborne plant were turning workers away.

Inco and representatives of the 18,200 steelworkers reached a tentative contract agreement about half an hour before a midnight strike deadline. However, before word reached union members picket lines were up at the Copper Cliff smelter and iron ore mine, Levack mine and other mines in the Sudbury area as well as Port Colborne.

A company spokesman at Sudbury said Monday morning that some of the men reporting for the 8 a.m. shift were sent home by pickets. Others were sent home by the supervisory staff.

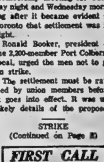
SITUATION FLUID

"Because the Copper Cliff smelter is closed down in this way we cannot take ores," he said. "If we can't operate the smelter there is no purpose in producing any ore.

The situation is still pretty fluid at the moment and picket lines are closing at Copper Cliff and Levack. We hope we can start smelter operations today."

At Port Colborne pickets prevented work from resuming at the 8 a.m. shift today.

Union officials announced Sunday that membership meetings would be called in Sudbury Tuesday and Wednesday to discuss the contract proposals.



Some members of the union's Local 6500 in Sudbury were in the act of setting up picket lines at the Copper Cliff mine when union officials received news of the settlement.

Tony Soden, president of the 18,000 Sudbury local, called a membership meeting for Tuesday night and Wednesday morning after it became evident in Toronto that settlement was in sight.

Ronald Booker, president of the 2,200-member Port Colborne local, urged the men not to go on strike.

The settlement must be ratified by union members before it goes into effect. It was unlikely details of the proposed

Armored Bulldozer Under Hail Of Fire Carries 5 to Freedom

BERLIN (AP)—Under a hail of machine-gun fire, two East German men, their pregnant wives and a four-year-old boy crashed through Communist barbed wire in an armored bulldozer Sunday in a successful flight to West Berlin.

"We stuffed rags into the back of the bulldozer's cabin because we ran out of steel plates," said the 24-year-old driver, a professional bulldozer operator.

West Berlin police said the bulldozer crashed through four barbed-wire fences before running into a tree a few yards inside West Berlin.

They said East German border guards fired more than 100 rounds at the tank-like vehicle.

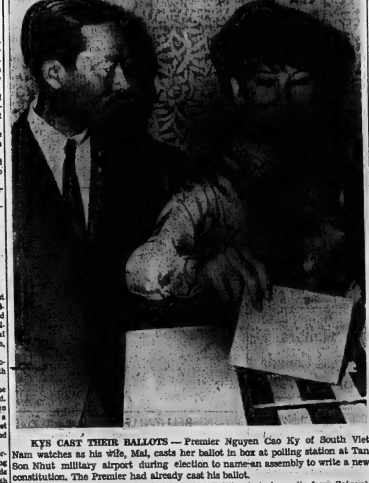
One of the men and one of the women, grazed by the East German bullets, received slight head wounds. They were treated at a West Berlin hospital and released.

The driver told reporters later he got the idea of escaping about two weeks ago but did not begin collecting armor plates until Saturday.

"We wanted to break through last night, but we weren't finished with the welding," he said.

The gas tank and the windows were armored plated.

Besides the driver, police said the others were his wife, 26, their four-year-old son, a friend, 26, and his wife, 25. Police said both women were pregnant.



The spectacular escape was staged at midmorning into the British sector of Spandau.

West Berlin police said East German guards spotted the bulldozer from a watchtower and began firing. Thirty-eight bullets hit the vehicle and several pierced the thin steel protection, police said.

Two border guards ran toward the barbed wire fence with sub-machine-guns blazing.

"We had to get out of the bulldozer," the driver said. "The women jumped first, then we pulled up the bottom of a (bordering garden) fence, let the women crawl through, and followed after them."

Police said the two East German men had done the welding in a garage about 800 yards from the border where both were employed.

ARTHUR J. HOLSEY

TRENTON — Rev. A. J. Payton conducted the funeral service for Arthur J. Holsey of Wooler Road, Saturday, Sept. 10, in the Weaver Funeral Home. Interment was at Mount Evergreen Cemetery.

Bearers were three sons, John, Gordon and Arthur Holsey, and three grandsons Howard, Brian and David Holsey.

In failing health for the past four years, Mr. Holsey died Wednesday, September 7, in the Trenton Memorial Hospital. He was in his 90th year.

Born in Athol, Ontario, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Holsey, he spent his lifetime in the Trenton district. Educated in Consecon schools, he was a retired house painter and a former baker. Mr. Holsey belonged to the United Church.

Predeceased by his wife, Minnie E. Holsey, he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Stanley (Margaret) Terry of Belleville, five sons, Gordon of Hamilton, Edward and Murray of Windsor, John of Oakville and Arthur J. of Trenton, seven sisters, Mrs. Nettie Longwell of Foxboro and Mrs. Robert Brook of Consecon, 16 grandchildren and twenty great-grandchildren.

Museum Seeks Help with Odd Request

Museum officials here are accustomed to requests for information, or genealogical research, to give it its formal name. Almost every week the museum receives a request for information on early settlers of the district for inclusion in the family tree. Usually officials have been successful in finding a record of the people sought.

But Mrs. Frawley has a gentleman from Florida, has officials stymied.

He is looking up the family tree of a cow.

Or of two cows, to be exact, named Victoria Maid and Victoria Burke.

Both were purebred Holstein-Friesians, sold by Irwin Hamilton of Napanee at the annual Holstein-Friesian Auction Sale in Belleville Arena in the spring of 1906 or 1910.

The Florida gentleman's father, then living in the Brighton district, bought the cows as part of a herd improvement scheme. He has a bill of sale as proof of the two Victorias' pure bloodline, so their progeny may take their proper place in the exclusive Holstein-Friesian socield registers. In search of breeder's records has drawn a blank. He needs a photostatic copy of the page in the sale catalogue of 1909 or 1910 (he isn't sure of the year) on which Victoria Maid and Victoria Burke are listed.

Anyone who might have copies of the Holstein-Freisan Sale Catalogue of those years, be asked to call the museum at 962-3731. Officials there would like to borrow the book long enough to photograph the page, and maintain their unblemished record for always coming up with an ancestor — whether human or bovine.

At 10:42 a.m. Gemini 11 prepelled Gemini 11 into orbit.

The Agena flashed over Cape Kennedy at the end of the first four years, Mr. Holsey died Wednesday, September 7, in the Trenton Memorial Hospital. He was in his 90th year.

"Around The Cat"

There were 13 rinks in play in the treble tourney staged by the Trenton Bowling Club on the Belleville Greens on Saturday and the Belleville rinks took the majority of the top prizes. A rink of George Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Orlo Smith won the lone-game high count while a rink of Claude Tice and Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Avery won the second place. Bill VanTassel with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Graham won the two-game high while a rink of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Buck of Kingston with Bill Fuller of Trenton won the one-game count. The games were lightning fast and the competition exceptionally keen in all the games.

Bill VanTassel and Jack Tory won the Blue Jay Trophy at the Brighton recently with Orlo Smith and Jack Avery in second. A rink of Mrs. Pearl Legault, Mrs. Vera McIntosh with Mrs. Thelma Flagiboon of Belleville in the second three-game high count as Melting and Mrs. Vera Graham back of the host club won the tourney. Mrs. Chamberlain and Mrs. Ida Cruickshank were runners-up.

Veterans Hold Decoration Day Service

Under brilliant, sunny skies the Decoration Day Parade was held under the supervision of Marshal Lieut. Colonel Christopher. Led by the combined color party of the Royal Canadian Legion, Pte. Avery and Air Force Veterans and their Ladies' Auxiliaries with martial music furnished by the Duke of Edinburgh Unit Pipe Band, the parade was a colorful spectacle marching to the Mount Dora Kyle where the service was conducted by the Ven. A. S. McConnell, B.A., Rector of Trinity Church.

In his address he emphasized the fact that it was a very good thing that the veterans and organizations kept up Decoration Day Services as it was a reminder to those who were prone to forget the sacrifices and sufferings of the comrades who gave up their to set the Canadian way of life. Shortly after the Agena achieved orbit, the control centre reported that a protective shroud that covered the docking apparatus had jettisoned. The failure of a similar shroud to fall away prevented the Gemini 8 astronauts from linking up with their Agena target satellite last June.

The space walk was scheduled Tuesday and the space stand and the core experiment were set for Wednesday.

Splashdown was planned for 8:36 a.m. Thursday in the western Atlantic about 725 miles southeast of Cape Kennedy.

Conrad and Gordon are the 22rd and 24th Americans rocketed into space. The Russians have launched 24 men into orbit but have not sent a man up since March 18, 1965.

Gemini 12, scheduled Oct. 31, will close out the Gemini program. It also will be a three-day rendezvous and space walk mission.

56 Fatalities Across Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

At least 56 persons were killed accidentally in Canada during the weekend, 43 in traffic, five drowned, two died in fires and six in unclassified incidents.

A Canadian Press Survey from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday, local times, showed Saskatchewan leading the provinces with 21 fatalities.

Viet Nam

claimed the voting a "smashing victory" because of the big turnout despite a Communist terror campaign.

There was evidence that some provincial and district officials—under pressure from Saigon—had reported some padded ballots.

The government spokesman said, however, that rechecked tabulations would show a final percentage of about 75 per cent. The government said the Viet Cong made 75 attempts to interfere with the election Sunday.

Reports from throughout the country showed that at least 19 persons, including government officials were killed and 126 wounded in terrorist attacks by sniping, mortar shells, hand grenades and mines.

The Viet Cong lost at least 18 killed, three wounded in clashes with the security forces, a government spokesman said.

The rate of incidents was described as five times higher than usual. But most of the violence was confined to certain areas of the densely populated Mekong River delta south of Saigon.

In the capital, the northern mountains and the central highlands, the election passed free of terrorism or sabotage. This was attributed in part to the massive mobilization of government forces to protect the polls.

Officials said 67 per cent of the registered electorate turned out to vote in Saigon.

Three prominent South Vietnamese politicians failed to win seats in the election. They were among 18 victors in Saigon, including 10 military officers, businessmen, teachers, a chemist, a newspaper man, a doctor, an engineer and a lawyer.

IS BEST KNOWN

The best known successful candidate in Saigon was Phan Khac Suu, 39, who was the last civilian chief of state, who held office during a succession of military and civil governments in 1964 and 1965.

The voters chose 108 members of the constituent assembly. Nine others are to be filled by mountain tribes who will use their traditional election procedures. There were 530 candidates. Known Communists or neutralists were banned from running.

The assembly will have six months to draw up a new constitution after it meets Sept. 26 to replace the one which was abrogated by Premier Nguyen Cao Ky.

Then more elections are to be held to fill whatever offices the constitution sets up. Almost certainly the country will eventually end up with a presidency and a balancing legislature.

Ky, today's top celebrity set to go off election day, exploded today near a voting place in Saigon wounding five persons. Another grenade attack possibly prompted by the elections badly damaged a textile executive and his driver.

Medicare Plan Postponement Is Opposed

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Finance Minister Sharp's decision to postpone the federal medicare plan for a year was attacked from within his own party Saturday as 48 Liberals, including members of Parliament and the Ontario legislature, held a conference here.

The party's Ontario leader, Andrew Thompson, said he would fight to have the plan restored to its original timetable at the Liberal convention in Ottawa next month.

Brighton Farmers Complain of Thefts

TRENTON — In the past week officers of the Ontario Provincial Police, Brighton Detachment, patrolled 4,950 miles, laid 36 charges under the Highway Traffic Act, issued 13 warnings, checked 71 vehicles, laid 2 charges under Criminal Code of Canada and laid 4 charges under the Liquor Control Act. During this time they investigated 9 motor vehicle accidents in which one person was injured and $6,4 damage in connection with those mishaps.

Although the Brighton Detachment Office received no complaints in the past week the majority of them were of a minor nature such as found property, stray dogs, and even a lost cow which was later found by the owner. On Sept. 9th, 1966 approximately $900.00 worth of corners equipment and clothing was stolen from a vehicle while it was parked at the B.A. Service Centre, 401 Highway, Prov. Const. J. Martin who is investigating this theft states that the vehicle was entered by breaking the right window.

Officers of the Brighton Detachment have been investigating a growing number of reports of thefts of fruit, corn and other farm produce in Prince. A great number of people seem to think because there is no fence around an orchard or garden they can walk in and help themselves. To date there have been complaints during racing on the Wooler Road. Police point out that private patrol is being made in that area and offenders will be arrested and charged.

Rubbish Fire Causes Heavy Smoke Damage

A mid-afternoon rubbish fire at the rear of Yolles Furniture on Front Street brought out all the city's fire fighting equipment Sunday.

The blaze, apparently starting in a pile of rubbish outside a rear loading area, burned through a boarded up window and caused smoke damage inside the store.

Department officials said it was fortunate that the fire started during daylight hours as had it gotten inside the store before being discovered could have resulted in heavy loss.

There was no estimate of the smoke damage inside the store.

Shortly before noon on Sunday firemen were called to fight a fire in a garage at the Faulkner property at the corner of Dufferin and Bridge Streets.

Firemen said the garage was badly damaged and would undoubtedly have to be torn down.

Vimy Battle To Be Doubly Commemorated

The fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of Vimy Ridge which began on April 9th, 1917, will be commemorated in ceremonies to be held simultaneously at the National War Memorial in Ottawa and at the Vimy Memorial in Vimy Park, Arras, France, on April 9, 1967, the Honorable Roger Teillet, Minister of Veterans Affairs announced.

Early on Easter Monday, 1917, the Canadian Corps, assisted by a British division and the Royal Artillery, took Vimy Ridge in one of the most carefully rehearsed operations of the First World War. By noon, the Germans had lost the Ridge, their counter-attacks were being broken up and the Canadians were beginning to exploit and consolidate their gains. For, the rest of the war, Allied possession of this commanding feature was never in jeopardy.

The Vimy Memorial, Canada's best known memorial abroad, was unveiled on July 26, 1936 by the former King Edward VIII who described it as "a memorial to no man but to a nation." The Memorial bears the names of 11,285 Canadians killed in World War I whose last resting places are unknown.

CNR Traffic Control Panel At Ottawa to Be Moved Here

Ottawa

day is due to examine fiscal arrangements for the period from 1967 to 1972.

The tax policy of the Johnson government is based on the recommendations contained in the report of the Tremblay Commission—published in 1956 —which was set up by the former Quebec government of the late Maurice Duplessis.

The Tremblay recommendations called for Quebec to retain 100 per cent of income tax gathered in the province, 200 per cent of corporation tax, and 100 per cent of the deductions for social security.

At present, Quebec retains 47 per cent, ten per cent, and 75 per cent respectively of these taxes.

But some observers here feel the Johnson government will be more compromising over ways of applying the demands—and obtaining details — than on their exact nature.

So far, Mr. Johnson has not elaborated on how he intends to go about retaining all direct taxes in Quebec, although he made it a rallying point in the campaign preceding last June's provincial election.

BANANA JAMS WORKS

NEW DELHI (AP) — The price of a banana cost 166,000 man-hours of work in an Indian ammunition factory. The defence production minister told Parliament. The factory was closed for five days after workers battled with nearby shackdwellers when a man complained a squatter overcharged him for a banana.

Some time before the end of this year automatic switching equipment at the Rideau Area Headquarters in Belleville will be controlling all CN train movements between Ottawa and Montreal.

Also at the same time, automatic equipment will be controlling train movements between Montreal and Coteau.

This will all be made possible by the re-location here of the central traffic control panel now at Ottawa, which controls train movements between that centre and Montreal. Control of trains on the Montreal-Coteau section will be added to the panel.

Rideau Area Manager R. J. Fast said the re-location of the automatic equipment would mean a more efficient system of controlling train movements and was part of a continuing program which each year sees more trackage controlled by automatic switching.

For the time being despatchers here will continue to despatch trains between Coteau and Oshawa.

The central traffic control panel will be set up in the former express department building now constructed a few years ago.

MOVE FREIGHT OFFICE

Last week the CN express and freight departments moved into their new warehouse building at the east end of the Belleville railway yards, thus making room for installation of the central traffic control panel.

Mr. Fast said re-location of the automatic switching panel would mean a small increase in the number of personnel at Belleville.

"It will possibly mean about one more despatcher for each eight-hour shift," he said.

At present at Belleville, including the chief despatcher and two men, there are 12 despatchers working in the city.

Re-location of the central traffic control panel, now at Ottawa, is but one phase of a long list of changes which have given Rideau Area a headquarters a new look in the past few years.

These have included complete renovation of the station ticket office and administration departments; improvement in the parking facilities for both CN workers and railway customers, and construction of a new transport loading ramp.

Also a new baggage and telegraph department is added and most recently the new freight and express warehouse on Bridge St. east, end of the yards.

Mr. Fast said both departments were now working from the new warehouse. Official opening ceremonies for the new CN warehouse are planned for October 16th.

Last fall the railway bridge and building department offices were moved to a small bungalow type building on Bridge St.

A new Credit Union office is under construction north of the CN tracks almost immediately opposite the station, and will be into use later this year.

The old Credit Union office, (at one time used as a boiler house) will be torn down and the area landscaped, in keeping with the other landscaped area at the Station Street entrance to the station.

Queen to Visit Expo

While in London for the Commonwealth conference Prime Minister Pearson extended an invitation to the Queen to visit Expo 67 in Montreal next year, and it is virtually certain that she will attend.

It is fitting that the Queen should come to Canada for the Centennial celebrations. Of all the visits she has made to this country since her accession this will be the most significant, not only from the point of view of national unity but also with regard to Canada's strong role in Commonwealth affairs.

Without Canada's support the Commonwealth would not long survive. It is the largest and wealthiest of the white Commonwealth nations, and second only to Britain in population. Despite the leavening process effected by immigration from many lands in recent years, this country's racial ties with Britain still run deep, and are likely to survive a long time yet.

If the Queen's presence in Quebec inflamed separatist emotions during her last visit, it is to be hoped that no such eruptions will occur in 1967. If they should occur it will be a mockery not only of her sovereign, but of the ideals of unity and nationhood to which this country aspires.

Although noncommittal, Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson seems to have given tacit approval at least to the Queen's visit. He said Prime Minister Pearson had been "considerate enough" to inform him of his plans to invite the head of the Commonwealth, and added: "It is normal that she should come along with the heads of other states.

"Until we have a new constitution she is present in all our laws," said Mr. Johnson.

If the premier's replies on the subject of the Royal visit were guarded, they were at least polite and reasonable. The interest in the reception the Queen was accorded by the people of Quebec City during her 1964 visit.

Colonel McLaughlin

Oshawa's eminent R. S. McLaughlin has celebrated his 95th birthday. Characteristically, he remains as active as ever, and interested in the city where he has spent virtually all of his life.

Those who have lived long in this world, and have served their home communities and the country at large with vigor and distinction, as Colonel McLaughlin has done, often are asked how they have achieved their success and longevity.

His part in the initiation of Oshawa's Centennial project last week may be regarded as the acid test. Former Colonel Sam would give the pushed a silver-plated spade into the ground at the civic auditorium to launch construction of the $1,000,000 centennial swimming pool and recreational complex, but he had requested that there not be pre-advertised for the ceremony. Self-reliance, persistency, concern for others, such qualities are typical of the man.

Colonel McLaughlin had a message for his audience that was worth absorbing. It was symbolic of his own success in life, of faith in his fellow man and in the rising generation.

He said he was raised on Albert Street, and "you couldn't be a lily-pad and live through it.

"They talk about our young people today, but they are no different now than they ever were.

"Boys and girls must have facilities so they can grow up strong and healthy."

Mayor Lyman Gifford echoed these sentiments. "The need for recreational facilities has never been as great as it is today," he said. "That is the trend of the times and it must be accommodated."

That is quite true. There is a need not only for more recreational facilities (in Belleville, the Zwick's Island Centennial project will help to fill the need here), but also for greater interest in recreation, sport, and outdoor exercise in general, on the part of young people.

Inventive British

Britain, for all the economic difficulties in which it finds itself, still retains the inventive genius which has made it a pioneer in the scientific field.

Such modern inventions as the jet engine, automatic landing systems for aircraft, the ejection set for fighter pilots, the angled deck on aircraft carriers, the hovercraft, not to mention radar and television, all originated in Britain.

Now scientists at the Farnborough research station in England have come up with another interesting system — a soft-ground arrester designed to solve the problem of planes overshooting runways. It consists of a pit 400 yards long filled with pebbles.

An RAF Lightning jet was among the aircraft used to test the pebbled "runway." Landing at 80 mph the aircraft quickly came to a halt. And this was accomplished without the plane veering to either side or being thrown off balance.

Significantly, the system is expected to be adopted at airports around the world.

The Turkish assault on Vienna was finally defeated 283 years ago today—in 1683 —when German and Polish armies under Jan Sobieski of Poland raised a two-month siege. The Turks had been raiding Hungary and Austria for 120 years and had once before besieged the city. After this second failure they were driven steadily back eastward. During the next 50 years the Ottoman Empire gave up Hungary, Transylvania, Croatia and Serbia; but there was war between Austria, Poland and Russia over who was to rule the liberated territories.

Pills Which Thin Blood Prevent Clots Forming

By JOSEPH C. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there a special diet for heart patients, and why are pills prescribed to thin the blood? I had a heart attack several months ago and when I left the hospital my doctor started me on such pills. He stressed that I return regularly to have blood tests.

Last week he was out of town so I got an appointment with another doctor. He didn't say anything about my blood being too thick, so I just stopped taking the pills. Am I right?

If you have a booklet on heart trouble I would like to get one.—Mrs. E. H.

There is no special diet for your problem except for two factors: if you are overweight, reducing is very important. In addition, a diet low in animal fats is sometimes prescribed. We do not know definitely whether this helps, but at least it does no harm. In general, a balanced diet which does not gain weight is what you need.

Now as for blood thinning — if a clot lodges in some part of the coronary artery (the one which serves the heart muscle) the result is a heart attack.

Obviously we want to take care that another clot does not form, so we frequently use drugs which reduce the clotting ability of the blood.

But if we reduce the clotting ability, bleeding will not stop as quickly as usual. We prevent the formation of clots, but we slow down the healing of any wound.

You will find further information on this and other matters relating to heart trouble in a booklet, "How to Take Care of Your Heart." To obtain a copy, send 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

Obviously and - consultants must be used with discretion as that small wounds, if they occur will not bleed too much. That is why your doctor was so insistent about having regular checks. He wanted to make sure that the "clotability" of your blood remained high enough for safety.

A special test is necessary to determine this. An ordinary blood count will not show it. Therefore, when you went to another doctor, you should have told him about the pills you were taking so he could make the proper tests.

You should not have stopped taking the pills without your doctor's knowledge and permission. However, I doubt very much that you have harmed yourself.

Heart attacks do not come because the blood is "too thick," but because a clot forms and lodges in a certain place. Your medication is intended to make double sure that such a clot cannot occur while you are still recovering from your attack.

Dear Dr. Molner: Because of kidney stones, my doctor wants me to have some glanda removed from my neck. Is there anything I can do to stop the calcium without surgery? If not, will my voice have to change? Will I be left with a hoarse voice?—M. S.

You probably have references to the parathyroid glands in the neck which control calcium metabolism, and, if overactive, can cause a form of arthritis. Appropriate tests will show whether they are releasing too much calcium. As to a "goiter," that's too big an order. All I can say is that this type of operation usually helps.

Note to Mrs. N. F.: Yes, some women gain overweight at menstruate normally, but it is also true that for some, overweight is the governing cause of menstrual troubles.

Unimpressed by Modern Aids

J. Boulwood in the Christian Science Monitor

It dawned on me a few years ago that unwittingly I had got out of step with the times I lived in. There was our century, the twentieth, an enormous giant among centuries, a fantastic, extravagant creature, and there I was, scarcely, almost guiltily unimpressed.

The realisation began gradually. A friend, a bride of a few months, was displaying her household acquisitions. It was pretty thing to watch as she pointed out gifts and that, handsomed things, replaced them, move them here and there, this color against that color, as fastidiously as the Australian bird which selects only blue and purple and silver objects to decorate its nest. I enjoyed that part.

But then we went into the kitchen and the metal mechanistic orchestra struck up its twentieth - century tune as she manipulated gadgets that whirred and popped, things that rattled, things to open with, things to whisk, bake, slice, chop, mince and grind. Like a conductor bringing in every instrument for a final crescendo, she started up her latest device and set the pace for a peculiar work.

It was then that I side stepped. Outwardly politely engrossed in this culinary pantomime, inwardly I felt like the boy looking at the naked emperor, lacking in awe, devoid of admiration.

Perhaps memory was responsible. In our kitchen used to be a big black pot on a big dark fire, and on winter afternoons we used to watch it as the little potatoes were cooked in their skins to supplement the chicken food. We used to take a few out and eat them hot, dipped in salt. The good slipped off easily; it was no problem at all.

For years we managed very well without all sorts of things we have learned to think we believe are essential.

No Summer at All in 1816

National Geographic Society

Summer never came at all in the dismal year of "eighteen-hundred-and - frost - to-death." Chilly spring of 1926 was nothing compared to that of 1816. The weather 150 years ago turned New England into a frigid disaster area.

Heavy frosts were recorded every month, a blizzard struck in June, ice storms coated trees in July, killing crops and cattle and sheep died, crops failed, farmers perished in snowdrifts.

Scholars variously blamed a volcanic eruption and sunspots for the cold, blankly speculating what would happen if "the sun should become tired of illuminating this gloomy planet."

Curiously, the cold year started with an unseasonably warm January, according to the Old Farmer's Almanac. Three days in May also were abnormally warm. In Salem, Mass., the temperature rose to 101 degrees on May 23.

In June, things changed drastically; Salem's temperature dropped from 82 degrees to 42 degrees overnight. It snowed in many parts of the state. On June 7 a foot of snow blanketed Williamstown.

During the next few days, there were severe frosts every night as far south as Virginia. Snow fell all across New England, in New York, and Ohio.

On June 18, the Danville (Vermont) North Star reported that "on the night of the 6th water froze an inch thick, and in the night of the 7th and morning of the 8th a kind of sleet or excedingly cold snow fell, attended by high wind, and measured in places where it drifted 18 to 20 inches in depth . . . The shoots of leaves of forest trees which were just putting forth, and corn and garden vegetables that were out of the ground were mostly killed."

A Vermont farmer ventured out in the midst of the storm to send his sheep. As he went out the door, he said jokingly to his wife, "If I am not back in an hour, call the neighbors and start them after me. June 8 is a bad month to get buried in the snow." Three days later searchers found his body.

So many birds were frozen that relatively few survivors in New England the next few years. One farmer regularly brought orioles into his kitchen to warm them up.

In many parts of New England the vital corn crop failed. Those who managed to raise some food helped their neighbors. The inscription on a gravestone in Ashland, New Hampshire, reads: "Son of a Revolutionary Soldier, a pioneer of this town. Cold Season of 1816 raised 40 bushels of wheat on this land which kept his family and neighbors from starvation."

Price Index For Shoppers?

Christian Science Monitor

The newspaper sketch of a woman at the checkout counter was meant to be funny. The clerk is telephoning for late news of price rises, while the troubled customer waits to pay. Mrs. Helen Nelson, California's consumer counsel, would like to see this customer helped by providing her comparative data on current prices.

Her proposal for an index of retail food prices for the use of housewives would be difficult to carry out, but it has the merit of showing the need for better information on comparative food costs.

In this time of rising meat and grocery bills, many family shoppers strive to improve their buying ability. Before they go to market they study the weekend food advertisements to find the best buys in meat and the "specials" in other lines.

A local and up-to-the-minute price index could help her greatly. But at present there are no retail food price figures available comparable to those of the commodity exchanges which report instantly the bulk price of corn and wheat.

To ask a local government to provide such a service would be to make one more demand upon its already strained budget. But ways could be found to help if housewives really want such a service. In England a local consumer council is reported setting up a blackboard on a public street on which are chalked comparative prices of major items in named stores and supermarkets.

Mrs. Nelson's proposal raises the question as to whether something of the kind could be done in the United States. Much further study would be needed to find ways of gathering the information and making it useful to the shopper.

U.K. Has Paid A Big Price

Robertson Davies in the Peterborough Examiner

Britain has given the world an extraordinary humanist philosophy of behavior, and has not hesitated to live up to this philosophy even when it cost dearly to do so. But the negative qualities that go with such a philosophy — the conservatism, the cheerful muddle, the amateurism in an increasingly professional world, the lingering snobbery and the failure to recognize facts which leaves London today with 1,500 less hotel rooms than New York — these are costing a dreadful price.

Food Costs Hit Every Home

BBC London Letter

A biological survey of Loch Leven, one of Scotland's famous freshwater lakes, or lochs) is being conducted as part of an international program of research into all aspects of food production in lakes.

Interviewed in the BBC World Service program, "Scotland Today," Dr. Derek Morgan, who is in charge of the Loch Leven survey, Neville Morgan, explained that the aim of the research study was to measure the production of animals and plants in different habitats — in the sea, in fresh waters, on land, and in temperate, tropical and arctic zones. "In this way we will be able to determine what these different types of habitat produce in a whole year in the same way as the farmer knows that his land will produce so many tons of cattle per year or so many tons of barley per acre."

In Scotland, Mr. Morgan said, work was being done in the mountains and freshwater lochs at Lochmoriand studies. At Loch Leven they were hoping to measure the amount of plant life being produced in the area, amount of food for fish, the amount of fish and their food which could usefully be cropped from the Loch. To meet the needs of the world's growing population, different areas could be improved by irrigation, it was hoped to crop the vast resources of the sea properly, and in many tropical countries fish-farming in fresh waters showed a great potential. The survey at Loch Leven would be most helpful in determining what sort of production could be obtained in different areas of the world.

Strictly Personal

"Too Involved"

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Sitting at dinner next to a European concert pianist, I asked him about a comparison of Bible — a symphony conductor who had returned to Europe after a less than successful career in America.

"He is talented," said the pianist, "and he is sincere, but he is excited to his work. There is only one thing wrong—he loves music too much."

This may sound like a strange statement coming from a professional musician, but I understood what he meant. For loving a good thing "too much" means loving it in the wrong way.

I had attended a number of concerts given by this conductor, and I had felt the same way: that he was losing himself, wrapped up in his music, that he adored it, became a part of it, forgetting that it was there for the piece he was interpreting.

But it was precisely this total involvement that kept him from being a great conductor. It warped his sense of discrimination; he was unable to be objective in any given piece, he could not stand back and objectively appraise the orchestra and soloist playing. He lacked two attributes, without which talent is meaningless — coolness and perspective.

What is true for love of music is true for love of children. Pe-

If the coffee has the caffein taken out of it, the production of PFA is five times less.

The list of prohibitables will probably get longer and with it, smuggling, which is going more and more competitive, the day is not long coming when there will be bootleg liquor, after months of research, we'll find that people who drink water and breathe air have a higher incidence of heart disease than those who refrain.

Furthermore, the line ought to be drawn before the medical fraud takes the fun out of living and then forestall the inevitability of dying.

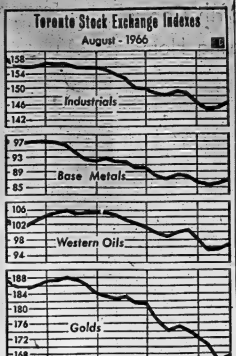
Camp Picton to Stay Open; Guards May Leave in '68

PICTON (Staff) — During recent weeks residents of Picton have been concerned at the frequent rumors that the 1st Canadian Guards may move out, or Camp Picton be closed.

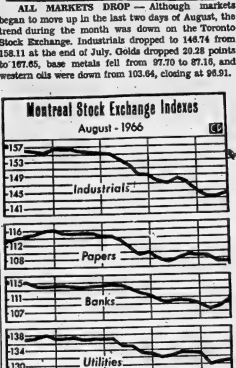
A spokesman at Ottawa's Department of National Defence stated on Friday that Camp Picton is not on the list of bases to be closed, to his knowledge. He noted that there was a possibility of the Guards' pulling out and going to Germany in 1968. Much can happen in defence matters in that length of time and he did not deny that this is a tentative plan. If and when the time should arrive, he said, the normal arrangements are for the unit coming back to exchange with the unit going over.

On this as part of Canada's commitment to NATO at the present time is a battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment. This unit, according to the spokesman, would probably replace the Guards at Camp Picton, if the exchange takes place.



'Mothers of Confederation' Will Perform at Picton

PICTON (STAFF) — On September 20th the Quinte area is to be overtaken by ladies from the past. Picton will be the only host in the district to these "Ladies of the Provinces", and their performance as the "Mothers of Confederation" will be played only the one time in the Quinte district. They will appear at 8.15 p.m. in Edward Collegiate auditorium at 8.15 the night of Sept. 20.



The pageant, under the auspices of the Canadian Centennial Commission, has had outstanding success. The show was presented 37 times in Prince Edward Island in 1964 and in November of that year in Newfoundland.

Back in 1963, as the Prince Edward Islanders prepared for the 1964 celebration of the Charlottetown Conference, Mrs. Alfred McNeill of that city proposed to the Junior Ladies' Aid of the P.E.I. Hospital that their annual fashion show feature a pageant on the Mothers of Confederation. Her thought — "Behind every good man is a woman" or "Behind every Father of Confederation stands a Mother". Her idea caught fire and Mrs. McNeill and her co-workers began their search into the lives and costumes of these First Ladies. For months the history books, archives, records, letters, faded photos and paintings of another era were their constant companions. They were determined to research Canada's Confederation history with strict authenticity. Their studies took them first to Ottawa, New York and the archives of every province of the country. They gathered an immense amount of detailed and accurate information, not only on the women worthy the ladies of that period but also on the characters, personalities and biographies of the ladies that they were to portray. The result was an outstanding success.

Their September tour of Ontario is under the sponsorship of the I.O.D.E., and the pageant is under the auspices of the Canadian Centennial Commission. I.O.D.E. members will be selling tickets for the Picton performance.

Eight hours after the explosion, the president flew over Muroroa.

Two further nuclear tests are planned in the present series, and at least one of them will involve a "cloped" atomic device—one containing thermonuclear material.

The blast climaxed de Gaulle's 27,000-mile round-the-world trip. France's first nuclear explosion was triggered July 2 following de Gaulle's visit to Moscow. A second test came 36 days later and an A-bomb was dropped from a plane without exploding July 25 in a test of the bomb's safety features.

Japan, the only country to be atom-bombed, issued a protest today, terming the French series "very regretful." Japan has protested all testing by the nuclear powers — the United States, Russia, China and France.

In conducting the tests, France has ignored the 1962 Moscow Treaty banning atomic explosions in the atmosphere. Neither France nor China signed the treaty.

ACHIEVE SCIENCE FIRST

NEW YORK (AP) — Communist Chinese scientists have performed a full synthesis of insulin, Dr. Klaus Hofmann reported Sunday. It is the first major scientific achievement to come out of that country, since their atomic development is considered merely a technological feat, said the director of the protein laboratory at the University of Pennsylvania.

Duplicate Bridge Session

Ever since the days when Culbertson revealed that a 4-4 trump fit has greater playing strength than a 5-3 trump fit, the tendency has been to regard almost any four card suit as biddable in the endeavor to find the 4-4 fit. The following deal is interesting as it shows this effort carried to the extreme limit. With a combined count of 26 points, and balanced hands, most North-South pairs would play in three No-Trumps, while the four-four searchers would reach a Four spades contract. Study of the deal reveals the power of the 4-4 trump fit. South dealt as follows:

Pioneer in Birth Control Dies in Nursing Home

Last Tuesday Margaret Sanger, U.S. pioneer in birth control, died in a convalescent home in Tucson, Ariz., only a week before reaching the age of 83. But she lived to see much of the world accept her view that family planning is a basic human right. Here Dr. Alan F. Guttmacher, president of Planned Parenthood - World Population, assesses her impact on the world.

By A. F. GUTTMACHER, MD

NEW YORK (AP) — There will be other great women, but never a second Margaret Sanger.

Her impact on contemporary life is so great that perhaps like an atomic explosion it should be measured in units of megatons.

It was she who convinced the United States and the world that control of human conception is a basic human right and that other human rights must be equally available to all.

It was she who defied the police and persuaded the courts with a thesis, which now has almost full recognition in a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision, that birth control is personal and not legal business.

This was no ordinary woman.

To appreciate fully the impact of Margaret Sanger on her times one must first establish the setting in which she began her work. American women did not have the vote and were to wait another decade before they got it.

WAS WELL QUALIFIED

Margaret Higgins Sanger was the first person in the world to devote a full-time career to the rather restricted goal of democratization of birth control. She was singularly well-endowed and prepared for the task—the bright, witty, attractive, dynamic, Irish - based daughter of a tombstone cutter in northern New York.

Margaret looked forward to college but since family finances were meagre she compromised by getting her nursing degree from the White Plains hospital in New York. She knew genteel poverty first-hand from her own childhood and she knew the tribulations wrought by a succession of unplanned, unwanted pregnancies. Her career as a visiting nurse brought her to the slums of New York. She witnessed deaths from abortion and she saw babies abandoned or die from neglect. All these things deeply affected a sensitive, intelligent woman.

In 1912 Mrs. Sanger decided to devote her life to emancipating women from the servitude of unwanted pregnancies. She prepared for her career in 1914 by going abroad to study contraception in Britain and Holland, which were more advanced in the field than the U.S. While working in the library of the British Museum she coined the term "Birth control."

In 1916 she flooded the repressive birth control statutes of New York state by opening the world's first birth control clinic in the slums of Brooklyn. It was raid by the police nine days later and the closing of the clinic with the destruction of its records is an oft-told tale.

LIKED A FIGHT

Margaret loved a fight. She was a rebel with a cause. What this great woman accomplished in her life can never be forgotten.

The main accomplishments were:

—She established the control of conception as a basic human right that should be equally available to all.

—She proved that the practice of birth control was not a legal matter but a highly personal matter.

—She educated the medical profession into the realization that conception control was a medical matter, a public health measure of first importance.

The debt of the world to this great, courageous lady is beyond reckoning. She gave to all families the legacy of children by choice rather than chance and she gave to the over-populated, starving nations of this harassed world the ray of hope that they can stem the avalanche of hungry mouths before it is too late.

Successful Living

Immature Husband Upsets Boys Training

DEAR DORIS. I am concerned about my girl friend. She is 19 and has two little boys; I think she is doing the best she knows how in managing her children because she has had no experience.

Her children are hard to manage and her husband is away all week. Anything she accomplishes during the week is disrupted by her husband. For example: she nearly had her oldest off the bottle this spring and when her husband came home one Friday night he couldn't stand to hear him cry so he gave the bottle back to him.

This really discouraged her to have this hard task undone when she was also at her wits' end. — CONCERNED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR CONCERNED: Oh dear. When will very young husbands learn that raising children takes two? When one took on a wife he committed himself to helping some babies grow up. Trouble is, he needs to grow up first!

For one thing, he disorganizes the little tot when he reneges on his wife's attempts at training. If he thinks he is being kind to his baby, he is the opposite.

I'd suggest to Teen-age Mom that she back up her objection with word from the experts. The public health nurse would be glad to call in and be quoted; and the child training pamphlets will reinforce her demands for co-operation. These may be had from her local or provincial health department.

NYLON NET KNUCKLE SAVER

Dear Susanna: The expression "ouch" and my scrubbing board were going steady.

Wherever I used the board for certain badly soiled garments, I landed up with red or skinned knuckles.

If this is your refrain, you can change the tune.

Buy or make a heavy nylon net pot scrubber with or without a handle on top and place this between the garment being scrubbed and your fingers. Does a better job on the clothes, too. — Millie W.

Ann Landers

Intense Hostility Calls For Help

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Without a doubt, my husband has the worst speaking habits in the world. Every sentence is connected with "and a" and every other word has an "ah" at the end of it. If he talks a two line joke it has at least seven "you knows" and he is the only one who laughs. A person can get nervous just listening. Everywhere he goes people move away from him.

His posture is disgusting. When he sits down he is so bent over that his nose is in line with his knees. He looks up through his brows to speak and appears to have no neck. I have talked to him about this a couple of times during 20 years of marriage and all he does is glare and tell me I am too critical.

ANN LANDERS

This man is a college graduate and holds a top position. Please tell me what to do about those obnoxious traits. I think his job might be in jeopardy because of them. — HARTFORD WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: You really do despise the man. Your hostility came through so loud and clear it makes my skin crawl.

Get professional help and learn why you hate your husband so intensely. If you understand your feelings perhaps you could build a relationship that would be tolerable, at least. I can tell you that your bitterness has nothing whatever to do with either his posture or his speech habits.

DEAR ANN: Our daughter is 29 and going with a man 33. Neither of them has ever been married.

This man told my husband he is interested in Bessie but he doesn't want to buy a pig in a poke. My husband wanted to fight him for calling Bessie a pig. The man explained that he meant no offense — he only wanted to see samples of her washing and ironing and cooking and like that.

Well, Bessie has been getting up at 6:00 a.m. to bake fancy things (butter is not cheap by the way) and she also rushes home from work to start cooking. The man is a regular eater at her house and he grades the Meals A, B and C.

Our electricity bill is sky high because Bessie is doing his washing and ironing. Frankly I am good and sick of the whole thing!

Bessie has always lived at home and never paid room and board. She has $6,000 saved for the day when she gets married. This is the first man who has asked her. What should I say — if anything? — TIRED MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: Say, "Bessie, if you are going to give free demonstrations, please pay part of the grocery bill as well as the gas and electricity."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please don't tell me to mind my own business because if my sister ruins her life and I don't do anything to stop her it will be on my conscience forever.

Dee is only 15. Last week she told me she hates living at home and will do anything to get away. Yesterday she announced that she's going to marry Chuck — a divorced man whose wife walked out four months ago and left him with an infant son. Chuck is 24. His sister is keeping the baby till Chuck remarries.

We have all talked to Dee until we are blue in the face. She is of age in this state and doesn't need permission to marry. Please tell us what to do. — DESPERATE SISTER.

DEAR DESPERATE: If Dee hasn't gotten married by the time your letter appears in the paper, please ask her to wait one more day — and read tomorrow's column.

SOMETHING SWEET FOR LUNCH

One morning last month there was not one cookie left in the cottage and Barb went of "something sweet" for dessert for lunch, especially for the five children.

After our morning swim and before lunch I examined our grocery shelves and chose several seeds and raspberry jam to make some squares. I gave you another recipe for Jam Squares in August 04 but this is different because I had to use the ingredients we had on hand.

SUMMER 1966 SESAME SQUARES

Bottom Layer:
½ cup butter
½ cup light brown sugar
1 egg
1½ cups (1 cup plus 2 tablespoons) unsifted all - purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt

Topping:
½ cup (approx.) raspberry jam
2 eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
1 package (2½ oz.) sesame seeds

In a bowl cream the butter with the brown sugar until blended. Beat in egg, then flour and salt until smooth.

Spread in even layer in ungreased 8 x 8" or 9 x 9" pan and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 10 minutes.

Remove from oven, let cool a little then spread with a thin layer of raspberry jam (or any desired jam or jelly - apricot is good).

In a bowl beat together the eggs, granulated sugar and sesame seeds and spread this topping mixture evenly and carefully over jam. Bake at 350 deg. Fah. until top is dry and pale gold — about 20 to 30 minutes.

Cool in pan and cut into bars or squares to serve.

Like the '64 Sesame Squares these have a nutty chewy flavor, but the raspberry jam layer makes all the difference.

Note: To hold back a flood of letters asking for my 1964 Sesame Square bars is a list of their ingredients. Method is same as above, but without the jam layer.

sanctions against Rhodesia and a British pledge that majority rule would precede legal independence.

Calculated leaks from a cabinet meeting Saturday and from Wilson's weekend talks with Commonwealth prime ministers and delegation leaders at Chequers, his country home, left many observers convinced Wilson is not prepared to guarantee absolute majority rule in Rhodesia before independence. Many of the African leaders say they will accept nothing less.

Zambia, Rhodesia's neighbor, has been the most militant in its demands for British action.

MAY WALK OUT

There was a strong possibility that Simon Kapwepwe, the Zambian foreign minister would walk out of the conference if President Kenneth Kaunda favored Wilson's proposals too weak.

How many others would follow remained unclear. Prime Minister Sir Albert Margai of Sierra Leone has vaguely threatened to leave the Commonwealth over Rhodesia. But some of the others who have been insisted in their demands on Britain here were not considered likely to take such a drastic step.

Among the delegates, there was continuing discussion during the weekend of the possibility of a compromise along the lines suggested Friday by Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

The Canadian leader indicated he thought it should be possible to find a formula which would provide for constitutional control for the majority Negroes in Rhodesia without immediate universal suffrage—the one-man, one-vote sought by the African leaders—a proposal which has been rejected totally by the Rhodesian whites.

Another of Pearson's suggestions seemed to have greater chances of reaching majority approval at the conference.

SELECTIVE SANCTIONS

Rather than the general mandatory sanctions against Rhodesia which several delegates had suggested be sought through the United Nations, Pearson proposed selective sanctions which would hit the most crucial of Rhodesia's trade and yet avoid an open clash with South Africa and Portugal.

Wilson was reported ready to go along with this and it seemed to be gathering increasing favor among other delegations.

The British prime minister played a close hand during the weekend, when he entertained groups of Canadians at Chequers.

Without making his position completely clear—and, apparently, disappointing several of his guests by being reticent about the whole Rhodesia question—Wilson managed to leave the impression that the British government was not prepared to guarantee majority rule explicitly before independence.

Even if Wilson proved more tractable about the African demands on majority rule than many observers suspected, the conference was unlikely to be left with the Rhodesian question before Tuesday.

Since there has not even been the usual review of world and Commonwealth affairs yet Rhodesia has been the only item discussed in four days of sittings—there was little prospect of giving detailed study to any other problems before the scheduled adjournment Thursday.

BLOCK MASS BREAK

SANTIAGO (AP) — With tear gas and bullets, Chilean police blocked a mass prison break early Sunday. Six convicts escaped at the height of a gun battle, but two were recaptured and one Sunday in a munitions factory next to the prison. The prison holds 1,500 prisoners.

Population Shifts, Booming Economy in South Viet Nam Cause of Health Problems

There were 7,000 cases of cholera in the South Vietnamese capital of Saigon during the first eight months of this year. A Canadian Press reporter describes the health problems of the war-torn country.

By DOUGLAS AMARON

SAIGON (CP) — Cholera and plague and removal of the conditions that breed them are among the major health problem in South Viet Nam.

The war and two of its adjuncts—population shifts and the booming economy—make it difficult to meet that problem but the World Health Organization given full marks to the South Vietnamese government for trying.

The Canadian government has allocated more than $1,000,000 to medical aid here this year and in the last few weeks 300,000 doses of oral vaccine against polio and the first of 10 pre-packaged emergency hospital units have arrived.

In addition, work has begun on a Canadian-supported tuberculosis clinic at Quang Ngai, 325 miles north of here, and Canada is assisting the medical faculty at the University of Hue, 125 miles further to the north.

Canadian religious groups such as Les Freres de St. Jean de Dieu, who operate a hospital for refugees 18 miles north of Saigon, also join the continuing struggle for better health.

CAN'T GET NURSES

But there are a drop in the bucket in relation to the needs of a country where, in addition to war-related diseases, there are the usual Southeast Asian ailments such as malaria, dengue fever, typhoid and dysentery.

A shortage of trained personnel and lack of money are major drawbacks in the battle against disease. Young people who normally might enter health and welfare services are drafted into the forces as soon as they leave university.

Those who are available are grabbed up quickly by foreign companies, rapidly expanding in the war-boom economy, whose salary scale sometimes is more than double what the Viet Nam government can offer.

Dr. S. F. Harriman, regional director for the W.H.O., said a nurse's starting salary after 12 years of school and three of nursing training is 2,000 piastres a month, about $26 in Canadian terms, although of course worth more in spending power. She can reach a maximum of 5,000 piastres after 20 years.

"I pay my servant, who neither reads nor writes, 3,000 piastres, so you can see why it is difficult to recruit nurses," Dr. Farmaian said.

There is no socialized medicine here and the government is hard-pressed to find doctors at the maximum 8,000 a month scale the health ministry is allowed. Ordinary practitioners here can make about 30,000 piastres.

Even drivers for the ministry's vehicles are hard to find at a 3,000- to 4,000-piastres rate the government pays. Some taxi and pedicab drivers make that money in a few days and foreign industry pays double the amount for its drivers.

"And there's nothing to steal from the health ministry," Dr. Farmaian said in cynical reference to the black-marketing and thievery of commercial goods.

Dr. Farmaian said he could not speak highly enough of what the ministry is trying to do and that it never turns down an idea from W.H.O. whose staff operate in an advisory capacity, chiefly on preventive projects.

"But they are working under extreme conditions," he said.

A venereal disease laboratory, for instance, is needed urgently but the 120,000 piastres it will cost are not available. Three thousand dollars are in the Western world would be a pittance; here it is a huge obstacle.

Dr. Farmaian, a sincere, hard - working executive descended from Persian royalty, said the influx of 600,000 refugees to the Saigon area in recent years has added tremendously to health problems.

Many live in tiny, overcrowded shacks along the streets and alleys. Garbage is dumped into gutters and there are no toilet facilities or running water. It's not uncommon to see naked children squatting on the sidewalk then cleaning themselves with filthy newspaper.

Occasionally street hydrants are turned on and children bathe and mothers wash their clothes and dishes in the same muddy water. Malnutrition matches the pollution.

The United States has financed a sanitation program and the situation is better than it was, but heaps of stinking garbage are still big grounds commonplace breeding - for rats, mosquitoes and flies.

Considering conditions, it is surprising there is not more cholera and the government is hard-pressed to find doctors at the maximum 8,000-a-month scale the health ministry is allowed. Ordinary practitioners here can make about 30,000 piastres.

and measure its water supply, which is precisely what Canada intends to do.

Then, he said, Canada could decide whether to permit the project.

TIME FAR OFF

Northern Affairs Minister Laing said in Ottawa last December it will be a long time before Canada has the necessary facts for discussion of water export. Furthermore, there was no indication the facts would even leave room for discussion.

The Canadian policy is to give no consideration to export until it is known how much water is surplus to Canadian requirements "now and in the foreseeable future."

Mrs. Peterson, chairman of a U.S. Senate subcommittee on western water development, which visited Napanee at a pre-Luminary hearing.

The subcommittee noted that the project raises big questions. Not only is there doubt that Canada will want to become a partner in building the series of dams, reservoirs, canals, tunnels, power plants and other works, which would virtually commit it to permanent export of a considerable quantity of its water, but there is also doubt the United States will want to become dependent upon Canada as the source of much of its water in a continental distribution system.

Raymond Nace, research hydrologist for the U.S. interior department's geological survey, raised questions before the subcommittee about possible changes in climate, earthquakes, landslides and potential food shortages in the Canadian north that would result from cutting migration routes of caribou and other meat animals.

SHOULD ASK QUESTIONS

"The effect of all plans that involve water are geological, hydrological, climatological, biological and social," he said. "Many questions should be asked about the specific effects of this plan."

Nace said climate might be affected by the delivery of large quantities of cold water to more southerly latitudes where heat would warm the water.

Saying that Nawapa "would place large volumes of unfrozen water in permanent areas," Nace asked: "What will happen on hill slopes if the ground thaws? What are the potentials for landslides?"

agreement would be made public before it was presented to the workers.

Wages and fringe benefits were the main points in dispute. Other demands, the union said, included higher pensions for workers retiring before 65 and a change in job classifications.

The union earlier asked for wage increases of up to $1.20 an hour over a two-year contract.

Negotiations began last May and proceeded through federal bargaining, conciliation, a wildcat strike, a conciliation board and mediation by W. P. Mulvey, the province's chief conciliation officer. The previous contract expired July 31.

Bargaining was slow last week with union and company negotiators meeting in separate rooms of a downtown hotel. Proposals and counter-proposals were put in writing and carried between the two parties by Mr. Dickie.

Hobby Display Shown at Public Library

DESERONTO — The hobby display at the Deseronto Public Library this month features the collection of cats belonging to Mrs. Fran Walker.

There are many figurines, antique, just old, and modern, and various items with cat designs, including jewelry, banks, a brass bell, a key ring, ash trays, a cribbage board, a mirror, china dish towels, and many other articles.

The smallest item is a tiny Chinese hand carving in ivory of a cat and mouse and the largest is an Italian cat which Mrs. Walker calls her "spaghetti" cat because of its curly construction.

There are models from England, Sweden, Germany, Italy, Bohemia, and Mexico. Several interesting sculptures in wood, stone, and pewter, were made by Mrs. Walker's brother-in-law the late Lumen F. Kelsey, of North Canton, Connecticut. Two carved primitive glyphs, or pictures in wood, are also the work of Mr. Kelsey.

Also included in the collection are many interesting magazines, magazine articles, newspaper items, cartoons, and amusing as well as appealing pictures. All go to prove the popularity of cats and that they are newsworthy creatures.

Whether you like cats or not, you should enjoy this cat show and you are cordially invited to come and look it over, and to bring your friends.

It is also hoped that people who have interesting cat items for display will bring them along to join the others.

Tyendinaga Reserve

Among those who plan to attend the Mohawk Fair at the Council house next Saturday, September 17, is Robert Hill, one of the oldest members of the band. He will be 88 years old next Thursday, two days before the Fair. Mr. Hill has spent 10 weeks in Bellerille General Hospital since spring, leaving only Saturday after a period of seven weeks when he was receiving treatment for a heart condition. Mr. Hill lives near St. Luke's Church on the Reserve with his son Melville, but since his first illness he has been staying with his son Stuart in Bellville.

Rev. Edwin Wrightson of Cayuga arrived Sunday to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Borden Elliott at R. R. 1, Deseronto, for the week, and will attend the Fair Saturday. Mr. Wrightson was the chaplain to the Mohawks of the Tyendinaga Reserve preceding Rev. Canon J. V. Temple, and tries to make a visit to his former parishioners every year.

A number of relatives attended the 25th wedding anniversary celebration of Mr. and Mrs. George Hatch of Rochester, this last month. They were: Mrs. Herman Hatch, Mrs. Ellen Brant, Mr. and Mrs. Abel Green of the Tyendinaga Reserve; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Lot of Point Anne; Mrs. Ruby Maracle and Stuart Hill of Belleville and Mrs. William Hatch of Point Anne, N.Y., formerly Myrtle Maracle of the Reserve, and her husband.

Seventy - two guests sat down to dinner. Mrs. Hatch was formerly Gladys Brant, and was born on the Reserve, and educated there, in Deseronto, and Belleville. Mrs. Alexander Brant, her mother, was a pioneer of some note.

Defends Workers

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (Reuters) — Pope Paul said Sunday the Roman Catholic Church is the advocate and defender of the workers. Addressing workers at the small industrial town of Castelforte during an afternoon drive from his summer residence here, the pontiff said: "The church understands you, defends you, is your advocate, makes your requests and rights its own, and defends your dignity."

County Hospital Auxiliary Plans Garden Party

NAPANEE — The Lennox and Addington County Hospital Auxiliary at a meeting last week, completed plans for their first garden party, to be held on the hospital grounds, Wednesday afternoon. Representatives of auxiliaries of several hospitals in Eastern Ontario are planning to attend, Mrs. R. B. Paul is convening the event.

Because of the difficulty of finding suitable accommodation for nurses from out of town, the Auxiliary has leased and completely furnished a large house at 121 West St., to be known as Lennox Manor. It will be rented exclusively to nurses of the hospital, on a weekly basis. All services are paid by the auxiliary, such as water and electricity.

A fully equipped kitchen will enable the nurses to get whatever meals they wish for themselves, and there is a large living room. All other rooms have been furnished as sleeping quarters. Many of the rooms are already occupied, although the Manor was made available only a few days ago. Several of the Filipino nurses are there, including one who arrived last week.

Mrs. Bert Bergstrom, the auxiliary president, Cecil Baker, the treasurer, and Mrs. Gordon MacGregor were named to the management committee of Lennox Manor.

The resignation of Miss Kaye McFarland was accepted with regret and Mrs. James Plumley was appointed to take her duties as public relations chairman.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1966

NORMA HOARD OF BELLEVILLE shows heavy draught mare and foal for owner Bob Danford of Shannonville at the Shannonville Fair, Saturday.

TYENDINAGA 4-H CALF CLUB members display their entries for the judge in achievement day held during Shannonville Fair activities, Saturday. Training, fitting and exhibiting of the calves were the responsibility of the boys or girls who owned the animals.

Shannonville Fair Provides Varied Program, Is Enjoyed By Biggest Crowd in Years

Members of the Shannonville Agricultural Society received notice Saturday that there is still a great deal of interest in rural fairs. With perfect weather supplying a boost, large crowds attended the second and final day of the Shannonville Fair, 1966.

Prior to this year's fair, the Agricultural Society had expressed the hope that there was no truth in a rumor that the life of smaller rural fairs is doomed. Saturday's turnout left the rumor with little foundation.

The fair was officially opened by Carl Heath, district director of Division 3. In his brief remarks, he urged that directors of the fair should always remember the exhibitors and "do something for them". He observed that the success of the fair depends on its exhibitors.

Officers of this year's fair were Doug Lasier, president; Art Long, first vice-president; Sherman Lasier, second vice-president and Bernice Stratton, secretary-treasurer. Tey were assisted by an active group of directors and associate directors.

Judging of all exhibits except livestock and poultry took place Friday afternoon. Included in the list of categories were grain and seeds, roots and vegetables, fruits, dairy products, domestic science, canned fruit and pickles, domestic science specials, domestic needlecraft and plants and flowers. There were special divisions for public schools and church groups and women's organizations.

VARIED PROGRAM

Members of the St. John Ambulance were the judges for a Saturday afternoon baby show. There was a bicycle race for boys, a nail-driving contest for the women, an old time fiddlers' contest, women's hook sewing contest, a log sawing contest and the always popular attempts to climb the greasy pig. There were prizes for the largest family in attendance, the oldest couple, and the visitor from the most distant point.

A parade featuring youngsters from SS No. 14 and SS No. 4 public schools, a petite majorette, members at the Shannonville Baseball team, champions of the South Hastings League and fair officials got things moving. Livestock and poultry judging kept officials and exhibitors engaged during most of the afternoon. A Tyendinaga 4-H Calf Club Achievement Day highlighted proceedings.

A big hit with the youngsters was the midway and there was a heavy run on the soft drink, hot dog and hamburg stands on the grounds. Speeding events included horse races and races for ponies.

PUTTING THEIR ALL INTO IT are two contestants in the log sawing contest while the judges keep a close eye on proceedings and at the same time help hold down the log. The contest was one of many special events Saturday at the Shannonville Fair.

200 Conference Delegates Start Nationwide Tour

MONTREAL (CP) — About 200 delegates to the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association's annual conference are fanning out today through the Atlantic provinces at the start of a nationwide tour.

They left Montreal Sunday following a meeting of their association's general council and a statement by the council chairman, Senator John Connolly at Ottawa, that Canada still feels strong attachment for the Commonwealth.

The reception received by the Queen on her 1964 visit to Quebec City did not represent the strength of Quebec's feeling for the monarchy, the senator told reporters Saturday.

Mr. Connolly, government leader in the Senate and a federal minister without portfolio, said the Queen enjoys special status in Canada and would receive "extra-special treatment" if an expected visit by her to next year's world's fair in Montreal materializes.

In their October, 1964, visit to Quebec City, part of a larger Canadian visit, the Queen and Prince Philip were heavily guarded.

Some youthful Quebec separatists were arrested during the royal stay as demonstrations protesting the visit erupted along the Queen's route through the provincial capital.

Last week, Premier Daniel Johnson said the Queen would be invited to the fair "just as all heads of state will be invited to it."

Mr. Johnson also said: "There is no question of her being invited to Quebec City."

Asked whether he thought the premier's remarks were unduly aloof, Mr. Connolly said: "I don't think Danny will side hard on this."

Rhodesia shapes up as a prime topic for discussion by the delegates when they assemble in Ottawa Sept. 25 for the nine-day conference proper.

Sen. William Fulbright, prominent Arkansas Democrat, is scheduled to lead a United States delegation participating in the conference's discussion of international affairs.

The problem is how the better-off nations of the Commonwealth, such as Canada, can best help the underdeveloped also will figure highly in delegate discussions.

The delegates, travelling in four separate groups, are scheduled first to visit centres in Newfoundland, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, with some going to Prince Edward Island Tuesday.

They council Saturday turned down the idea of allowing even observers at the conference from Ghana, Nigeria and Aden, three Commonwealth areas where legislatures have been suspended.

The delegates had been in Montreal since late last week. They were given official receptions by the city and by Quebec province.

PUPILS FROM S.S. NO. 14 TYENDINAGA take part in parade Saturday at Shannonville Fair. The youngsters proved enthusiastic performers as they marched and went through drill manoeuvres on the race track.

British Workers Fear Government May Stay In Wage-Fixing Role

LONDON (CP)—There is a growing feeling—fear on some sides and hope on others—that Britain's often-troublesome labor relations will never be the same after the current six-month pay - and - prices freeze and the further six months' of near-freeze that is to follow.

Many trade unionists see the freeze as the start of policies which could cost them their hard-won bargaining rights and make the government a third party to every union-management contract.

Others see it as a chance to end the chaos of old-fashioned bargaining and strikes, and add a new tool in the socialist policy for planned economic growth.

Richard Crossman, the government's House of Commons leader, raised a stir in Labor party ranks with a speech in which he hinted wage restraints may be here to stay—and not as an unwelcome guest.

The pay freeze was introduced in July in response to a worsening balance - of - pay.

ARE 'LAST DASH'

Crossman described the measures as "a last-minute dash for freedom . . . into new patterns of industrial relations and . . . co-operation between state planning and collective bargaining."

Labor MP Russell Kerr said Saturday that if Crossman's speech represented government policy, it "made members of one of my parliamentary colleagues who reluctantly supported the government's austerity measures."

Crossman's statement that a wage was "no longer a ticket" was far beyond the official line of Prime Minister Wilson, who has appealed for voluntary restraint of pay increases, but says he will make it compulsory if he has to.

"An all-out strike is a last resort," said Mr. Dohmer. "It would take considerable organization—perhaps three months—but many farmers wanted this instead of the recent tractor demonstrations.

"Dumping milk of course would cost us money but many are willing to do this."

Ont. Farmers Threaten to Dump Milk

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario farmers, threatening to stage an all-out strike or dump milk into plow-furrows unless they get a higher price for butter, will meet in November to decide on a course of action, John Dohmer, president of the Ontario Farmers' Union, said Sunday.

Mr. Dohmer said in an interview the farmers will discuss their grievances and decide what to do about them at the OFU's convention in mid-November.

He said earlier that an offer Friday by federal Agriculture Minister J. J. Greene to increase the price of butter by two cents a pound was "inadequate."

"a person whose experience was much more Oxford Union (the university's debating society) than trade union."

And at the other end of the spectrum Conservatives are also divided—some welcoming the freeze as a step toward economic health, while others object to the government intervention in what was formerly an area of free bargaining.

Mild Weather Forecast for B.C. Election

By TERRY ROBERTS

VICTORIA (CP) — Generally mild weather with no rain was forecast today for British Columbia's fifth election since Premier W. A. C. Bennett and his Social Credit government came to power in 1952.

Officials predicted a heavy turnout of about 600,000 of the 873,783 registered voters to cast ballots at the polls open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

A total of 35 members—three more than the last legislature becuase of a general redistribution of constituencies—are to be elected in 48 ridings. Six Vancouver ridings and the Victoria constituency are two - member seats.

In the last election three years ago, when Mr. Bennett sought a five - year mandate, Social Credit won 33 seats, the New Democratic Party under Robert Strachan 14, and the Liberals led by Ray Perrault, five.

At dissolution, however, Social Credit held 32 seats due to a vacancy created last December of George McLeod of Okanagan North.

Social Credit and the NDP have a full slate of candidates in the running, while the Liberals have 33 and the Conservatives three. Six Independents and six Communists also are seeking election.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver

Ontario Amateur Softball Association "brides" are parading sleekly to the championship altars with Belleville teams starring in bridesmaid roles.

Five city clubs proved feamen worthy of enemy steel but eventually felt the force of the playoffs guillotine.

Belek's peewees are the lone city crusaders carrying the city's banner. The youngsters are currently engaged in the semi-finals with Owen Sound.

District-wise, the Trenton midget "B's" are still in the thick of the fight as are Frank Annett's Junior "C" squad. The Pointers won a stirring battle upsetting Madoc's starry squad by winning a third-game 1-0 15-innings, battle in the opening round.

Not detracting from the ability of their conquerors, the Belleville squads at times were victims of the inevitable "breaks" caressed by the fickle fingers of one Lady Luck.

All five city clubs came through with flying colors in the opening lists of the playoffs joustings.

Trudeau Motors sank their Peterborough rivals, then bowed out to the Oshawa Red Boys in the second round of the intermediate "A" grouping. The Bobcats scuttled a Kingston team, then went down fighting under the guns of the senior "B" Oshawa Gales.

Ellis juniors took care that Trenton would have no further part in the playoffs festivities, then said "uncle" to Peterborough when the bell rang for the second round.

In the minor brackets the SACO bantams put their Brockville rivals out of competition but met their nemesis in Oshawa. Ellis midgets sunk a Peterborough squad, then went down against a superior Oshawa club.

Despite squabbles, bickerings and at times silly situations, the city's softball squads had a more or less successful season.

The Intelligencer says enough in a leap-frog setup for playoffs berths with Stewart-Warner and Point Anne dominated the schedule play eligible for the championship series.

And if you'll pardon the touch of a "homer", the Intelligencer entry in the Department Store League marked its Centennial year by winning the championship. Coach Gerry Alexander tells me the titular effort this year will be the "pilot" for a series of "re-runs".

Costly miscues cost the Picton Kinsmen the chance for a provincial title. Dropping the first to Bath, the county boys lost a spine-thrilling fifteen-innings battle after Eldon Carey had spun a one-hitter for 14 frames.

Ever since the guy invented the upholstered baseball game, pitching has been its dominant factor. This, and it has met with fan approval, hasn't been a short-term game as compared to baseball. While perhaps it lacks the color and strategy of the older pastime, its brevity and uniqueness of style has been one of the reasons for its increasing popularity.

You do not see four-man baseball teams featuring the wizardry of sensational pitching touring the country.

Yet all softball teams are not "four-man" affairs. While the average club depends more on its pitching staff, softball has produced some brilliant players who do not operate on the mound. You see snappy fielding plays on the abbreviated diamond. The brilliancy of the game's pitching is offset often by the clouting abilities of opposing batters.

To substantiate what I have said about the sport's pitching being a dominant factor especially in the playdowns, is the report of the OSA secretary, L. G. Pickard.

To date Lloyd says, with 474 games being reported, no less than 67 series have required a third game: 24 went into extra innings and an unbelievable 186 games have been won by a one-run margin.

An incredible 103 shutouts have been registered with a respectable 18 of these being 1-0 scores. Twenty-four games have gone into extra innings.

For instance, Ken Taylor of Oshawa who beat the Bobcats, loaned a no-hit 10-inning win over the Peter; Windsor's Don Dominax whiffed 21 to beat Sarnia. Newmarket's Dale Pegg faced 28 batters, allowed one hit, whiffed 15 and hit a grandslam homer. Merlin's Ivan Guy served a no-hit 20-strikeout effort to beat Alvinston' 2-0; Zephyr's Dick Lamanty allowed four hits, 17 whiffs to win 2-0. Tavistock's Keith Wagler fashioned a 24-strikeout 2-0 win over Sarnia. Highgate pulled a rare triple play to woe Sarnia's Adamsessed Galt with a 19-strikeout 3-2 gem.

Riders Wallop Cats; Argos Break Egg

★★★★★ Day The Key

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference finally found hitherto elusive scoring touches and played the role of spoilers in weekend football action.

The Argonauts, who had five-game losing streak Sunday, defeating Edmonton 34-14 in a Canadian Football League game that kept the Eskimos from gaining a first-place tie in the Western Conference.

Meanwhile, the Rough Riders walloped Hamilton 27-18 Saturday to break a five-place tie in the EFC with the Tiger-Cats.

The Argonauts, who had scored only 38 points and only three touchdowns in their five previous starts of the season broke loose behind veteran quarterback Eagle Day. They outrushed the Eskimos by 227 yards to 178 and piled up 216 yards in the air to Edmonton's 128.

Day, released by Calgary Stampeders of the WFC last week, was the key to the Toronto attack, throwing three touchdown passes—a pair to Al Irwin and another to Bobby Taylor—and handed off to Bob Swift for the fourth.

Dave Thelen scored the other Toronto touchdown, while John Vitmas converted four of the five touchdowns.

SCORE FOR EDMONTON

Garry Lefebvre and Bill Riddell scored Edmonton touchdowns. Tommy-Joe Coffey converted both.

The Rough Riders, victims of a 16-10 defeat at the hands of the Ticats last week, had scored only 74 points in their first five games compared to Hamilton's 86 points.

But Ottawa carried the ball 100 yards farther than Hamilton in recording 239 yards rushing Saturday and added 67 for 135 yards in the air, while holding the Ticats to 82.

Whit Tucker, Jim Dillard and Rick Black scored the Ottawa touchdowns, while Moe Racine converted all three and added two field goals.

Hamilton's touchdowns were scored by Willie Bethea and Dick Cobee. Don Sutherin kicked the converts and added two singles.

Day, who signed with Toronto Friday, came into the game late in the first quarter and left in the fourth with the Argos leading 27-0. Rookie Joe Theisler took over, handing off to Thelen for the final Toronto touchdown.

ESKIMOS STRIKE BACK

Gabler's effort boosted the score to 34-0, but Edmonton struck for two touchdowns late in the game.

The Toronto defensive unit had been superb earlier, in killing three Edmonton scoring threats. Marv Luster intercepted a pass in the end zone, Jim Rountree recovered a fumble on the Toronto two yard line and the Eskimos were thrown for two losses after they reached the Toronto 12.

Toronto also intercepted five of Randy Kerbow's passes, had its first down to Luster's intercepted a pass in the end zone, Jim Rountree recovered a fumble on the Toronto two yard line and the Eskimos were thrown for two losses after they reached the Toronto 12.

Toronto also intercepted five of Randy Kerbow's passes, had its first down to Luster's interand completed 13 of 23 passes. Edmonton had 11 completions in 32 attempts.

The Rough Riders won the hard way, trailing 16-10 in the third quarter. Black scored the first touchdown on a 22-yard screen pass from Russ Jackson. Tucker caught a 33-yard toss from Jackson for the second and Dillard, who alternated at fullback with Black, ran wide to score from one yard out.

Cohee scored the first Hamilton touchdown, going over from the four-yard line, and Bethea scored the other on a 35-yard pass from quarterback Frank Cosentino.

Black was the leading ground gainer with 84 yards, while halfback Bo Scott added 49 and Dillard got 44 yards. Bethea ran 57 yards for the Ticats and Cohee added 33.

Jackson had three passes intercepted and completed only eight of 17 attempts. Hamilton was held to seven completions on 16 attempts.

Last-Minute TD

Bombers Nip Saskys; Lions Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dick Thornton fell down on the job, Eagle Day impressed a new boss and Peter Lieke, who got Day's old job, couldn't produce a touchdown.

These were the highlights of a weekend in which all five Western Football Conference clubs saw action.

Thornton, defensive halfback who had been superb earlier in killing three Edmonton scoring threats, May Winnipeg Blue Bombers, was supposed to cover Hugh Campbell, flanker for Saskatchewan Roughriders.

But he fell down—before a sellout Winnipeg crowd of 31,851—and Campbell caught a touchdown pass with 64 seconds left to play for a 22-24 victory that moved Riders into first place.

For Campbell, it was the second touchdown reception of the Sunday game and 12th in eight outings against Bombers. He has 13 so far this season, three shy of the Canadian Football League record set by Winnipeg's Ernie Pitts in 1959.

Eagle Day, discarded by Calgary Stampeders, turned up in a Toronto Argonauts uniform Sunday. He threw three touchdown passes as Argos collected their first win of the season, 34-14 over Edmonton Eskimos.

Defeat cost Edmonton a share of first place but their 10 points from nine games was good for second place, two points ahead of Winnipeg.

Lieke, the former Argonauts signal - caller who stepped into Day's boots in Calgary, had his problems in Vancouver Saturday night. He had four of his passes intercepted as British Columbia Lions won 14-3 before 27,147 fans to pull alongside Calgary in fourth place.

For a good portion of the contest in Winnipeg, marred by six fumbles and four interceptions, it looked as if Thornton might share the hero's mantel with teammate Billy Cooper.

Thornton, helped occasionally by Ken Dancheuk, knocked down one pass to Campbell, intercepted another and grabbed a 16-yard touchdown pass. Dancheuk recovered two fumbles and made an end-zone interception.

Cooper, back at his flanker position after missing one game due to injury, threw a key block in Dave Ralmey's 100-yard sideline dash for Winnipeg's first touchdown. Then he set up Thornton's score by catching Kenny Ploen passes for 30 and 12 yards. He also snared a 28-yard touchdown throw to put Bombers ahead 20-10 with two minutes and 30 seconds remaining.

RALLIES CLUB

He threw 45 yards to Alan Ford. Two plays later Lancaster escaped a Winnipeg rush. As he scurried, Thornton fell and Campbell stumbled but he regained his balance to make the big catch.

Cementmen In Finals

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Point Anne, prominent in softball circles, both district and provincial a few years back, will again compete in OASA Ontario championships this fall.

The Cementmen earned a berth in the Junior "C" finals Saturday night by nipping Sydenham 2-1 at Point Anne.

Point Anne won the series, their second, 2-0 and will travel to Western Ontario for the finals opener, likely on September 24. The second and possibly the third game, if it is necessary, will be played either at Point Anne or Belleville on the following weekend.

Sydenham offered Bill Shaw's crew Ellis in the line of serious opposition but, as has been their habit, the Cementmen played just well enough to win. Outing Madoc earlier, they won the third title 1-0 in 15 frames.

Each club scored once in the first frame and the Pointers plated their winner in the seventh, after passing up several other good opportunities.

Bob Eaton, the game's leadoff batter, scored the first run after walking. He raced to third on passed ball and scored as a fielder's choice.

Denny Maher almost repeated that performance to tie it. He strolled, stole second and kept on going to score on a back-to-back throw to second and in centre field.

Point Anne loaded the sacks, and had one man cut down at the plate, without scoring in the fifth.

They made no such mistake in the seventh. MacDonald walked with one out and G. Maher got a bunt single when four Sydenham players rushed in to field the ball. Mike Cook stroked a base hit to right-centre to drive in the deciding marker.

Ron Maracle set the losers down on three hits, by Jim Cashman in the fourth, Dick Moreland in the sixth and John Ware in the seventh. He struck out 12, including the side in the ninth, but walked a half dozen. His fastest cleanup hitter Harry Dehna four times.

Jerry Revelle took the loss, allowing five of the six Point Anne hits before Harry Stinson relieved following Cook's winning hit. Revelle fanned four and walked two.

Point Anne singles went to Mike Cook, Eric Maher, Verb Whalen, David Avery, Tom MacDonald and Gerry Maher.

Sydenham had a team scorekeeper and a coach ejected from the bench for remarks to the umpires on separate occasions. Another coach was also close after several warnings.

Dodgers On Top After Twin Blanks

Bucs, Giants Lose

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., posted his fourth victory against seven defeats in the National League Sunday.

Jenkins, who worked seven innings, led Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 victory over San Francisco Giants. He allowes seven hits and all three runs.

Meanwhile, Sandy Koufax and three other Los Angeles Dodgers pitchers kept Houston off the scoreboard for 18 innings Sunday as Los Angeles grounded the Astros 4-0 and 1-0 to sweep into the league lead for the first time in five weeks.

The double shutout, coupled with St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 victory over Pittsburgh, sent the Dodgers one game ahead of the staggering Pirates and two in front of San Francisco in the torrid race.

After Koufax fired a six-hitter for his 23rd victory of the season, Joe Moeller, Bob Miller and Phil Regan scattered seven hits in the nightcap, completing a string of four straight shutout victories over the Astros. Claude Osteen blanked them 7-0 Friday night and Don Drysdale collaborated with Regan in Saturday's 1-0, 10-inning victory.

GIANTS REBOUND

The Giants bounced back to behind Bob Bolin's three-hitter to stay within range of the leaders in the second game.

Atlanta Braves whipped New York Mets 6-3 for their sixth straight victory and Philadelphia Phillies drubbed Cincinnati Reds 9-5 in other games.

Saturday, St. Louis edged Pittsburgh 6-5, Los Angeles shutout Houston 1-0 in 10 innings, Cincinnati edged Philadelphia 3-2, and Atlanta defeated New York 3-2.

Pinch hitter John Rosebero delivered a run - scoring single in the seventh inning of the night-cap, enabling the Dodger relief trio to edge Houston's Chris Zachery.

Ron Fairly singled across the only run Koufax needed in the fourth inning of the opener, and Willie Davis' bloop double scored the last two runs in a three-run fifth.

McCarver's two - out, bases-loaded single wiped out a 3-2 Pittsburgh lead and handed the Pirates their fifth loss in the last six games.

Bolin set the Cubs down in order until Randy Hundley's lead-off double in the sixth and yielded two singles the rest of the way.

The Cubs, trailing 3-0 in the sixth inning of the opener, erupted for four runs, including Billy Williams' two - run homer, off loser Ray Sadecki.

The Braves rocked Dennis Ribant of Burlington, Ont., for five runs in the first inning, the last two on Mack Jones' homer, and added homers by Ed Mathews and Joe Torre in wresting their fifth in the last 12 starts. Mathews' 482rd career homer tied him with Lou Gehrig for seventh position on the all-time list.

Chris Short scattered eight hits for his 16th victory as the Phillies scored three unearned runs in the first inning and breezed past the Reds.

Gaels Win First Over Coast Team

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — New Westminister Salmonbellies and Oshawa Green Gaels go into the second game of the Canadian Junior lacrosse final for the Minto Cup tonight with both coaches promising it will be a close game.

It was anything but that Saturday night and as defending champion Oshawa took the opener of the best-of-seven series 20-7.

Oshawa coach Jim Bishop said Sunday his team played "better than they know how."

But Keith Jackson blamed bad nerves and a lack of competition all year for the defeat.

Jackson said Oshawa has a big reputation and his boys seemed afraid.

New Westminster won 20 of 36 games in regular season play, and often won with only nine or 10 players in uniform. Oshawa had an identical record in the East.

Oshawa defeated New Westminster four games to two in last year's Minto Cup final in Oshawa, and it was 4-1 for Oshawa here in 1964.

Despite the one - sided score Saturday, Bishop said he expects a long series.

Ross Jones scored six goals to lead the Green Gaels.

Won By Technical KO

Clay Stops German In Twelfth

CHICAGO (AP) — Cassius Clay, fresh from his latest ring conquest, smiled at cheering fans and pushed back the right sleeve of his dark blue suit to exhibit his puffed right hand.

"Maybe I got a fractured right hand," Clay told newsmen who were waiting Sunday at O'Hare International Airport when the unmarked, 24-year-old champion returned from West Germany.

Saturday, Clay, stopped Karl Mildenberger at 1:30 of the 12th round to defend his heavyweight title for the sixth time.

READY FOR SOUTHPAW

Clay, who smashed Mildenberger to the deck in the fifth, eighth and 10th rounds, said he was ready for the German's southpaw style.

"I had two left - handed spar ring partners. I was prepared," he said.

The technical knockout was the last knockout for Clay who, champion in 20 pro fights, made his fourth title defence in six months.

EYES, NOSE BLEED

Clay, a 10-to-1 favorite, had the German bleeding around both eyes and from the nose before British referee Teddy Waltham stopped the slaughter.

A sharp right cross spilled Mildenberger just before the bell sounded to end the fifth round. A crisp left hook to the jaw dropped the German for the mandatory eight count in the eighth round.

Weighing 208¼ pounds to the German's 196¾, Clay carried consistently with straight rights to the head. Mildenberger.

Mildenberger had a cored heavily with lefts to the head and body in the third and fourth rounds, but after that Clay had it all the way.

One of the promoters said after the fight that they would collect about $300,000 and Mildenberger about $100,000.

Second Place Up For Grabs In A.L.

By RON RAPOPORT

The American League race is tightening up, but not for the pennant.

Baltimore Orioles' grip on that is as tight as ever. The battle is for second place...the only race in the league worth mentioning.

Detroit Tigers in second place since June 21, were dislodged Sunday, taking a 5-1 beating from Kansas City Athletics. Minnesota Twins in the meantime, took a half-game edge over the Tigers with an 11-4 defeat over the Orioles.

Trailing 4-0 in the eighth inning, Minnesota sent 14 men up to the plate and nine of them crossed it.

Harmon Killebrew, the second man up, hit a two-run homer. Bob Allison, being the game, then watched as Bernie Allen, and Al Worthington drove in two each and Tony Oliva knocked in one. Harmon came up again and singled in another one and Ted Uhlaender added the final score with an infield single.

In other games, Chicago White Sox beat Washington Senators 4-1, California Angels crushed Cleveland Indians 8-2 and New York Yankees took Boston (Red Sox 4-2 in 10 innings.

It was the second straight triumph for Jay Twins, while Chicago sacked Washington 1-0, California crushed Cleveland 9-2, New York defeated Boston 5-1, and Kansas City shutout Detroit 5-0 on Saturday.

Low Krausse set down the Tigers on three hits as Kansas City breezed to their fourth victory in a row. Danny Cater drove in two runs with a single. Roger Repoz knocked in another with a triple and Dick Green added one with a double.

Fred Klages, in his first major - league start, drove in a run and limited the Senators to two hits in the five innings he was relieved as the Senators dropped their sixth straight.

Norm Siebern hit a two-run homer in the California victory, breaking a 3-3 tie and dropping Cleveland, recently in the thick of that battle for second place, to sixth. Fred Newman, 5-7, was the winner and Gary Bell, 14-12, took the defeat.

Bobby Richardson led off the 10th inning with a homer and the Yanks added another on a wild pitch by John Wyatt. Rookie outfielder John Miller, just up from Toledo, hit a homer in his first time at bat in the majors after Joe Pepitone had led off the second inning with a single.

Yesterday's Stars

Batting—Tony Oliva, Twins, rapped a home run, three singles and a sacrifice fly, scored three runs and drove in three while hitting his American League - batting mark to .320 as Minnesota drubbed Baltimore Orioles 11-4.

Keen competition set new records in other classes.

Canadian ladies free style champion Joan MacDonald of Toronto set a new mark for ladies.

Belleville's Carol Armstrong displayed fine ability by taking second place behind the champion and also breaking the previous course record.

Evan Gardiner another city entry retained the ladies distinctive trophy winning by a margin of 9 points.

Belleville Archery Club officials are confident that one or more members of their organization stand an excellent chance of making a berth on Canada's archery team at Edmonton, second pete in the world tournament in Holland next year.

In the various classes city archers won two firsts and three seconds.

These included Bill Eskins, second in 300 men's freestyle; Susan Smith first in ladies 100 freestyle; Ed Donaldson, second in men's last. 200; John Widdess second in men's last. 300 and Nigel Roulet first in the club class.

Nichols and Schloss fired an eight-under-par 62 over the Losantiville Country Club course to finish the two day, 36-hole event with 128 or 12 under par.

Whibley and Cowan had a 63 Sunday, giving them a total of 129.

Browns Defeat Skins

Packers Whip Colts; Chiefs Sink Bills

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lee Roy Caffey plays linebacker for Green Bay Packers and hits and sack against Baltimore Colts.

Caffey swiped a second quarter pass and rambled 32 yards for the touchdown that triggered the Packers' 36-3 victory over the Colts Saturday night.

The National Football League opener matched the opponents in last season's Western Conference playoff and the Packers, who squeezed through but Doomcher with quarterback Johnny Unitas sidelined, won easily this time.

They did it by embarrassing Baltimore's peerless quarterback with three interceptions, two of them providing touchdowns in the final moments of the first half.

"I guess Caffey was hiding behind someone," said Unitas.

In Sunday's other NFL openers, Cleveland Browns ripped Washington Redskins 38-14, Los Angeles Rams spoiled Atlanta Falcons' debut 19-14, Detroit Lions upset Chicago Bears 14-3, St. Louis Cardinals outlasted Philadelphia Eagles 16-13, Minnesota Vikings rallied to the San Francisco 49ers 20-20 and New York Giants and Pittsburgh Steelers battled to a 24-24 deadlock.

In the American League, Kansas City Chiefs whipped Buffalo Bills 24-7, Sunday, Saturday night Houston Oilers blanked Oakland Raiders 35-0 and San Diego Chargers shut out Boston Patriots 24-0. Friday New York Jets defeated Miami Dolphins 28-24.

Frank Ryan pulled the Browns together with three touchdown passes and Cleveland turned three interceptions and a recovered fumble into touchdowns for the victory over Washington.

Bruce Gossett kicked four field goals for Los Angeles and the Rams held on to beat fledgling Atlanta.

Detroit, winless in five exhibitions, stunned Chicago, scoring both its touchdowns in the second period. Tom Nowatzke wiped out a 3-0 Bear lead with a six-yard run and then Mike Pium hit Pat Studstill on a 25-yard pass for another score.

Jim Bakken's third field goal of the game, with five seconds left, gave Lloyd the Cardinals over the Eagles. Bakken connected from 37 yards out minutes after Sam Baker's second field goal tied the game for Philadelphia.

Pittsburgh needed a 41-yard field goal by Mike Clark with less than three minutes to play to tie the Giants, who had wiped out a 21-17 Steeler lead in the fourth quarter. Clark's 26-yard attempt in the last half minute of play fell short.

Fans Aid Don Gallinger

Quinella Paid $228.10

Paul Ouellet's Mr. Spudboy paid the highest single price of the night and teamed with Reita Herrington's Tarragon for a big $228.10 quinella at the Quinte Ridding and Driving Club races here Saturday.

A crowd of 925 paid and collections were taken from the fans and horsemen to aid Kingston's Don Gallinger. Some $500 was collected from the grandstand but a final figure from gate receipts is not yet available. 50% of the gate will go to Gallinger, injured in a race here last June.

Ouellet drove Mr. Spudboy to victory in the eighth race and the horse paid its backers $22.00 for the win and $20.40 place money. Miss Herrington's Tarragon was second to build the rich quinella.

Both horses had finished out of the money in the fourth, won by Little Tony Pee with a $14.70 return.

Roy Buchanan drove Devon Way to double-heat victories in the second and sixth races.

Titan Scott, also a double-heat winner for Jack Bisscontte in races five and nine, turned in the best times of the night, 2:13.1 and 2:13 even.

Sammy Mulholland drove Mighty Lass C. to victory over Doctor Sprocket in the third but Jack Bisscontte's Blackie reversed the decision in the seventh. Reid Lass Chief then drove money in both heats.

Ken Weeks' Bellefox won the card's opening race.

The daily double, Devon Way and Mighty Lass C. in the second and third races paid $43.50. Titan Scott and Dave's Wee Lad paid a wee $3.50 quinella in the fifth.

The pari mutuel handle was $13,464.

The total amount collected through the "Don Gallinger Night" benefit will be announced at the week's final meet.

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method
by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

KNOW WHEN TO RETREAT

They say that one of the marks of a good general is that he knows when to pull back the troops. This aforementioned also applies in golf.

You will encounter situations from which it is simply good judgment to "fall back" (see illustration).

Always bear in mind that the penalty for dropping back from an unplayable lie is only one stroke. Often I have seen players try to fail to dislodge a ball from a tough lie. That's one way that nines and tens occur.

Remember that you can sacrifice a stroke on a hole, except your bogey, and still shoot a fine score for the round. However, it is very difficult to fight back from a double or triple bogey.

Owen Sound Wins First From Peewees

Owen Sound plated three runs in the top of the final inning to hand Belleville's Belch's a 9-8 loss at Alemite Park Saturday afternoon.

The game was the first in a two-of-three OASA Peewee "A" Ontario semi-finals. Belleville goes back to Owen Sound this coming Saturday for a 2:30 game. A third game will follow there, if necessary.

Ken Harwood was the winning pitcher. He gave up 13 hits, struck out five and walked one. John Sprackett was the loser, allowing 15 hits, fanning four and passing one.

Ron Reid paced Owen Sound's attack with three singles. Dennis Patterson hit a double and single, Ken Harwood a triple and double, Dave Roberts and Kim Grant two hits each. Paul Pennycke, Terry Govier, Bob Wark and Bob Bergeron split the others.

George Royal, in his first start since he won the $125,000 San Juan Capistrano handicap for the second year in a row last March, ran third in the sixth race, behind File Lake and Little Red.

The daily-double combination of Prompt Response and Top Cole returned $53.70 while Cretaceous and Shining Wings combined for a $12.40 exactor in the fifth.

MONTREAL (CP)—Al Coy guided Conn Smythe's Bye And Near to a track record and a three-length victory over favorite He's A Smoothie in the featured $15,000 Quebec Derby Saturday night at Blue Bonnets Raceway.

Coy, who rode winning mounts in four of the eight races on the card, booted home Bye And Near in a record clocking of 1:53 2-5 over the 1¼ mile distance.

Doubting Thomas under Avelino Gomez came third.

None of Seven New Shows Made Much of a Splash

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven new programs were dropped into the network channels during the weekend and none made much of a splash.

Focus of most viewer interest probably was the return of two favorites, Milton Berle and Garry Moore, with their own variety shows.

Uncle Miltie's comeback vehicle on ABC did not look too different from the one he used to have. The opening monologue, the blackouts and even the over-long chat about the fumbling magician were reminiscent. Eppy Lucille Ball didn't help the comedy much, either.

Garry Moore's new CBS hour appeared to suffer from opening show jitters. Despite all the talk about new faces, two of them turned out to be Jackie Vernon, dead-pan comedy who has been widely viewed on television, and John Byner, the impressionist due to find similar limitations of George Jessel and Ed Sullivan.

For another there were old silent film clips run off while a sentimental ballad was sung, a lecture on wrapping fragile objects by a moving man who smashed everything, a take-off on the Hunley-Brinkley show and a spoof of the Miss America Pageant.

WASN'T FUNNY

Mostly it wasn't funny and was strained and uneasy.

ABC's Time Tunnel Friday night had an interesting premise—scientists able to break through time barriers. In the first episode the two scientists found themselves aboard the Titanic just before it was to hit the iceberg.

CBS' It's About Time Sunday night was a sad little comedy and based on the same idea—breaking the time barrier. This one had two astronauts set down on the earth 1,000,000 years ago. In the first episode, they were busy running from dinosaurs and teaching a tribe of cavemen how to give a birthday party.

Probably the most substantial show of the weekend was ABC's Blame, on Saturday. This is a well produced, work-a-day western in which the good guy, a ex-clean and the bad guy-guys have a two-day stubble of beard. Shane is a feared gunfighter working as a hired man for a farm family in danger of being run off their land by a mean cattleman. David Carradine plays Shane in a likeable, jaunty fashion.

Hey, Landlord, on NBC Sunday night got off to a wobbly start with a silly story about a bashful bachelor's infatuation with a girl's picture. Will Hutchins and Sandy Baron, the show's stars, work well together but need improved scripts.

The Green Hornet Friday night was super adventure with gimmicks — masks on the bero and a trick James Bond-type car.

Three Top Clubs Unbeaten

LONDON (Reuters) — The three leading soccer clubs in the English League's First Division, Sheffield Wednesday, Burnley and Chelsea, all maintained unbeaten records Saturday by playing to games.

The two sides joined on the 10-point level in the standings by Tottenham Hotspur, which is the closest match of the day's seven 3-1 against Manchester United, after Manchester had led 1-0 at halftime.

The gates were shut at Tottenham's White Hart Lane Stadium 15 minutes before the start and in brilliant sunshine a record crowd of 56,266 saw the exciting clash of talent.

United withstood early pressure and after 43 minutes, Scottish international Denis Law headed a fine goal. Spurs looked well beaten but late in the game hit back to snatch victory with two goals in 60 seconds by Alan Gilzean and Jimmy Greaves.

Eight of the 11 First Division matches resulted in ties, seven of them by 1-1 scores.

TOPS ON AVERAGE

Sheffield Wednesday, which leads on goal average, now is level with Burnley on points after good figures. Wednesday drew 1-1 against Liverpool, last season's league champions.

Former Arsenal star Geoff Strong headed Liverpool into the lead with a 35-minute goal. The Yorkshire side equalized before half time through John Farnham.

Burnley drew 1-1 at Newcastle, where both goals also came in the opening half.

Chelsea would have been on top but it not under-estimated the fighting qualities of Sunderland, which held the London side to a 1-1 draw at Stamford Bridge.

John Boyle gave Chelsea the lead two minutes before the interval, but Sunderland saved a point with a goal by Alan Gowen in the 69th minute. Chelsea then stayed third on goal average.

Both Rangers and Celtic made a great start to the Scottish League program.

In Glasgow, Rangers hit top scoring form to trounce Partick Thistle 6-1. Heroes of their sharp side were George McLean, who got four goals, and the Smith boys, Alex and Dave, who each found the net.

Celtic won 2-0 at Clyde and were always on top after Steve Chalmers opened the scoring in the ninth minute.

Littler World Golfer

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Gene Littler, whose two over par on the 16th hole set the stage for a dramatic three- way playoff with Jack Nicklaus and Al Geiberger, dropped a 12-foot birdie putt in a sudden death playoff Sunday that won the World Series of Golf and its top prize of $50,000.

Littler, whose victory in the 1965 Canadian Open put him over the $ mark in tournament, slammed home the putt on the first playoff hole before Geiberger missed an 11 footer.

Geiberger joined Nicklaus and Littler in the playoff after he whipped in a 16-foot birdie putt on No. 18.

But it was a big blowup at No. 18 where Littler took two over par after shaking life a duffer to enable Nicklaus to climb into a tie with a birdie. Geiberger and Nicklaus were two behind and Littler's group was four shots away.

After Littler and Nicklaus blew their chances for victory in 18 holes and Casper failed to nail a birdie that would have gained him a playoff berth, Geiberger knocked in a 16-footer that set the stage for the dramatic three-way playoff.

Going into the final round Casper and Nicklaus were tied with 70s and Geiberger and Littler at 71.

Littler had a final round of 35-37—72, Nicklaus at 37-36—73 and Geiberger a 36-36—72 for 143 totals. Casper had a 74 for 144.

Nicklaus and Geiberger shared second and third money, with each getting $11,250. Casper earned $5,000.

"They offered me $60,000 for two years and I said no," Stolle said. "I'm not interested in being just another pro. If they want to talk real money, I'll listen."

Maria Bueno of Brazil easily won over Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex., 6-3, 6-1, and became the first player in 20 years to win four women's titles. The last was Pauline Betz, who won her fourth in 1946.

John Hampton Has Devoted Whole Life to Silent Movies

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"It all started as a child, just as in the old days. Now it's 90 cents, children under 12 free.

"We get a wide audience," Hampton says. "Many of the Hollywood people show up—Gilbert Roland, Natalie Wood, Tony Curtis, Cary Grant, as well as those who worked in silents. We also get a lot of older people, who come here to see their favorites.

"The younger kids eat up the action and comedy films, but the high schoolers aren't too interested; they like more contemporary entertainment.

"We start to get them again in college—couples who come on dates for something different, and students from the drama schools at the universities."

Hampton runs the projection booth and plays selected records in place of the oldtime pianist or organist; his wife sells tickets and candy.

Montreal Honors "Jackie"

MONTREAL (CP)—Jackie Robinson, who played his way through the city en route to baseball's fir first Negro player in major league baseball, returned to be honored Saturday.

Robinson, now general manager of Brooklyn Dodgers of the Continental Football League, played here for Montreal Royals before joining Brooklyn Dodgers of baseball's National League.

Local sportsmen held the ceremony to mark the 20th anniversary of his arrival in Montreal as a player for the old Royals club. The ceremony was held at half time of a football game, which Robinson's Dodgers lost 22-14 to Montreal Beavers.

A Jackie Robinson scholarship fund was set up to aid the education of worthy students in Montreal's Negro community.

The brand new Chevrolet Camaro, available as a two-door sport coupe or two-door convertible, combines the dash and power of a competitive racer with the comfort and luxury of a four-passenger car. A wide variety of distinctive appearance and equipment options permit "personalizing" to the most individual taste — such as the SS 350 option which creates the Super Sport coupe (above), a performance machine combining distinguishing appearance with an exclusive Turbo Fire 350-cu. in., 295-hp V8 engine with four-barrel carburetion, and heavy-duty chassis components. A choice of five power plants, ranging from a 140-hp six to the 295-hp V8 is available with Camaro. Camaro also incorporates a number of outstanding new safety features standard on all 1967 Chevrolets, such as the GM-developed energy-absorbing steering column which telescopes up to 8¼ inches.

CAPITALS DEFEAT FRENCH

HULL, Que. (CP) — The junior Ottawa Capitals, joined by eight professional players, defeated France's national hockey team 8-3 Sunday in an exhibition contest before 1,500 fans. It was the first loss by the young French team after two ties in Canada. The French return home this week after completing a training and instruction program.

SUNDAY'S STARS

Pitching—Bob Bolin, Giants, stopped Chicago on three hits and struck out eight in a 2-0 victory that earned San Francisco a doubleheader split with the Cubs.

Why should our son have a newspaper route?

The living is good. Plenty of money, nice home, nice furnishings, another salary raise in sight; we've never had it so good. Why should our son manage a newspaper route?

Most any educator or businessman will tell you why in three simple words: it builds character.

Oftentimes the youngster who grows up in comfortable circumstances and who gets his weekly "handout" from dad never realizes the value of money or the efforts required to make it and manage it, until he's on his own. By then attitudes and habits are difficult to reverse.

But the newspaperboy quickly learns valuable lessons that stick. While making money on a newspaper route is important, the experience of getting-the-job-done-no-matter-what is more important. When through route management, responsibility and self-confidence are acquired at this early age, a newspaperboy has an advantage over other youngsters that no amount of money can buy.

If you're still wondering whether your son would benefit from newspaper route management, ask a community businessman or civic leader, or better still, write our Circulation Department.

CHAMPION UPSET

MONZA, Italy (AP)— Giacomo Agostini of Italy rode his MV-Agusta to victory in the 500 c.c. race of the motorcycle Grand Prix of Nations Sunday and seized the world crown from veteran champion Mike Hailwood of Britain. A broken cylinder in his Japanese Honda forced Hailwood to drop out at the ninth lap of the 19-lap event. Had he won, it would have been his fifth 500 c.c. title in a row.

Petes Drop Mann Cup Opener

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Coach Bob Marsh of Vancouver Carlings expects a "long, tough series" after his team's close 15-8 victory over Peterborough Petes Saturday night in the opening game of the Canadian senior lacrosse finals.

Second game of the best-of-seven series for the Mann Cup is scheduled here tonight.

"We're ready to stay in Peterborough for a couple of weeks," Marsh said.

Vancouver jumped into a 3-1 lead in the first quarter but the Petes tied the game 3-3 by the half. Vancouver ended the third quarter with an 8-7 lead and outscored Peterborough 5-3 in the final quarter.

John Davis led the Peterborough attack with four goals, including one short-handed. Petes' goaltender Skip Chapman knocked into the net while trying to clear the ball. Ken Britain had three goals and Butch Keegan and Ken Crawford got two others.

The game, halted by a power failure at the 10:12 mark of the second quarter, was attended by 4,180 persons—the largest lacrosse crowd in Peterborough's history. The 4-8 segment was added to the third quarter after electricity was restored.

Deep Beneath Montreal New Subway Trains Run Tests for Two Months

By ROSEMARY SPEIRS

MONTREAL (CP)—Deep beneath the city the blue and white trains of Montreal's new 16-mile Metro have been running quietly back and forth on evening test runs for more than two months, simulating to silent stations the action of taking on and discharging passengers.

Supervised by personnel borrowed from France's Paris Metro, men and machines are being prepared for the Oct. 17 opening of Canada's second, and most fully automated, subway.

When complete the new Metro will supply main lines for mass transportation in Canada's largest city, speeding 125,000 passengers a day to and from the main business section of this congested inland metropolis.

In the meantime workmen are applying the last brightly-colored tiles to the walls of the 26 subway stations and polishing and repolishing the sleek train-cars as they stand waiting in gleaming rows at the rendezvous Youville yards of the Montreal Transportation Commission.

Descending the long escalators into the heart of the city uptown Cremazie station is, as one newspaper man put it, almost like entering a cathedral—one built 60 feet below the surface of the earth.

From the low train platform soft beige walls rise in a great arc to a ceiling hung with simple, modern architecture.

SUN SHINES IN

In contrast with cavernous Cremazie is the Champs de Mars station at the other end of the line, a small, airy terminal in dark green and yellow built so close to ground level that the sun streams in through big plate-glass windows.

For Montreal the subway represents fulfilment of a 20-year-old dream. Proposals for a fast underground transit system have been popping up in city politics since 1910 when downtown traffic conditions first loomed as a problem.

By 1960 it had become a main plank in Mayor Jean Drapeau's electoral campaign, and a metropolitan population now well over 2,000,000, finding the drive to the city centre an intolerably slow and nerve-wracking experience, agreed.

In November, 1961, city council voted a $320,000,000 appropriation to build the system and increased it to $326,040,000 in August, 1963. By then it had been decided to hold the 1967 world's fair on St. Helen's Island and this justified construction of a tunnel extension under the St. Lawrence River to the fair site.

This last three-mile line, dug through solid rock 40 feet under the river bed, will not be completed until early 1967 when it is expected to begin transporting a daily load of visitors, perhaps more than 300,000 on peak days, to the island and to the south shore of the St. Lawrence.

CHEAPER THAN RIVAL'S

Built by the city but run by the Metropolitan Transportation Commission, an independent corporation, the new Metro has been cheaper to build than Canada's only other underground transit system, the Toronto subway, and is expected to be quieter and faster as well.

"Toronto's subway opened a 4½-mile stretch in 1954 and now has 14½ miles of track. Clay and soft shale beneath the city ensured that subway line to be built in shallow open cuts and then roofed. It cost about $6,000,000 more a mile than the Montreal Metro which is punched deep beneath the city through solid rock.

Like the Paris Metro, Montreal's system runs quietly on rubber rimmed wheels gripping a cement track. The trains are ultra light and have underground gauges which can accelerate quickly, handle steep grades with ease and are capable of speeds up to 70 m.p.h.

Eighth longest of the world's 24 underground systems, Metro will be first in its use of automated equipment.

Ninety feet under the city centre the two long lines which are to be opened in October cross one another and meet with a third deep-lying line which runs on to tunnel under the river.

This is Berri - de - Monligny station—the automated heart of the whole system where electronic computers will do most of the thinking required to run the Metro, controlling every-thing from speed of trains to switches and signals.

NEEDS 200 WORKERS

But for all its automated turnstiles and transfer dispensers, the Metro will still require a crew of about 200 men—conductors, ticket collectors and maintenance workers—now being chosen from among city bus drivers and trained by experts from the Paris Metro.

In many ways the subway is a modern, posh version of the Paris system.

Technical assistance was provided by la Regie Autonome des Transports Parisiens from the first. And while the trains themselves have been redesigned by a Montreal firm long larger, heated and more-richly-appointed vehicles, the basic design is that of the Paris car.

Even the large, rubber wheels on which the trains run have been imported from France.

The subway is, one city official says, the result of the best ideas from the old world and the new.

DOESN'T OBJECT

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP)— Gilles Grenier, leader of the Quebec separatist Rallement National party, said here Sunday he sees no objection to a visit to Montreal by the Queen if she shows her passport and health certificate as he had to when he visited Britain. Mr. Grenier's made the comment in reply to reporters' questions following a recruiting rally for his party here.

East Germans Top Oarsmen

From AP-Reuters

BLED, Yugoslavia (CP)—The world's top rowers filed homeward to five continents today following a four - day world championship that proved East Germany's the team to watch to the 1968 Mexico City Olympics.

The East Germans made a sensational debut as a separate rowing team by capturing three gold medals two more than any other country, and two bronze, in the last world championships in Lucerne, Switzerland, four years ago they had none.

In that competition the two Germanys sent their shells under a single sponsorship. West German boats collected five gold and one bronze.

The West Germans this time won only one gold medal—in the eight - oared shell—and one bronze medal.

For the first time in more than 10 years Canada failed to place any crews pair, coxless pair and eight were eliminated in qualifying heats Friday.

Don Spero of New York in the single sculls was the only United States fin. only gold medal. Holland's Henri Jan Wienese received. Ryszard Gerner and Jochen Messner finished second.

The American, who covered the 2,000 metre course in seven minutes 5.32 seconds, finished 2½ seconds ahead of Gerner who finished 2½ seconds ahead of Wienese. Olympic title-holder Vyacheslav Ivanov of the Soviet was last in 7:24.9.

REVERSE OLYMPIC FINAL

The result was a complete reversal of the Tokyo Olympic final, in which Ivanov finished first and Spero was last.

East Germany, winner of the two-oared coxless pairs, was the only country to take more than one title. The others were shared by the United States, single sculls; Switzerland, double sculls; Holland, coxed pairs; and West Germany, eight.

The West German eight took over the lead from the start in many at halfway and held on to win in 5:58.28 over the Soviet Union.

Melchoir Burgin and Martin Studach of Switzerland led all the way in the double sculls in 6:39.54.

The East German coxless four game from fourth place at halfway to second at the three-quarter mark, then moved into the Soviet Union in the last 300 metres to win their event with just over a second to spare.

The easiest win of the day was scored by Hadrian Van Nes and Jan Valkenburg of Holland, coxed by Paulus Haas, in the coxed pairs. They front from the start to finish, they were more than four seconds ahead of runners-up, Czechoslovakia's second place from Italy in a photo - finish.

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Sharp 'n Smart, a 4-year-old pacer, won the 22nd renewal of the $9,932 Superfest Stakes at Garden City Raceway Saturday night.

The horse, owned jointly by John Haynes of Oshawa and Bob Shepton of Montreal, collected $4,276, boosting its earnings to $18,615.

The race was marred by an accident when Kawartha Beetle, owned by Vern M. Johnston of Peterborough, broke stride while leaving the starting gate. Jim McGregor, 34, of Keene, Ont., driving Kawartha Beetle, was unseated and thrown against the inside rail when his sulky hooked wheels with Lynden Dodger. He was not injured.

VERNON, N.Y. (CP)—H. A. Meadowland, a three-year-old pacer driven by co-owner Ron Feagan of Goderich, Ont., was beaten by a head in the last quarter by the veteran New Zealand-bred pacer Tactile in Saturday night's $31,000 Royal Memorial Pace at Vernon Downs Raceway.

The last round at Toronto, H. A. Meadowland beat a field of seven, including Tactile, to win the Canadian Pacing Derby and last week won the second of the three-race Ryan series.

Don't Ignore Constant Tappet Noise

By EUGENE R. HILMOE

Don't panic or brand your engine a 'has-been' when hydraulic valve tappet noise erupts. Especially if it's only heard when the engine is cold. This isn't unusual or indicative of trouble. But something is wrong when tappet noise is more or less constant — and it helps to know what the possibilities are.

If just one valve seems to be involved, dirt is usually the reason . . . although it could be due to a faulty plunger or plunger spring. It can also be the offender when all valve lifters are noisy, but the more common cause is too little oil or too little oil pressure. Too much oil can cause foaming, which also results in lifter noise.

Then, there is oil quality to be considered. If oil is too thin or has had to break down under high heat or bearing pressure, valve lifter noise will be your first warning.

From O. T.: "Can overheating crack an engine block?"

It's possible — but it certainly would take extremely high temperatures to do it.

C. Q. writes: "Where is the gas and air mixture vaporized — in the intake manifold or in the engine itself?"

In the intake manifold, to be precise.

From S. R.: "My '61 stick-shift sedan jerks and usually stalls if I try to pick up speed in high after slowing, say, to 20 mph or less. Even when I shift to second, it doesn't smooth out until I get up to 25 mph."

This is often due to faulty carburetor float adjustment or clogged idle passages. If not, try an ignition tune-up.

N. T. writes: "How often — if at all — should crankcase oil filters be changed?"

Depending on where you drive — on dirt or paved roads — every 2,200 to 5,000 miles.

SHARE HONORS

MONTREAL (CP) — Toronto and Montreal riders shared the honors in the 100-mile event in the annual Canadian cycling championships. Toronto's Pierre Lovell captured the junior road race title Sunday by beating 46 contestants in the 62-mile event. Montreal and St. Jerome, Que. The senior road race champion, 160-pound-ranging 130 miles return between Montreal and Ste. Agathe, Que., was won by Montrealer Paolo Mori.

United Church of Canada Favors Anglican Union

By NEIL LOUTTIT

WATERLOO (CP)—The general council of the United Church of Canada will vote today on the question of accepting the Evangelical United Brethren Church into union with the United Church.

It will be the second question of church union put to the 400 policy-makers of the United Church within three days. Saturday the council voted overwhelmingly in favor of seeking union with the Anglican Church.

United Church commissioners don't consider the question of union with the EUB as big as the Anglican-United union.

If approved by the high court of the United Church the EUB churches in Canada would become United churches. There would be no major change in United Church orders of faith or worship.

There are about 10,000 EUB followers in Canada, mostly in Ontario. The parent EUB church in the United States is still debating whether to join with the Methodist Church which became the Canadian EUB an orphan, unless accepted by the United Church.

ANSWER QUESTION

The major question on church union was answered Saturday when the commissioners approved a resolution committing the United Church to negotiate a union with the Anglicans.

The motion passed: "This general council approves the principles of union between the United Church and the Anglican Church as a working document in negotiating union with the Anglican Church. As a working document, it is subject to such revisions and additions as may become necessary."

The principles of union is the report of a joint Anglican-United Church study on church union. The Anglican church accepted the document last year.

A standing vote was taken and only one or two commissioners voted against the document.

Dr. A. B. B. Moore of Toronto, chairman of the United Church union committee, said the resolution approved Saturday was the key to church union.

PREDICTS QUICK ACTIONS

"In union in theological education could be very soon," he said, adding that committees now will be appointed to negotiate other points of union.

Very Rev. Ernest M. Howse, former moderator of the United Church, said designing new orders of bishops and presbyters will be the most difficult point in reaching a union.

In other sessions of the council, commissioners heard reports from the boards of evangelism and social service calling for repealed therapeutic abortion, widening grounds for divorce and amending the Criminal Code with respect to birth control.

The report criticized the "sin and guilt" surrounding abortions which it said often led women to seek illegal abortions. It called for all abortion to be performed by qualified doctors but only when the health of the mother was threatened.

Commissioners also reviewed a proposal that the government offer car insurance plans which ensure that all persons injured in accidents get compensation, regardless of fault.

Christian Church Divisions Called 'Sinful' and 'Tragic'

HAMILTON (CP)—The Archbishop of Canterbury Sunday told a full congregation in Christ's Church that divisions within Christianity are contrary to the wit of God.

Most Rev. Arthur Michael Ramsey, visiting the Niagara diocese as part of his monthlong Canadian tour, described divisions in the Christian church as "sinful" and "tragic."

The sermon followed a similar line to his remarks at a press conference in Niagara Falls, Ont., Saturday when he said he was thankful the United Church of Canada had approved the Principles of Union with this country's Anglican Church.

However, he said the approval is "only a beginning" to overcoming the difficulties on the road to union. But there will also be the will to overcome the difficulties, he added.

The archbishop said ordination of women likely will pose one of the most difficult problems.

HE'S OPPOSED

"Personally, I am opposed to women priests. It is one of the matters at which a new look will have to be taken."

The United Church has 65 women ministers. Anglicans have none.

The archbishop said, however, he does not foresee utter conformity if the two churches become one.

He described Christian unity as "one church possessing sufficient agreement on doctrine, one ordained ministry and some central authority but also diversity."

Personal customs and attitudes among members of both churches would take a long century to alter after union was accomplished, he said.

For instance, the United Church several years ago rejected a vote on total abstinence although the church is known for the large proportion of non-drinkers among its lay members and ministers.

"One would hope that the wet church would become less wet and the dry church would become a bit less dry," he said.

BANS PAPER

BOGOTA (Reuters) — The archbishop of Bogota banned publication Sunday, of Colombia's Roman Catholic newspaper El Catolicismo, edited by liberal priests. Luis Cardinal Concha Cordoba demanded the resignation of the editors. The 74-year-old cardinal's moves brought into the open a rift between traditionalist and progressive sectors of Colombia's Roman Catholic clergy, and between the cardinal and younger priests.

No Alternative But to Strike Say Farmers

OTTAWA (CP)—The two-cent increase in the price of a pound of butter, announced Friday by Agriculture Minister Greene, is totally inadequate and leaves no alternative but to strike, a spokesman for the Ontario Farmers' Union said.

Walter Müller, OFU vice-president, said a strike by the farmers would take the form of a complete withdrawal of all dairy products from the consumers.

Mr. Greene's announcement raises farmers' at-the-farm return for manufacturing milk by eight cents to $4.08 a hundredweight, including a 75-cent net federal subsidy.

The union had demanded a 25-cent increase in the federal base price to $3.90 giving the producers a return of $4.25.

Socreds Win In B.C., 11 Majority

Brewery Magnate Dead

By TERRY ROBERTS

VICTORIA (CP)—The Social Credit party won its fifth straight general election Monday but lost one of its chief architects of power.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner, chief aide to Premier W. A. C. Bennett and a cabinet minister since Social Credit formed its first government in 1952, was upset by a Liberal newcomer in Vancouver-Point Grey.

However, Mr. Bennett said in an interview that a Social Credit seat may be opened to permit his attorney-general to try for a seat in a by-election.

The 66-year-old premier, who campaigned intensely for a strong majority, fell short of his mark as the "New Democratic Party, official opposition, and Liberals picked up strength. Progressive Conservatives ran only three candidates and were shut out as in 1963.

Although winning 38 seats, the same number as in 1963, the Social Credit party saw its majority decline to 11 from 14. Redistribution of ridings in the spring increased the size of the house to 55 members from 52 by establishing eight new seats and eliminating five.

Party standings:

	1966	1963
Social Credit	33	38
NDP	14	14
Liberal	6	5
Total	55	52

BLAMES CHANGES

Mr. Bennett said redistribution was partly to blame for Mr. Bonner's defeat.

"I don't want to lose Bonner," he said in an interview.

"He is still the attorney-general. I now one of our constituents will hear my voice and clear the way for Bonner to take his seat in the legislature."

Social Credit picked up five of the new seats, NDP got two and the Liberals one.

The government picked up Alberni and Mackenzie from the NDP, Victoria and Esquimalt from the Conservatives, losing to Liberal Garde Gardom.

Bert Price, party whip and stalwart electioneer along with Mr. Bonner in 1952, was defeated in Vancouver - Burrard running mate from Alberni.

MARTIN DIDN'T RUN

Mr. Alsbury, a former Vancouver mayor, was running in a seat held by Health Minister Eric Martin who did not contest the election because of ill health.

About 720,000 votes were cast. Social Credit winning 46 per cent, NDP 34 per cent and Liberals 20 per cent. In 1963 the percentages were Social Credit

Astronaut Has to Cut Short Spacewalk, Gets 'So Hot and Sweaty' He Cannot See

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—Astronaut Richard F. Gordon Jr. cut short a space "walk" today and hurried back to the safety of the Gemini 11 cabin when "he got so hot and sweaty he couldn't see."

Gordon, 36 - year - old U.S. Navy lieutenant - commander, remained outside only 44 minutes of the planned 115-minute excursion.

But was the third straight time that an American astronaut cut short a space stroll because of troubles.

Command Pilot Charles Conrad Jr. flashed the word to a tracking station in the Indian Ocean that Gordon was back inside the spacecraft and that the cabin was re-pressurized.

"Listen," he said. "I just brought Dick in. He just got so hot and sweaty he couldn't see."

"We know how it is," flight controllers on the ground radioed. "When it gets where he can't see, you've got to close the lid."

Gordon had trouble organizing his 50-foot tether after opening the hatch and it apparently put a heavy work load on him. Conrad had to hold onto the space-walker's legs to prevent him from floating out before he was ready.

"I'm breathing hard. . . I'm pooped," Gordon reported.

Once outside, Gordon moved over to an Agena satellite attached to the nose of Gemini 11. The astronauts had caught and docked with the Agena in record time after their launch Monday from Cape Kennedy.

Before calling off the stroll, Conrad accomplished a task vital to a high - flying experiment planned Wednesday.

He unstowed one end of a 100-foot cord stored under the Agena docking collar. He attached the loose end to a ruler-like docking bar on the Gemini nose. The bulk of the line remained coiled in a stowage area on the Agena, the other end attached to the target satellite.

Conrad and Gordon plan Wednesday to disconnect from the Agena and pull the 100-foot line taut between the two vehicles to see whether this is an effective, fuel - saving means of flying formation in space.

Thruster On Gemini 'Poops Out'

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Command pilot Charles Conrad reported no dead manoeuvering thrust, we today as the Gemini 11 pilots whirled into their second day in orbit.

Conrad said the No. 8 thruster appeared to have "poopers" out. He said when he tried to use it to yaw left the spacecraft responded with a right roll.

Flight control said the faulty thruster would be tested on a pass over Carnarvon, Australia, to determine if the problem was electrical or mechanical — perhaps a stuck valve.

There was no apparent concern for the mission. Controllers said Astronauts Gordon Cooper and Conrad lost two thrusters and partial use of a third during the Gemini 5 flight.

They specifically pointed out that the problem was the opposite of that which occurred during Gemini 8, when the thruster stuck open, and started the ship spinning, forcing an early splashdown in the Pacific.

CF-5 Will Be Placed In Canada

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCAF plans to form four CF-5 fighter-bomber squadrons of 18 planes each and station them all in Canada.

Officials say one of the squadrons will be primarily for training. It will be based at Cold Lake, Alta.

Sites for the three operational squadrons—the first will have been formed by Jan. 1, 1968—have not yet been selected but they will likely be in the vicinity of the army's training areas at Camp Gagetown, N.B., Camp Petawawa, Ont., and Camp Wainwright, Alta.

The supersonic CF-5s will be used in Mobile Command primarily for reconnaissance and surveillance. Their other roles are interdiction, close support of ground troops and air-to-air interception.

The program calls for production of 115 planes at a cost of $215,000,000. The first CF-5 is scheduled to come off the assembly line at Canadair Ltd., Montreal, Aug. 18, 1967. The production rate will be five

Vote Today But No Hint Of Accord

By CARL MOLLINS

LONDON (CP) — Commonwealth leaders today broke off temporarily from debate on the tortured Rhodesian situation.

Diplomats outlined privately the background of an incident when Foreign Minister Simon Kapwepwe of Zambia stalked from Marlborough House, scene of the Commonwealth conference, with the remark that he was "disgusted."

Diplomats explained that Africans had wanted to go into private caucus once again on the Rhodesian matter. But Prime Minister Harold Holt of Australia objected that there were many problems in the world besides Rhodesia, a subject which the 20-country conference now has been discussing for nearly eight days.

He wanted the conference to move on to other world political problems, such as Viet Nam, and the conference agreed to do this until the afternoon meeting, when the Rhodesian debate would be resumed.

DRAFT COMMUNIQUE

Arnold Smith of Canada, Commonwealth secretary - general, and his aides meanwhile worked on a Rhodesian communique which would be presented to the delegation heads for approval or rejection.

Delegates said leaders had failed to reach full agreement on Rhodesia before they turned to other subjects—despite optimism expressed Monday night by Canada's Prime Minister Pearson.

The drawn-out debate on Rhodesia and disagreement over procedure was followed by a India-Pakistan flare-up over Kashmir—a 20-year-old dispute between the two countries that led to war a year ago this month. Some details of the flare-up emerged in press briefings.

A Pakistani spokesman, reviewing Foreign Minister Syed Shariful Mujahid Pasha's contribution to conference discussions of general world affairs, quoted Pakistan as saying:

"Pakistan regards Rhodesia as being of great importance to the Commonwealth because it poses the fundamental question of the right to self-determination.

"That is the question in Kashmir also."

INDIA MADE OBJECTION

An India spokesman then intervened at the press briefing to say that the Indian minister, Sadar Swaran Singh, had raised a point of order in the conference, objecting to Pakistan's interjecting the Kashmir issue on the ground that it was a matter for United Nations consideration, not a Commonwealth issue.

The Indian said Prime Min-

Rates to Go Up on Rail Freight

MONTREAL (CP)—The CNR and CPR announced Monday night they plan to increase freight rates by 10 per cent to help offset rising costs, particularly the 16 per cent wage increase granted Canada's 118,000 railway workers by Parliament Sept. 1.

The CPR also announced it will raise commuter fares by five to 25 cents a ticket, starting Sept. 17.

The joint communique issued by the two railways did not blame the government for the increases. It only said the increases would "help offset rising costs."

However, a CNR spokesman said later the "rising costs" were mainly wages. There are a "number of reasons" why the statement did not refer directly to the wage boosts granted by the government in legislation which ended the seven-day nation-wide rail strike, he added.

Vorster P.M. of Africa

By ADAM KELLETT-LOWE

CAPE TOWN (Reuters)—Balthazar John Vorster, the strong man of South African politics, was elected prime minister today and said he will continue the course set by the late Hendrik Verwoerd.

One week after Verwoerd was stabbed to death by a messenger in Parliament, Vorster was unanimously elected party leader by a 103-member caucus of the ruling Nationalist party. His only rival, Transport Minister Ben Schoeman, stood down at the last moment.

As party leader, the 50-year-old Vorster, a staunch right-winger, automatically became South Africa's seventh prime minister.

In an impromptu speech to several thousand cheering people from the steps of Parliament, Vorster said:

"What do I believe in? I believe in the Nationalist party and its principles and the full implementation of them in every respect, whatever the circumstances."

Vorster built up a reputation as a determined man with a

Police Watch as White Mob Beats Negro School Children

GRENADA, Miss. (AP) — Heavily armed highway patrolmen were in Grenada today to prevent further mob attacks on Negro children attending the city's two previously all-white schools.

The patrol took over Monday after most of the city and county officers on the scene watched as a crowd of 400 whites, swinging axe handles, chains and tree branches, attacked Negro children leaving the schools.

Meanwhile, a ragtag team area in Atlanta, Ga., had its third straight night of rock and firebomb throwing and an incident in Bogalusa, La., threatened to lead to open battling.

The highway patrol went into Grenada after Governor Paul Johnson declared that "those who raise the sword of violence will be met by the sword of law enforcement."

The 12th Party hitlers, in full riot dress, took over Monday night. A white man who argued the case of "nigger lovers" and "I thought you were a good Mississippian!"

Several hundred whites, shouting defiance of both state and federal authority, held a furious session Monday night in the city hall auditorium to demand that the patrol be withdrawn.

"If you get that state highway patrol out of here there won't be a nigger left in Grenada," cried one man.

Mayor J. A. Quinn scolded replying to an angry query as to which official called for patrol Under state law, the highway patrol may not go into a law enforcement situation of the highways unless local authorities invite them or the governor sends them in.

One 12-year-old Negro, Richard Sigh, hobbled nearly a block on a broken leg through a gauntlet of men. Many women were present, cursing and shrieking, but the men did all the beatings.

Sigh and three others, all 16-year-old, were taken to hospital.

Some 250 Negroes desegregated the city's two all-white schools, one elementary, the other a high school. They stand side by side.

Others were chased back by white men. Of those who got to the schools, most stayed inside until they got a police escort.

Believes U.S. Bombing Hardens North Viet Nam Will to Fight

WATERLOO (CP) — United States bombing of North Viet Nam will not bring the Viet Cong to the conference table, Toronto minister told the General Council of the United Church of Canada Monday.

In a report on the church and international affairs, Rev. A. J. Hoed told the 400 policymakers of the church that German bombing of England did not make the British seek negotiations.

"It galvanized their will to fight on, if need be to their death," he said. "The same psychology is working among the proud people of Viet Nam."

A resolution was put before the council calling for cessation of bombing of North Viet Nam, opposing further escalation of the war and condemning war profiteering practised by both sides in the conflict.

Debate on the resolution had barely started when the council adjourned for the day.

Mr. Hoed's report was a summation of a 66-page committee report, which was criticized by Dr. A. C. Forrest, editor of the United Church Observer, as being overstated and exaggerated.

He said authorities should be consulted in the report and in many places the report was "unfair and unbalanced."

Dr. Forrest proposed a motion asking that the report be returned to the committee for "tempering" of the language.

The Viet Nam resolution which was under debate at adjournment was separate from the report.

Most of the delegates sat indifferent to the debate which was carried on by a few for about an hour.

Rev. B. G. Smillie of Saskatoon condemned the mood of the council and said he was ashamed of it.

He accused the council of "attempting political neutrality" in a manner that wasn't neutral.

The question of the church's stand on the Smith regime of Rhodesia is also included in the report. This matter could also be up for debate today.

Earlier Monday, the council voted to receive the Canada Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren Church into union.

This means EUB churches in the Canada Conference will become United Churches, provided the parent EUB organization in the United States approves the move.

Bishop Reuben Mueller of Indianapolis said he could not foresee any difficulty in the Canada conference making the move. The EUB in the United States is seeking union with the Methodist Church.

Subway Under CN Tracks At Cannifton Road Crossing Not Possible Says Planner

That long considered prospect of an eventual subway under the Canadian National Railway tracks on Cannifton Road has been explained by an engineering report to city council.

It seems that a subway beneath the railway tracks at this point is not possible from an engineering standpoint and also that the cost of land acquisition for any underpass with satisfactory grades and headroom would be very costly.

In a report to the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board, City Planning Director P. J. Beevis says the bottom of any underpass would be below river level and subject to flooding for nine months of the year.

Mr. Beevis suggested that the only feasible way of improving the traffic flow in this portion of the city would be to build a rail crossing structure in another location.

INSTALL NEW GATES

The information with respect to a subway being impractical at the Cannifton Road crossing was submitted in connection with a request from the Board of Transport Commissioners for improvement of the automatic protection at the crossing.

Council had earlier declined to go along with the added protection in view of the possible construction of a subway at this point.

Yesterday, however, council went along with the request for the installation of two short arm gates, but because of increased railway traffic and proposed increase in train speeds, suggested there should be a different cost distribution.

It was pointed out that the increased railway traffic and proposed increase in train speeds appeared to be the main reasons for the proposed improvements to the automatic protection.

Estimated cost of the addition of protection is given as $18,700 with maintenance of $850 per annum.

One the basis of present apportionment of costs the city's share of installation costs would be $2,000 and maintenance of $425 per annum.

New Traffic Pattern Cuts Business Above Victoria Ave. Claim of Several Aldermen

Criticism of the new traffic pattern in the Front Street area and the Upper Bridge which was put into effect with the closing of the Collins Street Bridge was heard in city council yesterday.

The criticism was mainly from the standpoint of Front Street merchants above Victoria Ave. who had complained of a loss of business with the traffic on that part of the street.

Alderman Dr. J. Russell Scott led off the criticism claiming that no more than one tenth of the former traffic was now coming down Front Street and that business above Victoria Ave. had been cut to a minimum.

He suggested the left turn of Pinnacle Street leading down Front Street a "game of snakes and suggested that merchants were being hurt badly.

"It makes one wonder what engineers have figured within it the new traffic regulations," he said.

SYSTEM MOVES TRAFFIC

Alderman Jack Allis also was critical of the Upper Bridge traffic pattern but did not admit that the system was moving traffic.

He admitted it might be difficult to work out a satisfactory pattern but said that under the present system Front Street business was down.

Alderman Jack Deacon said that car dealer Cecil Jones at the corner of Pinnacle and Front St. was being "put out of business" because he was left with no entrance or exit.

A suggestion that traffic be directed by police was offered by Ald. Arthur Keegan who said that Church Street hill currently being used as the route downtown from Station Street would create problems during the winter months.

ASKED TO REPORT

Mayor Jack Ellis noted that the new traffic pattern had been set up by one of Canada's top traffic consultants. Alderman a David Agnew agreed that it did offer some advantages.

But Alderman Douglas Boyle pointed out that new traffic pattern had been in effect only for five days and suggested it might be a bit premature to make any change until the system was thoroughly tried.

Accordingly City Engineer Wilbur Parcell and City Traffic Inspector were authorized to fully investigate and report to the next meeting of council.

Rev. E.L. Quirk Leaves on Visit To India

Rev. Eric L. Quirk who resigned as minister of the Emmanuel Baptist Church and Sidney Baptist Church on August 31, is leaving this week for a visit to the Baptist stations in India, the Holy Land and a number of other places.

Born in Brantford, Rev. Quirk graduated from the McMaster University, Hamilton, 1919. He met the former Iona Beamer at the Town of Johnston in 1919-1920 and they were married in 1923.

He taught at North Toronto Collegiate Institute for five years, obtaining principal's qualifications in 1936. He was the pastor of Ebenezer Church, now Rexdorth Baptist Church, Toronto, a few weeks before his departure to India in 1938.

After illustrious careers there both in India, due to ill health Rev. Quirk was not able to return, and from 1953-56 he was minister of Parkdale Baptist Church, Toronto, during which time the building was completed. When the Belleville Baptist Foreign Mission Board formally retired them in 1956, he moved to Toronto as principal of the high school, during which time he also acted as interim pastor in Kingston, Belleville and Picton.

When the new Emmanuel Baptist Church was started in Belleville in 1960, he was invited to be the minister. After five and one half years in the teaching profession at Ebenezer, he became minister of the two Baptist churches here.

Rev. Charles Savage will be the new minister to replace Rev. Quirk and is expected to arrive in October.

He was not expected to make any immediate drastic policy changes though opposition political commentators here believe his leadership will mean a hardening of South Africa's attitude to the critical outside world.

As Vorster spoke from Parliament's steps, squads of uniformed and plainclothes police were on hand to prevent any possible repetition of the assassination of Verwoerd.

The new prime minister appealed for unity between English- and Afrikaans - speaking South Africans. He spoke first in Afrikaans then in English.

Low Season Dam North Of Lazier's Dam Approved

City council yesterday gave its approval for the Moira River Conservation Authority to proceed with plans for the construction of a low season dam in the Moira River north of Lazier's Dam.

Mayor J. R. Ellis told council that by having the dam built under the Authority provincial grant would be received to offset the cost of approximately $15,000 resulting in a net cost to the city of about $2,700.

The mayor said that a small dam would be of tremendous benefit to the Fry Park on Canniton Road now under development by the parks board. The dam would be built next year with the cost to come from the 1967 city budget.

Approval of the seasonal dam project brought a request from Alderman Arthur Keegan for the bayshore drive south of the sewage disposal plant to receive priority.

Council went along with the request for the drive to be placed on the priority list but in view of other commitments there was doubt expressed that much further work could be done this year.

Mayor Ellis said it was a three point matter of handling, getting surveys completed and of priority.

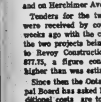
Council Apportions Costs Of Sidewalks in Two Areas



City council yesterday decided on the method of payment for the additional costs in connection with the construction of sidewalks on Dundas Street, West, and on Herchimer Ave.

Tenders for the two projects were received by council two weeks ago with the contract for the two projects being awarded to Revoy Construction at $40,677.75, a figure considered by higher than was estimated.

Since then the Ontario Municipal Board has asked how the additional costs are to be apportioned between the city and the property owners.

Yesterday council decided that additional costs of a temporary walk and for curbing on the Dundas Street project amounting to $7,130 would be assessed to the city, while the balance of additional costs of $2,050 would be assessed against the adjoining property owners.

On the Herchimer Ave. project, the additional costs of sodding and curbing on the section and the balance of additional costs amounting to $1,025 will be assessed against the property owners.

Transportation For Pupils to Cost $4,000

Bus transportation for city school children who normally would have walked to school across the Collins Bay Street Bridge will cost the municipality an estimated $4,000 during the current school term.

City council was told yesterday that a letter from which the College Street bridge taken out now had no way of getting to school.

Mayor Jack Ellis said the bus rate offered by the Belleville Transit Commission was a "bargain". One alderman said however, the rate should not be so low that the city bus company lost money on the operation.

Expropriation Bylaw Covering Four Properties Is Approved

With demolition of the old College Street bridge now underway, city council took action yesterday to expropriate possession of remaining properties needed for construction of the new bridge.

An expropriation by-law covering four different properties was passed by council although it was pointed out that in the case of at least two of the properties negotiations were expected to result in amicable settlement.

That just a case of making sure the city has possession in case of settlement delays," a city official noted.

Three properties or parts of properties on the east side of the river are needed for the bridge approach.

They are the I.G.A. food market building which will be torn down early next month, the old gas station corner of the Canniton Road-College Street intersection owned by Imperial Oil Limited and a small triangular piece of property from the service station on the southwest corner.

Also included in the expropriation by - law is a small piece of river bottom land west of the present bridge south of the bridge owned by Frank Folwell.

There was considerable discussion by council as to the advisability of the city purchasing the entire Southam Investment Ltd. property instead of the lot was actually required for the roadway intersection.

However, city manager J. R. Reynolds said in the instance it had been considered to be in the best interest of the city to acquire the entire property due to the difficulty of selling the required later.

Expo Balance Sheet
$82 Million Deficit to Win Canada Two Billion in Trade

Although a deficit of $82 million is forecast for the Canadian Pavilion at Expo 67 in Montreal, the world exhibition is expected to generate about $2 billion in new trade and trade, Dr. George Fisher, assistant project director (agriculture) of Expo, told Belleville Rotarians yesterday.

"I say this is good business at any time," said Dr. Fisher in a rebuttal of views expressed by some that the exhibition could be a costly fathire.

"It will also stimulate the Canadian economy by 1967 and making three billion in all."

Dr. Fisher, a brother of Controller Gordon Fisher and Tim Fisher, blamed "negative thinking" among Canadians for believing that Expo will be anything else but a success. It was up to everyone to support the venture in order to get maximum results.

He said Canada's birthday celebration would last 365 days, and that thousands of extra jobs would take place across the country. However, it is only a start as far as participants.

Also the people of the Quinte area get behind the Centennial it can only be a terrific success, he said. "This is a big thing here after all of us. Are we going to capitalize on it?"

Dr. Fisher praised Mayor Drapeau of Montreal for ignoring suggestions that the city would not provide a site and for helping to ensure that Canada was the final choice for the world exhibition against competition from the Soviet Union.

With the aid of color slides, Dr. Fisher gave a rapid-fire but nevertheless lucid and detailed description of the Expo complex in the river, ranging from the pavilions illustrating the exhibition theme, Man and his World, to the contributions of the 77 nations taking part.

The Canadian pavilion, identified by the Eskimo inuksuk or "meeting place," will present a cross-section of the nation's complex activities, with some new projections for the future. Ontario, the Maritimes and the Canadian provinces will all have separate or group exhibitions of their own.

Other great nations and Russia positions will provide an interesting study in contrast. The Russian Pavilion is being financed by the United States has no visible internal means of support, and the Soviets pavilion contains enough steel to construct a 30-storey office building. At the conclusion of Expo the latter will be dismantled and re-erected in Moscow.

Some interesting exhibits include the Theatre of the Stars where visitors will have an opportunity of seeing and hearing performances by the world's leading artistes, and a football game.

There was laughter when Dr. Fisher commented slyly that several may buy the stadium following Expo, "so that it can have a football team worthy of a stadium."

On the cultural side again, nearly 200 of the world's outstanding examples of fine art will be exhibited.

THRILL-GIVERS

And at a rather less lofty level of enjoyment, but entering nonetheless in mankind's catholic tastes, is the frontier saloon, straight from the wild west. Here will be feature a mock gun battle every half-hour or so. And the fearsome contraption called a gyrasex will fling anyone venturing upon it 11 stories high, and then finally its cargo into the jaws of an "outer - space monster."

These presentations — and many others — are what organizer Expo 67, the largest world exhibition ever undertaken. The last one, in Brussels, featured about 40 countries, or little more than half the number participating in Montreal.

Dr. Fisher, a native of Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, and a graduate of the Ontario Veterinary College in Guelph, also addressed students of Quinte secondary school and Albert College during his visit.

The speaker was introduced by Jos Demeza and he was thanked by Harry Burns. Rotary President Dr. J. F. McCorquodale presided.

Among the guests was Mayor Jack Ellis.

Mayor Suggests Tax Relief For Senior Citizens, More Recreation Accommodation

A proposal to grant tax relief to senior citizens in Belleville who have owned their own homes for at least 10 years, has been suggested to city council by Mayor Jack Ellis.

Mayor Ellis made the proposal to city council yesterday at the first regular meeting of the fall season. The matter will be up for approval at the next meeting of council, following which enabling legislation would have to be sought from the provincial government.

In effect the tax relief proposal would be in the form of credit to senior citizens for that part of their realty taxes which normally would be used for school purposes.

The limit of such tax credit would be $100 on the home in which they are living. There would also be provision for a means test as Mayor Ellis did not consider it would be fair for the remainder of the citizens to subsidize persons better off than themselves.

HOPES TO FIND RELIEF

Mayor Ellis said he was prompted to try to find some financial relief for senior citizens because of the rising costs of living which fall more on pensioners in a financial squeeze.

He said the Federal government had not seen fit to grant senior citizens an across-the-board increase in their old age security pension and they had not had increases in salaries or wages of up to 30 percent as had been the case with many workers.

At the same time there had been steady increases in municipal taxes.

The mayor went on to say that Belleville's senior citizens should now under construction would provide at relatively low cost a haven for some of their fellow senior citizens. However, there are many older people who have always lived in their own home, but because they want to spend the rest of their lives there, should not be taxed into oblivion.

MUST TACKLE PROBLEM

"Since the Federal government seems entirely unwilling to tackle this problem and since avenues of taxation open to the provincial government do not provide the funds, I think it the city had better take steps to do what we can to help our senior citizens," the mayor said.

The plight of the senior citizens was but one of two matters brought before council by Mayor Ellis.

The other was the problem of finding accommodation for the holding of teen dance parties, which, the mayor said, would have been held at the Belleville Arena. However, with the advent of winter hockey the Arena will no longer be available. The dances, under the direction of Dave Charles of radio station CJBQ have been attracting crowds of well over 1,000 each week.

RECREATION IMPORTANT

Mayor Ellis noted that planned recreation was becoming an extremely important part of modern everyday life and that it would be unwise to allow these activities to cease.

Noting the old adage about idle hand finding mischief, Mayor Ellis said that Belleville had one of the lowest incidences of juvenile delinquency in the province.

He hoped that in the next few weeks a temporary solution for the dance accommodation problem would be found and ultimately a final answer.

Alderman Don Williams, chairman of the city parks board reported he council that the body had been thinking along the same lines and at their next meeting the board had voted to ask the city for $100,000 from its 1967 budget.

WOULD START CENTRE

This amount of money would be used to finance the building of an artificial outdoor rink at the fairgrounds, he said.

Alderman Williams said he hoped this would be the beginning of a community centre in Belleville.

He said the outdoor artificial rink was badly needed in the city as the Belleville Arena did not now provide sufficient ice time for the young people. The artificial rink would help to meet this need.

Also planned in connection with the artificial ice rink complex was a building to replace the old Commodore building on the fairground which has been condemned. It was hoped that finances for the building could be obtained through various other methods.

NO AVAILABLE SPACE

Alderman Williams also mentioned the weekly dance parties which have been held at the Arena, noting that with the winter ice season there was no other place in the city large enough to accommodate these young people for activities under the direction of the recreation commission.

In the long range program although possibly many years, it was hoped that a community centre would be built at the fairgrounds and that the artificial rink complex would be the beginning of such a program.

Rates

municipus said bluntly that the new fares "are the result of wage increases awarded to rail workers . . ."

AFFECT 30 PER CENT

The freight rate increases will affect about 30 per cent of the cargo handled by both railways.

The 30 per cent increase, effective Oct. 30, applies to cargo carried at "competitive rates." Commodities rates in "agreed charges" rates will be made later.

To receive the agreed charge rate, a shipper must guarantee a specific amount of cargo during the contract period.

A spokesman for the CPR said various commodities such as radios and television sets and cigarettes will be affected under the competitive rates classification. He said railroads have unmatched "items" which the railways compete for with other modes of transport.

The joint statement said that the types of traffic which will be affected "now move at rates which are below the general freight rates established by law and frozen by government action in 1958."

WAGE INCREASES SAID

Supplements to freight tariffs reflecting the increase are being filed by the two railways with the Board of Transport Commissioners.

The increases will take automatically unless the objections are filed with the board. In that event the matter will be suspended to suspend the increases until a public hearing has been held. The board can then rule for or against the railways.

The proposed new commuter fares have already been filed with the board.

These increases would mainly affect 7,000 commuters in the Montreal area who use the CPR. The majority of the railway's commuter traffic is in Montreal while the CNR handles most of Toronto's service to and from the suburbs.

The CNR said it had no immediate plans for increasing its commuter fares.

INCREASES VARY

The increases in commuter rates will vary according to distance travelled. The CPR would not give a definite percentage figure for the increase because of the complex nature of rail tariffs structures.

However, a strip ticket for the eight-mile run from suburban Lachine to downtown Montreal will be increased to $2.90 from the current $11.90. Similar increases will be made with the 10-trip ticket.

The last freight rate increase was made in 1956. The board of transport authorized a 17 per cent raise but the government stepped in to "roll back" the increase to nine per cent and freeze freight rates.

The last commuter increase was made three years ago.

Labor Council Will Present Trade Brief

The Belleville and District Labor Council enjoyed two firsts last night — the first meeting since the holiday recess, and the first meeting in their new office, in the United Community Services building at 224 John St.

President George Dainard was appointed to attend a city council meeting to present a brief on fair trade practices. Harold Blakely made the request for a delegate from the Labor Council to attend.

Gerald Cunningham, Labor Council representative on the Belleville General Hospital Board, reported the Board's energies are still mainly concentrated on the new building.

Henry Noakes, Canadian Labor Council representative, explained that all donors to the Council's Belleville Fair Booth be sent a letter of appreciation for their co-operation.

It was also decided that committees will be formed at the next meeting for Labor Day celebrations in 1967 and the 1968 Santa Claus Parade. The Labor Council plans other committees for the future as part of its plan to take an increased role in city activities.

Council Asked To Revoke Licence

A request for the city to revoke the licence of the Green Auto Wreckers in the east end of the city was heard in city council yesterday.

Mr. Alex Rushlow, Haig Road resident said there was a continuous burning of tires at the wrecking yard with result that smoke could at times cut their laundry and homes were smoke filled to the extent that there was a health hazard.

He said also that the "unsightly" wrecking yard with its piles of wrecked autos detracted the value of property in the area.

Mayor Jack Ellis said he realized the wrecking yard was a continual nuisance but wondered what legal revenue were open to the city should it seek to take any action.

The matter was left in abeyance awaiting a report from the city manager's office.

RCAF Vets Will Inspect Model of War One Trainer

TRENTON—Members of 413 Trenton Wing of the RCAF Association will spend a nostalgic hour or so Wednesday night when they visit No. 6 Repair Depot, where Warrant Officer Harry Tate and his work crew have just about finished building a World War I pilot trainer . . . the Avro 504K . . . from the ground up". The two-seater biplane is the first of four which will be assembled at 6 RD and used as trainers until plans for them to take part in Centennial Year air shows are completed.

First off the "assembly line" will be GC-YCK. The second aircraft will be labeled GC-YEL.

GC-YCK will be airborne before the end of the month and will be practice flying around here 10 hours a day until it is ready for a flight of 1,000 miles to Portage La Prairie.

The fabric-covered trainer has a wing span of 29 feet. It has a "double wing", reminiscent of the Tiger Moth, and a 100 h.p. Rolls Royce engine, model J.

Between 1914 and 1919, 17,000 504 Ks were turned out.

Members of the Wing will meet at 8 p.m. in the "rec centre" at South Station for a brief business meeting and will be taken to 6 RD to view the vintage aircraft after that.

Refuse to Rent School Auditorium on Sundays

TRENTON — A charge that Trenton was "behind the times" in matters set out by E. Leslie Dickerson of the district Jehovah's Witness congregation, when members of the Trenton Board of Education refused to deviate from a policy not to rent the high school auditorium and kitchen facilities to any group on Sundays.

Mr. Dickerson and Ross Hoffman of the local assembly came before the board to ask for the high school facilities on Feb. 10, 11 and 12. A Witness convention will be in progress of 700 persons into the area, they said.

Mr. Dickerson said school boards in Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal had granted use of auditorium facilities ago in order to give school masters time employees free Sundays.

"We're not asking for this. It was a change," suggested Mr. Hoffman.

In spite of a half hour argument by the two Witnesses, the board members stuck by their guns and voted to let the rules stand as they were.

At the high school, the deputy reeve of Ameliasburg Township, George Cunningham, is preparing the plan. E. T. Kennedy, superintendent of public schools, is in charge of the elementary school plan.

The basic assumption is that a school assembly would be called immediately following a warning and that the pupils would then be dispersed to their homes.

WILL BUY FIRS

TRENTON — The Trenton Board of Education will continue its policy of buying silver grain donation plan for 1967 Grade 12 grads and gold pins for Grade 12 students.

Police Dog Being Used To Apprehend 'Fire Bug'

PICTON (Staff) — Picton's "Fire-bug" may end up going to the dogs if the Crown and Marshal's office have anything to say about it. At a meeting Monday afternoon it was announced by Del Hope of the Fire Marshal's office that a trained German Shepherd "Butch", who in Picton all last week with his trainer Constable Garry Walker, of the Ontario Provincial Police, Picton town police, who were so quick in the apprehension of two men recently charged with arson, are working hand in hand with the Fire Marshal's office in an all out drive to put an end to these fires, which have recently harassed the town. The dog which is a highly trained animal, stays continuously with his trainer.

Picton townspeople are advised to stay away from future fires and let this dog perform his job without distractions. Citizens are also asked to co-operate with police and fire officials if they notice any fires or anyone acting in a suspicious manner so that prompt action may be taken.

Fire Marshal representative, Del Hope, said that they have 6 months of this case and it is only a matter of time until the police make an arrest.

Further to the action taken by police and fire officials the Mayor of Picton H. J. McFarland, has also offered a reward of $200 to anyone revealing the identity of the firebug and leading to his apprehension. The Mayor will likely propose this to town council but is prepared to offer the reward himself if need be. There have been no fires in Picton during this past week.

Viet Nam Election

The 80 per cent turnout of voters in the South Viet Nam general election is an encouraging sign of the democratic process taking root in that war-weary land.

How much the election portends an early end to the communist threat from the north is of course another matter. The "pacification" program being undertaken mainly by South Vietnamese and South Korean troops while the Americans do most of the fighting, may take a long time. Pacification involves the sending of cadres into areas wrested from the communist Viet Cong, to encourage the population in the pursuit of peaceful pursuits. This includes efforts to develop agriculture and improve living conditions generally.

The fact that the communists did their best to disrupt the election by stepping up attacks on South Vietnamese villages, as well as on targets in Saigon itself, is another indication of how undesirable they feel the election was so far as their own hopes of victory are concerned. Premier Ky went so far as to say it spelled "the beginning of the end for the communists."

"Now we have the conditions for final victory," the premier said at a press conference. The young air force general is as vital a personality as any in the frequently inept and corrupt record of government in South Viet Nam. His words carry the weight of a man of integrity.

At his same time his end is in sight in this perplexing and destructive conflict. The communist forces in Viet Nam are tough and resourceful, and they have the backing of China and to a lesser extent Russia. If China should intervene directly, by sending troops in force, knowing how long the war might last. At the very worst it could lead to a full-scale nuclear conflict between east and west. One way or another, the signs still point to a protracted war.

Encouraging Savings

When Britain was struggling through one of its previous economic crises some years ago, Chancellor of the Exchequer (later Prime Minister) Harold Macmillan came up with a brilliant plan to encourage savings.

Like all bright ideas its essence was simplicity. It involved an appeal to the natural gambling instinct of the public, while at the same time placating the moralists because the original investment remained safe.

The investment, of course, is Britain's famous premium bond, which when drawn in its millions every month produces handsome dividends of up to £1,000 for the lucky winners. The bonds themselves produce no interest, but may be redeemed at any time, and there is always the chance of a substantial dividend if one's number turns up in the draw.

Here in Canada, Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp is increasing the drawing power of Canada Savings Bonds, with what is described as a unique double-your-money feature involving the new Centennial series going on sale next month.

The bond buyer can double his original investment if he waits until maturity in 1979 to cash the bond and coupons. The issue also provides the highest average yield in the 21-year history of the program.

Payoffs on the bonds already run to about $1 billion a year, but as in the case of Mr. Macmillan's premium bonds in the U.K., the federal government here is hoping to build up personal savings even further as an anti-inflationary measure.

Berlin Escape

Since the communists erected the infamous Berlin wall and sealed off the relatively free access to the west that existed before, many have risked their lives to effect daring escapes through the wire and over the wall itself.

Others have died in the attempt, gunned down by the soldiers of the East German border guards. Those who have made it to the west have used much ingenuity, very necessary in the circumstances, but above all is the courage they demonstrate. Only the brave are capable of such hazardous undertakings.

Those qualities were evident in the escape of two young East German couples at the weekend. They crashed their way into the British sector in a bulldozer converted into a makeshift armored car by adding steel plates around the sides. One couple had a four-year-old son with them.

Communist guards fired about 100 rounds of machine-gun fire at the vehicle. Thirty-eight bullets hit the vehicle and several pierced the thin steel protection. One of the men and one of the women were treated in hospital for slight head wounds and released.

Their ordeal over, the escapees were all smiles when photographed in the western sector. But meanwhile the wall remains, bolstered by guards who show no hesitation or even compassion in the use of their weapons — a fact that in this case drew official protests by the three western commanders in Berlin.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sept. 13, 1966

The Canadian corps was established 51 years ago today—in 1915—when 2nd Canadian Division arrived at the front in France. Its English general was appointed commander and Brig. Arthur Currie was promoted to general in command of the 1st Division. Two years later he became the first non-regular officer to command a corps. Because he refused to give Sir Sam Hughes the soon command of a division, Currie was hounded by his overlords in Canada and his character attacked after the war. But under his leadership the Canadian Corps preserved its identity and became one of the most feared attack forces of the First World War.

Girl Late in Talking, Perhaps Hearing Faulty

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My little girl is two years, five months old, and has never even spoken the words, "mama" and "daddy." She will not pay attention when I try to get her to speak.

She seems healthy and normal in every other way. She hears well, but just won't talk. My husband says to leave her alone, but I am worried. What is the proper age for children to talk? — E. P.

There is some variation, but most youngsters babble a little after 18 months (some sooner, of course), use single words for two or two and one-half years, and are making short sentences at three.

Your youngster might be a late talker, but this is getting very late, especially for girls, who ordinarily talk sooner than boys.

Your child needs prompt attention. You say that she hears well, but pay attention when you try to get her to talk.

It raises the thought that she may not hear as well as you think. She may respond when you call her, yet her hearing may be so defective that it cannot make out clearly the words sounds.

Children who have never been able to hear well simply do not realize that fact. They seem perfectly natural to them to respond to loud sounds, or to be particularly alert to things which they see, giving the impression that they hear when they don't.

Have your pediatrician investigate this; if he finds reason to suspect a hearing defect he will refer you to the proper specialists. If not, he can begin a search for some other physical defect.

Dear Dr. Molner: Would you discuss useful bacteria in the intestines? How do they cause fever, trouble in the bladder, and other unwelcome symptoms? — Mrs. E. K.

A variety of organisms — the colon bacillus, other bacteria and still other non-bacterial ones — inhabit the bowel. In a healthy individual, they maintain a safe balance, just as in nature small animals eat bird's eggs, and larger birds such as hawks prey in turn on small animals.

If, however, antibiotics have to be used to combat infection in the body, bacteria in the bowel will be suppressed while other organisms, not so affected, thrive. This can cause inflammation of the colon, resulting in diarrhea and sometimes bleeding. Then gradually the balance returns to normal. This is a sound reason for not using antibiotics beyond a necessary extent.)

Sometimes, especially in women, the colon bacillus can get into the urinary tract. The colon not only can tolerate this bacillus but needs it. The bladder and kidneys, however, are not equipped to cope with it, and appropriate urinary antiseptics have to be employed to destroy the bacillus when it has gotten into the wrong area.

Dear Dr. Molner: What ever happened to the "memory" pill. Is it successful, harmful or found to be of little value? Is it available by prescription?—M. F.

It is still being studied, but a lot of time is required to find out all that needs to be known about such a drug. Last I heard, there were reasons to think it has a beneficial effect on some people. We need to know which ones it can help and which it can't; what happens after continued use; exactly how it works; whether precautions are necessary. These things can't safely be hurried. The pill is not available to the public.

Note to D. L.: No, there is no reason to think that Vitamin D will weaken the valves of the heart.

Maturity and the Transgressor

Wall Street Journal

The advertising industry, so often attacked as a useless appendage of prosperity, sometimes seems determined to make things harder on itself. Consider a study of the teenage market published recently by Doyle Dane Bernbach, a New York agency.

According to the study's author psychologist Charles Slack, "The underlying problem of teenagers today is that of achieving dignity." Unfortunately, attainment of the goal is hampered by a lack of maturity. And that, for reasons, offers a great opportunity to advertisers th appeal to the new, emerging "image of the nobility of youth."

Mr. Slack says there are Many things teenagers want to do and can't." Hence advertisers ought to devise "powerful tie-ups . . . between a product and a youth's psyche." For instance a feeling of "super-intelligence" is much desired by teenagers, so the advertiser who can "plant the notion that candy-coated popcorn is brain food" ought to sell a lot of popcorn.

Or, since youngsters yearn for the age at which they can drive a car, he suggests presenting a product in a way implying that its use will put the teenager into the driver's seat sooner. "Every body knows that can't be true," the author concedes, but "properly presented" the advertiser can get away with it. He also thinks that "barrels of money" could be made if the use of non-skintone colors becomes a teenage fad, the youngsters persuaded to give their hands blue and lilac legs green.

That may be, although it is hard to see what blue hands and green legs have to do with a teenage search for dignity or nobility. It isn't, however, hard to imagine fetes at the Federal Trade Commission turning bright red at the appearance of any selling gimmick "everybody knows . . . can't be true." Fiduciary lack of maturity is not a monopoly of teenagers.

Getting the Kids to Bed

Ottawa Journal

Who would have thought that early to bed and early to rise could make Jack a dull boy?

Dr. Hugh Jolly, superintendent of the children's department at London's Charing Cross Hospital, doesn't go quite so far but says parents can stop worrying if children won't go to bed early, or do so only after a struggle.

"To parents who complain that their child won't go to sleep and only wants to play, one must explain that a child learns by play and that this is the young child's equivalent of school." He adds that the child who wants to play after dark is usually a bright child. "He's really giving himself the advantages of extra hours of schooling."

Parents whose children dutifully head off to bed at the mere suggestion of the idea needn't fear they are raising a breed of dullards, however. Classics are these children have packed more playing into a shorter period and are weary enough to sleep.

As for the larger varieties of children, there's something about the sight of a gangling body propped up on a chesterfield, fortified with soda pop and potato chips, eyes glued to the late movie, that leads a parent to doubt that the learning process is at work. School days, fortunately, help ease these staying-up problems — or should.

Besides, important as a child's development is, the parent's mind must also be nourished. There's nothing a bit of evening peace and quiet to keep a grown-up bright and cheerful the next day.

War or Peace

Hamilton Spectator

Many young Canadians, not all of them the so-called beatniks, have little patience for Americans, or for anyone in fact, who will willingly take up arms as a means of achieving an end. They and the peace-lovers of other nations, who march in front of U.S. embassies and consulates to protest the American involvement in Southeast Asia, are generally incapable of seeing the other fellow's viewpoint.

All of these people, and those "silent bystanders" who spread the same anti-war propaganda without closed eyes, would do well to read what the respected Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, said some days ago to a convention of war veterans.

"Freedom from compulsion to bear arms must not become license to compel the renunciation of arms by others who do not wish to follow a pacifist course.

"Conscientious objection is not a right to heap ridicule upon the choice of others who, with the same freedom of conscience, elect to defend with arms the freedoms they enjoy.

Harassed Taxpayers Unable To Get Away From It All

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Lo, the poor taxpayer.

He hasn't got a friend in the House — House of Commons, that is.

At least not one true blue enough to stand up and say a kind word for him when the Parliamentarians were doing to pick his well-plucked pocket for another annual $170,000,000 or per cent that 18 percent wage hike that put the strike-bound railways back on the track.

Not that the poor guy ever had a hope of not getting stuck for whatever the price of the deal turned out to be.

Understandably, in the strike crunch, Parliament's sole concern was the railway men and getting them back to work, no matter what.

But it would have been a nice gesture, if anybody had said anything but a passing courtesy, if somebody had spoken kindly of the taxpayer.

Thanks he has come not to expect.

But just a passing mention might have given him the warm feeling that he was held in some regard by other than the tax gatherer of the National Revenue Department.

He already was paying for an annual $125,000,000 subsidy on top of everything else so the railways could cover previous pay raises.

UP ALWAYS UP

Now the added $170,000,000 will take the total tab to $295,000,000.

And he'll have to pay it for months or even years yet, since even under a new freight rate structure the railways won't be able to pony up that fast.

It could go even a few million more, if federal conciliator H. Carl Goldenberg decides that the initial 18 percent wasn't enough — as is entirely possible, perhaps likely.

But not only hasn't the poor taxpayer been let in the house, he hasn't a prayer of an out.

For him there is no escape.

He can't go on strike.

Not even if a strike were well organized, and, say, for example a couple of million taxpayers or so taxpayers said the heck with it.

You can't stick a hundred thousand taxpayers in jail, you say, say more than you could prosecute a hundred thousand rail strikers had they defied Parliament or even 20,000 postal workers when they refused to carry the mail.

Labor-agreed Revenue Minister Benson amiably the other day utters lightly discussing the possibility — which he doesn't, I couldn't exist — of just such a tax strike.

No, you can't jail them.

But you can strip them, right down to their socks. You can take every nickel they've got.

You can seize their bank accounts, confiscate their investments, grab their every last little asset.

ALMOST LIMITLESS

You already take your tax collector's share out of their wages and salaries before they ever see it.

And if they get a bit balky about it, beams Ben Benson, you can increase them.

All nice and legal, under the toughest laws of any land.

For in the free western world, laughs the jolly Revenue Minister, no law, civil or criminal, is as grimly unforgiving as the tax law.

You can do almost anything and those grim guys have at least an outside chance of getting away with it — anything except pay your tax bill.

Oddly, Parliament, which is supposed to be the guardian of the rights and privileges of the people, has seized meekly by successive tax-collector bureaucrats have fenced us all in behind an impenetrable barbed wire barrier of sharply pointed tax laws.

Perhaps Parliament down the years has just been overawed when it all was happening because politicians long spoke everything that was substantial of all is the taxpayer, putting up with almost anything.

A couple of years ago the poor dumb brute ever got mad?

Not really, happily reports Chief Statistician Dominion Bureau that evil genius — friend of the bureaucrat, foe of every Joe Blow who ever took — came up with that relatively painless process known as "collecting at the source."

"They get sore once a year when they have to make those returns," grins Ben Benson, "but they get over it as soon as they settle up their cheque."

Wonderful people these taxpayers, he says, with the world's worst memory and best heart.

Strictly Personal

Dams Threaten Historic Sites

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A recent rockus in London between a drama critic and a producer has prompted one of my readers in Montreal to ask why drama critics seem to be in the water much more frequently than commentators on any of the other arts.

I think the answer is quite simple: Among the arts, only the theatre attracts an audience of the wide and diverse, for so many different reasons.

Books, music, painting — all these have highly specialized audiences. The man who reads philosophy and history doesn't care what a critic says about the new novel; and the man who reads new novels is indifferent to the criticism of the specialized books.

Similarly, the man who goes to hear Gerwin play the piano is profoundly indifferent to what Liberace; while the Liberace fan doesn't even bother to read the reviews of serious music. Each lives in a separate world.

But the theatre is a strange amalgam: It is, at once, an art-form, an industry, and a source of entertainment for all levels — including people who have nothing in common in the rest of their lives. A "show" is a show to most everybody.

The serious book critic is writing for a select audience, and does not pretend that a hitalutin book will interest the mass of readers. The serious music critic knows he is generally given a paragraph of comment — and no matter how interesting, the people who enjoy such books cannot be crammed in.

A drama critic, however, finds himself facing an almost impossible situation. He knows he is dishing to all people. Everybody brings different standards and different tastes to the play: audiences are mixed, in a way they never are in symphony halls or art museums or libraries.

Moreover, a book can survive adverse critical comment. Thousands of copies are published, sometimes even after months (or in rare cases, years) a book finds favor and leaps into the best-selling class.

A play has a peculiarly precarious life. Its mortality rate generally depends on the way it is treated the first few days. If critical reaction is bad, it is almost forced to close, for the continuing expenses are unlike anything in the other arts. Thus, the theatre has to take a dangerous life-or-death power over the ordinary production.

This situation is not easy of solution. The public must be protected from inferior, or fraudulent, goods — but the playwright and producer must be given fair treatment; and the highly diversified audience must be somehow reconciled to a common standard of taste. It's a wonder more drama critics aren't shot between the acts.

Four Cities May Merge

Windsor Star

The Niagara and Essex Peninsulas are the most compact parts of Ontario, apart from metropolitan Toronto. There is a difference, however. The Niagara peninsula contains 12 cities and many towns and villages, and townships which are largely urban. Windsor is the only city in the Essex Peninsula.

A provincial study recommends a three-tier metropolitan government which would include the cities of Welland, Niagara Falls, St. Catharines and Port Colborne along with the towns of Grimsby, Beamsville and Thorold and townships. They would be formed into eight boroughs with an overall council of 33 members. What the reaction of the 22 municipalities which would be dissolved will be isn't as yet too clear.

The point is that a solution to problem involving four close-by cities and other urban areas wouldn't apply to an area with but one city. The circumstances in the Niagara and Essex Peninsulas are different. The Windsor situation is more comparable to Hamilton, where annexations also were the answer.

Westbrook Woman, 3 Children Hurt When Car Jumps Median

A 32-year-old Westbrook woman and her three children were treated at Belleville General Hospital yesterday around noon following a one-car accident east of the city.

Mrs. June Shaw was taken to hospital by LaSalle Ambulance Service suffering from severe face lacerations. She is reported in satisfactory condition. Her 16-month-old daughter Melanie, sustained a fractured arm in the mishap, while another daughter and a five-year-old son were treated for minor injuries.

Mrs. Shaw's large late - model car was travelling west on Highway 2 about a mile east of Belleville when it went out of control, jumped a grass median, a ditch crashed into a tree on a lawn to the south of the highway.

The accident, which occurred around 12:30 Monday, is being investigated by the Belleville detachment of the O.P.P.

Funeral Held For Victim Of Car Crash

NAPANEE — The funeral of Marshall Timothy Sweet of R.R. 1, Napanee was held Monday afternoon from the Wartman Funeral Home with interment in Riverview Cemetery.

Sweet died instantly Friday evening as the result of a head-on collision when the car driven by Colin Campbell, 43, of Dorland went out of control on a curve on the Hamburg Road, a mile and a half south of Napanee. Coroner E. R. Elliott was at the scene of the crash.

Melvin Sweet, 24 who was riding with his brother, was treated for an injured ankle at the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital and released before midnight. Campbell is still a patient in that hospital, being treated for severe facial lacerations. His passenger Robert Lewis of Dorland was transferred from the Napanee Hospital at 2.00 a.m. Saturday, and is still in the intensive care unit in the Kingston General Hospital. He has head and suspected internal injuries, and the hospital describes him as being in poor condition.

Lewis, 21, was convicted by Magistrate R. C. Jackson of careless driving, September 6 in Napanee and was fined $100 and costs and given time to pay. His licence was suspended for three months.

It will not be known until Wednesday, at least, whether charges will be laid or not. The speedometer or Campbell's car was locked at 100 miles an hour, the OPP report, but point out that this is not proof that it was being driven at that speed a the time of the accident. The impact might have caused it to lock anywhere from zero to the other limit, they explain.

Marshall Sweet who was in his 25th year, is survived by his wife, formerly Sheila Margaret Kirkpatrick, and four small children, Valerie, Sandra, David and Wendy.

Mayor and Councillors Inspect Sewers

NAPANEE — Mayor Lorne A. Smart and three councillors were on hand Thursday morning to inspect the sewer, recently completed by the Mackey Construction Co. of Brockville.

The mayor and councillors have accepted the work of the contractors, but were disappointed at not being present for the first trial run. Through some oversight the electrical inspector had not completed his work. He will be here some time this week, he has notified the officials, and it is expected that the sewer will be in operation before the end of the week.

So far only the service station and restaurant will be serviced by the new installation but householders are privileged to hook up with it. Ever since it has been in operation sewage from the service station has been carted away by an Odessa firm.

Couple Held For Passing Bogus $20 Bills

NAPANEE — A Toronto husband and wife were arrested and charged with uttering and possession of counterfeit money here yesterday after fast action by a police constable resulted in their apprehension minutes after they had passed a bogus bill. Charged were Arnolfo Angelucci, 53 and his wife, Maria, 45. Their address is 1008 Bloor St., W., Toronto. He is proprietor of the Paradise Theatre at the same address.

An alert attendant at a service station north of Highway 401, on Highway 41, notified the Napanee detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police that he had received a "bad $20 bill." The alarm was raised about 1:45 p.m. Constable Ian Brodie obtained the licence number and a description of the car used by the person who had passed the bill. He arrested Mr. and Mrs. Angelucci motels Hester, Carlton and Dufferin Sts., Toronto. A search of the Paradise Theatre premises resulted in the discovery of more of the bogus $20 and $50 bills.

Det.-Sgt. Cooper noted that these bills are from a new printing of an old series. He warns the general public, businessmen and bank employees to scrutinize tweenies and filling carefully. There are no green dots (blanchettes) on the face of the counterfeit bills.

CF-5 Will

plete a month.

Officials rate the CF-5 about 30 per cent better than the present American F-5, because of changes incorporated in the plane after the U.S. experience with it in the Viet Nam war. C stands for Canadian in CF-5.

Takeoff performance has been improved by 15 per cent but the CF-5 will still need a runway of least 4,800 feet long. It won't require concrete runways but will need something better than a pasture, such as steel-mesh or plank.

ECAF officers who have flown the plane and are associated with its Canadair development praise the aircraft.

They say it will take the ECAF back to a type of flying —low-level strafing — which hasn't engaged in since the end of the Second World War.

The plane is said to be so easy to maintain that each squadron will require a ground crew of only 200, about half the normal number for today's complex aircraft.

The plane is designed to support United Nations peacekeeping operations or Canadian ground troops in a limited, conventional conflict anywhere in the world.

Officials say the UN doesn't ask a rule get into shooting wars but that just as "air presence" would be extremely useful.

The CF-5 will have to be refuelled in flight to deploy it overseas. This problem hasn't yet been solved satisfactorily but officials say it will be by the time the plane is in production. About four tanker planes will be needed.

The CF-5 may eventually become an Air Defence Command interceptor when the current CF-101 Voodoo jets are retired. The CF-5 can carry a Sidewinder air-to-air missile.

Practically Everything One Uses Today Is Done Up in a Can

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — You run to the cupboard to get down a can of dries and hat, a can of milk, and a wee can of pearls. At the same time your husband asks if you will please get him that six-pack of ties on the shelf.

Because you are expecting a guest you may also reach for a vacuum - packed chair and, for use in case the conversation grows stale, several cans of fresh air.

For pleasant background you know you can always count on your canned music.

This could be you today, as uncanny as it sounds.

Grandma may have quit preserving things with her boiling pots, jars, rubber rings and paraffin. But the industry she fostered marches on. The pressurized tin cylinder, standard equipment in the bride's kitchen, now stores more than mere food and drink.

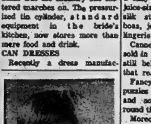
CAN DRESSES

Recently a dress manufacturer announced it is putting up its dresses and hats in cans. The label matches the flashy clashing colors and fabulous-topic patterns of the garments inside. When the lid pops off, wrinkleproof, nylon fabric oozes out like shaving cream. Besides floppy hats there are baby tresses styles dropped waistline and body-cackling fashions with hicky skirts.

It was a California manufacturer who decided to can man's ties, featuring a handy pack of six for the man who is wearing more than one.

Perhaps the choicest cannery in the country is the stockroom of a New York department store during its holiday season. There in assembly line fashion a busy machine puts bits onto juice-sized cylinders containing silk stockings, slacks, cutsk boas, jewelry, sweaters, pexy lingerie and bikinis.

Canned air is a favorite item sold in gift shops to persons who still believe it's the sentiment that really counts.



Fancy candles, matches and puzzles are more non - edibles and non-drinkables sealed in round tins with a prestige label.

Moreover, the maker of an inflatable vinyl chair is currently looking for a way to bust his product under the pop-up lid of a can.

Even without its contents, the can today is much in vogue. Thanks to pop artist Andy Warhol's presentation of the Campbell soup can, culture-conscious women's clubs on the West Coast have been showing them. Hairdresser Julius Caruso uses standards, sized cans as curlers. The art set in Greenwich Village anneals them together as table legs or smashes them into can-tastic sculpture.

IT'S HOW HIGH YOU ARE

The world's winds vary so much that a westerly breeze on the ground can be an easterly wind of 300 m.p.h. at 30,000 feet.

Mr., Mrs. I. Eggleton Married Fifty Years

A double celebration this week marks the 50th wedding anniversary for Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Eggleton of 285 William Street.

Sunday the couple were "at home" to more than 100 close friends and relatives, while this evening approximately 20 people will attend a family dinner at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Among the many congratulatory messages and gifts received were good wishes from Hon. John Diefenbaker, Lee Grills, MP for Hastings South, and W. E. Sandercock, MLA for Hastings West. The couple also received a scroll from Provincial Secretary John Yaremko.

Natives of the Stirling area, Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton have lived in Belleville since 1942 when Mr. Eggleton became maintenance carpenter at Stewart Warner. Mrs. Eggleton is the former Aletha Narrin. The couple were married at the Presbyterian Manse at Stirling and took a wedding trip to Toronto.

A carpenter for almost the past 60 years, Mr. Eggleton can point to dozens of barns in the South Hastings area built by himself and his brothers.

"But the depression of the 1930's killed the barn building, so I came to Belleville to be maintenance carpenter at Stewart Warner," he says.

KEEPS BUSY IN

Retired from the Bellev ille plant for about eight years, Mr. Eggleton still keeps his hand to as carpenter and next week will commence repair of a hunting camp in the Milbridge area.

He is a life member of Stirling Lodge, A.F. and A.M., and their first principal of Keystone Chapter at Stirling. He is also a past master of Benjamin LOL Lodge at Belleville.

One of ten children, Mr. Eggleton has two brothers living at Stirling and three sisters in Belleville. Mr. Eggleton has two sisters.

The couple have one daughter, Mrs. Jack Moore, and two sons, Leslie and Glenn, all of Belleville. There are five grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Old-Timer Has Learned To Laugh off Gossip

DEAR DORIS: I really sympathize with Old-Timer and the malicious gossiper. Prayers have never helped or she would have stopped this many years ago.

Every day miracles are happening but I have never heard of a cure for a loose tongue. To me only a sick-minded person could continue with this kind of nonsense.

We have often thought of moving but why should we give up our home for such a gossip, so all live in dumps, according to her. We laugh it off and say, "Look who's talking!" — A DISGUSTED OLD-TIMER.

P.S.: My husband and I never miss your column. We will be indebted to you for the rest of our lives as we have very close friends who took your advice and are now happy. I hope they were grateful enough to tell you the good news.

Mrs. M. Pearson Hopes To Travel When Husband Retires as Prime Minister

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Maryon Pearson says she hopes to travel when the prime minister retires.

"I'd like to go to Greece— I've never been there," the Canadian leader's wife said in an interview Monday. "The trouble is, my husband has traveled so much he may not be so keen, but he says he will."

Will Pearson write his memoirs?

"Well, he should, but he hasn't kept a diary," she said. "I've urged myself that I haven't done so—after a time you find it hard to remember little intimate conversations with people over the years."

Without indicating when retirement would come, Mrs. Pearson said they would probably continue living in Ottawa.

MEETINGS MORE TENSE

Mrs. Pearson, the only one of the five Commonwealth leaders' wives in town to have attended both the 1965 and 1966 Commonwealth conferences, said she found the atmosphere of the meeting more tense than last year. There were many informal talks in hotel suites and late - evening meetings behind the scenes.

As in 1965, Pearson emerged as the bridge-builder to whom both Britain and the Afro-Asian leaders look in hopes of shaping a solution to the Rhodesian crisis.

"He understands the British position and also the Africans' anxieties," said Mrs. Pearson. "I think the Africans respect him."

She has bought some clothes for her grandchildren — the Pearsons will have 10 when their daughter Patricia has her latest baby at the end of September.

SEEN TWO PLAYS

She has seen two plays, The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie, a stilted adaptation of a Muriel Spark novel starring Vanessa Redgrave, and a wise-cracking comedy called There's a Girl in Myy Soup, which she thinks "the funniest play I have ever seen—a real Canadian scream."

Mrs. Pearson finds the 13 days in London—they hope to return to Canada Friday — a wonderful holiday from the trifling duties of political life in Canada.

"The newspapers are always at the poor old prime minister —it seems he can never do anything right," she said with a flash of wry humor.

"Sometimes I think how marvellous it would be to get all the newspaper editors together to form a cabinet and see how they could run the country."

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM H. LATCHFORD

Latchford — Gallagher

St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Wellington, was the setting for the recent ceremony when Lana Lorraine Gallagher and William Herbert Latchford were united in marriage. Rev. J. M. G. Rossiter officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Rev. D. Burns of Picton played traditional wedding music.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gallagher of Napanee, formerly of Wellington and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Latchford, Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length white peau de soie gown in Empire style with Chantilly lace appliques along the hemline of the dress. The bodice was enhanced with a Chantilly lace jacket featuring a high scalloped neckline and three-quarter length sleeves with scalloped edges. A chapel train edged with matching lace flowed from the back waistline. She wore a pillbox headdress adorned with lace and seed pearls which held in place a three-tier white veil with scalloped edges. She carried a bouquet of yellow Shasta daisies.

The maid of honor, Miss Sharon Wood of Toronto and the bridesmaids, Miss Heather Thompson, Toronto, Mrs. S. Taylor, Brampton, Miss Carol Gould, Consecon, Miss Cathy Quick of Wellington and the flower girl, Miss Sandra Rutter, Wellington were dressed alike in floor length gowns of mimosa yellow peau de soie. These were enhanced at the Empire waistline with yellow lace. All wore matching beaddresses of yellow peau de soie pillboxes adorned with lace appliques, and tulle veils. The maid of honor carried yellow and white Shasta daisies, the bridesmaids white Shasta daisies and the little flower girls, a basket of yellow and white Shasta daisies.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. Terry Latchford of Belleville, while the ushers were Mr. Rick Donseven of Belleville, Mr. Reginald Gallagher of Trenton and Mr. Harry Wight of Consecon. Master Stuart Webber dressed in white jacket and dark trousers was ring-bearer.

The reception was held in the church auditory where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a pink crepe dress with a three - quarter length lace jacket, pink chiffon hat, white accessories and a corsage of white pinnoche mums. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a pink silk flowered ensemble, white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

For the wedding trip to Honey Harbor, Georgian Bay, the bride chose a two-piece navy suit with white lace jacket, navy and white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Upon return Mr. and Mrs. Latchford will reside at 223 Charles street.

VEAL SCALLOPINI FAVORITE

My sister-in-law telephoned from Muskoka to ask me to bring enough veal cutlets with me to make Veal Scallopini for seven or eight people.

For the Sunday dinner of the following day, I cooked it and graciously allowed to get the dinner ready so I could relax the whole process is easy. Veal Scallopini is a great favorite and justly so, but you have to close your mind to the high price. Since there is no fat or bone attached you should take that into consideration when the butcher tells you it is $1.50 per pound. Ours served seven very generously and since I bought two-and-one-half pounds so...

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Homemade Cream of Tomato Soup; Baby Beef or Calves' Liver with Mild Onion Rings; Scalloped Potatoes; Glazed Whole Small Carrots; Chilled Compote of Loganberry Plums; Sesame Squares (see Mon.); Tea.

VEAL SCALLOPINI (serves 7 or 8)

1¼ to 1½ cups fine dry cracker crumbs
1 large egg
3 or 4 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup oil or butter
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 medium green pepper, finely chopped
1 cup dry, white wine or cooking sherry
½ teaspoon salt

The veal should be pounded to ¼" thickness. Your butcher may be willing to do that with his cleaver for you, but if not pound it to flatten it to ¼" thickness with your rolling pin. Cut it into serving-size pieces. Beat the egg with the milk and ½ tsp. salt. Dip each piece of meat into the egg, then into the crumbs to coat them evenly. Spread them out on a platter and let them rest for ½ hour if time allows. Meanwhile gently sauté the garlic, onion and green pepper in the oil or butter until they are soaked with fat, but not brown. Skim them out of the pan and reserve. Now saute the crumbed meat pieces in the fat in pan (adding more fat if needed) until they are gold on both sides. As each piece of meat is done transfer it to a large shallow baking dish. When meat pieces are all done spoon sauteed vegetables evenly over all, pour wine over all, and sprinkle with remaining ½ tsp. salt. Bake at 300 deg. Fahr. for ¾ hour, basting and turning meat pieces once during this period. Or you may simmer this dish on top of stove, covered, for one hour.

This is usually served with spaghetti, so that is what we had. I boiled this spaghetti from a 14-oz. package in 3 qts. salted boiling water 20 min. Drained it through a colander. Then I coated it with a tomato sauce made of 1¼ cups (19 juice, 3 oz. tomato paste (half of a 4-oz. can), 1 tbsp. sugar, ¼ tsp. each salt, accent and garlic salt. The bowl of tomato-sauced spaghetti was liberally sprinkled with Parmesan cheese and more Parmesan was passed at the table.

Teenage Bride Warns Against Early Marriage

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 18 and was engaged to be married in eight weeks. I said "was" because I broke the engagement after I received a letter from a very close friend.

ANN LANDERS

I am enclosing my friend's letter and ask you to print it. It really opened my eyes. Maybe it will open some other eyes around the country.

Dear - - - :

I know you won't take my advice but I feel I must tell you. Please, please, please think it over before you get married. I am exactly your age and it's been only ten months since I was a bride. I can tell you, honey, we are both too young for marriage.

We've grown up together and I know how much fun and good times mean to you. I thought I could give up a lot of things because I was in love with Bill and I was sure that just being married would be a lot of fun — but I confess that the last four months haven't been any fun at all, just regrets.

Before I married I remember what a blast it was to drive my dad's nice car. Bill said I have an old piece of junk that sits in front of the house because we don't have money for gas.

"Do you know what it's like not to be able to buy a new dress, or a bottle of nail polish or a can of hair spray? Well, I do. And, something else, you'll never realize how many things your mother did for you until you have to do them yourself. I used to change blouses twice a day, but I don't do that anymore since I'm the one who has to wash and iron them.

"I thought marriage meant freedom. Well, it might have meant freedom from my parents, but now I have to answer to a husband who is ten times more demanding than my parents ever were.

"Have I mentioned loneliness? Well, get ready. Bill goes to work at 8:30 a.m. and comes home at 5:30 p.m. He plays a week he's in school and one night a he bowls with the guys. If you think your single friends are going to keep you company, forget it. After a few months you're just another old married woman.

"I am not trying to talk you out of anything. I just want you to know what you're getting into. I wish somebody had wised me up. If they had, I'd be single today. Think it over and good luck, no matter what. — DOTTIE."

DEAR - - - : Many thanks to you for sending on Dottie's letter. Little did she realize that it would be read by millions.

Her story is not new to me. I receive such letters every day from dozens of disenchanted teen-age brides. I'm glad Dottie's experience changed your mind. I hope to heaven it changes some other young minds around the country.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Walsh Mark 50 Wedded Years

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Walsh, R. R. 1, Shannonville, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Sunday, Sept. 4th.

In their honor Mass was celebrated by Reverend B. J. Walsh, a son, in St. Charles Church, Read, where the couple were married 50 years ago on September 4th, 1916. Three grandsons, Kevin, Denis and Gregory Walsh served the Mass.

Mass was followed by a dinner in Read Parish Hall which was attended by 80 relatives and friends. The hall was appropriately decorated in a gold motif with streamers and banners and the head table was centred by a beautifully decorated three - tier wedding cake and a boat shaped container of golden gladioli surrounding gold pom-poms forming a "50".

Master of ceremonies during the dinner was Father Walsh who called on Father Hamilton to extend best wishes on behalf of the Parish. Mr. Patrick Walsh, a son, spoke on behalf of the family and Mr. Francis J. Shannon of Rochester tendered congratulations for relatives and friends. Congratulatory messages were also read from Prime Minister L. B. Pearson, John Diefenbaker, local members of Parliament, and Tyendinaga Township Council.

In the afternoon they received approximately 500 well wishers at their family residence at Read. The color theme of gold and blue predominated, backed up by many baskets of multi - colored glads and mums. Sandwiches and fancy cakes were served by the older granddaughters and the tea table presided over by the Misses Mary D. Kehoe, V. McKenny, B. Meagher, A. Shannon, Joseph Hanley, C. Osborne and F. Buckley.

During the afternoon the occasion was honored by the attendance of His Grace J. A. O'Sullivan, Archbishop of Kingston, Lee Grills M.P., Clarke T. Rollins M.P.P. and C. Hall, Warden of Hastings County.

North Gets In Blood Says Nurse

HALIFAX (CP)—Ruth May, who says "the North gets in your blood," will head a new two-year program at Dalhousie University's school of nursing this fall to prepare trained nurses for work in Labrador, the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

Miss May, who spent 12 years with the Grenfell medical Mission in northern Newfoundland and Labrador, has been appointed a lecturer to organize the school's courses in outpost nursing and midwifery.

She believes the program is unique in Canada.

Miss May, a native of Ithaca, N.Y., says her own personal experiences in the North were exciting and adventurous. The work is gruelling, but wonderful. Supplies must be ordered at their family residence at Read. The color theme of gold and blue predominated, backed up by many baskets of multi - colored glads and mums. Sandwiches and fancy cakes were served by the older granddaughters and the tea table

A LITTLE OF THIS AND THAT — Not only does chilling hard cooked eggs immediately on removal from boiling water make them cinchy to peel, but it prevents that ugly dark ring around the yolk that will often otherwise form.

— Is it all right to cook a roast while it is still frozen? Indubitably. Although, it just may not cook quite as evenly as an unfrozen one which has been allowed to stand at room temperature for at least half an hour. The frozen roast will also need an additional 15 to 20 minutes per pound oven time).

— To make lettuce plates of cold cuts chicken and turkey tempting add a few broiled peach halves to the edge of the platter of sliced meat or fowl. Peel the peaches, cut them in half, place them on a cookie sheet, add a pad of butter and a sprinkling of cinnamon powder and broil until just brown.

Place it in the oven at 400 degrees F. Keep an eye on it until it's dry. When a piece will crumble by rubbing it between your hands it's ready. Do just that with the whole batch, or press slowly through a coarse sieve. Place in a tightly covered jar. It will keep beautifully for all your winter needs.

NOT CARNABY BUT BRIDGE STREET — Mary Jean Deacon opens her Mod Shop in part of the former Moira Schuster building on Bridge Street East today. Miss Deacon here puts the finishing touches on the boutique which will feature handcrafted "mod" styles.

Mod Shop Makes Belleville Scene

Carnaby Street came to Belleville today as Mary Jean Mod Shop opened with a selection of groovy clothes for the swinging set. Located in part of the former Moira Schuster building on Bridge Street East, the boutique will cater to the Mod set — young people from the ages of 15 to 20.

The shop is a dream come true for its owner, Mary Jean Deacon a young woman just on the far side of the age group she is prepared to serve. She is the daughter of Alderman John Deacon and Mrs. Deacon and has been interested in style and dress making since she was seven years old. That's when she began sewing, turning out blouses "good enough to wear to school" on a child's model hand-cranked Singer sewing machine.

After attending Albert College, Brankome Hall in Toronto for an art course, and Ontario Business College in Belleville, Miss Deacon was offered a job with the avant-garde Uniform shop in Toronto. Instead she decided to open a Unisex-inspired boutique of her own in Belleville.

STYLE CONSCIOUS TEENS

"Belleville teens are hot for Mod things," Miss Deacon says. "They are more style conscious than they were when I was growing up. They have more money to spend than the older people and the only thing they spend it on is clothes."

For the swinging set, Miss Deacon is prepared to design clothes, for both boys and girls, that are "Mod, but not too far out for Belleville". Mrs. Nell Farrow will assist in the shop and do the cutting and sewing.

A local artist has been commissioned to made papier-mache jewelry and another artist is turning out crocheted hats in exclusive designs. Miss Deacon will feature key dresses.

"Felt as a dressmaking fabric hasn't arrived in Belleville yet," Miss Deacon says. "I hope to introduce it in a big way."

Miss Deacon has definite ideas on the clothes that will make the teen scene this year.

FASHION PREDICTIONS

"Mary Quant is fabulous," she says, "but the young styles promoted by Vogue's magazine and pattern books are best. Mini skirts will go out soon; the snoopy the better. Little prints are going out, and hemlines are getting lower. The best style will supersede the skimpy look, and styles of the late 1930s, the drop-ped waistline and bias cut, will be good this winter. Next year, look for styles to be influenced by 1920 fashions — the centennial you know."

Miss Deacon designed and executed the decor and renovations of the Mod Shop. As a background for colorful materials and jewelry, she chose a chare a and white scheme in stripes and polka dots, with black fish net awning the windows and a black and white checked canopy, trimmed with ball fringe, over the counter. Next summer she hopes to turn a tiny courtyard at the rear of her store into a paved patio complete with tables where customers will be served coffee.

The 4-H leaders of the two groups, Mrs. D. Douglas, Mrs. J. Tomalty, Mrs. M. Mywart, Mrs. J. Caddick assisted the girls with their display and demonstration on the project "Being Well Dressed and Well Groomed".

Miss Coby Mywart gave an account on the Girls' Conference at Guelph University which she attended in June. Brenda Douglas gave hints on grooming and showed a sample of hair-setting lotion which the girls had made.

Debbie Tomalty discussed invisible hemming, patching and darning and showed samples of each. Wenda Windsor and Deborah Meddings stressed buying good quality gingham prints and novelty cottons. The girls modelled and displayed their summer and beach outfits they had made during spring season.

Mrs. Moon and the 4-H members served refreshments and a social half-hour was enjoyed by all.

Teeners Don't Care About Proper Food

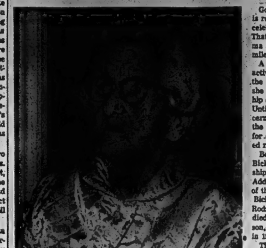
REGINA (CP) — Most teenagers don't care about proper nutrition—at least not those in the 15—days city nutritionist Ruth Holland.

Mrs. Holland recently conducted a survey of the eating habits of 3,573 Grade 12 students in 32 city high schools.

She says Canada's food guide says teen-agers should drink four cups of milk a day. Only four per cent of the boys and 32 per cent of the girls who answered her questionnaire said they drink that amount.

Mrs. Holland says many students reported that they do not eat breakfast. Reasons given include that they were not hungry, had no time, couldn't be bothered or that no one gets breakfast for them at home.

Some students said they found a cup of coffee and a cigarette satisfactory.



The survey indicated that Regina teen-agers lack a healthy proportion of basic foods including whole wheat cereal, fruit or juice, potatoes, meat, fish or poultry.

Mrs. Holland has warned that sporadic meal schedules and improper diet will result in poor academic performance, overweight and a higher accident rate for teen-age drivers.

Poor nutrition affects skin condition, teeth, fingernails, hair, posture and body size, she says.

This term Mrs. Holland will visit high school to talk to students about the matter.

Says Old-fashioned Hard Work Helped Her to Live to Be Hundred

MRS. EMMA JANE ROSE

Good, old fashioned hard work is required if you hope to live to celebrate your 100th Birthday. That is the opinion of Mrs. Emma Jane Rose who reaches that milestone today.

A firm believer in remaining active as long as one is able, the centenarian practised what she preached until a fractured hip curtailed her activity in 1958. Until then, she was a going concern in church work, especially the United Church Women. And for a number of years, she helped raise her eight grandchildren.

Born September 13, 1866, at Bickmell's Corners in the Township of Ernestown, Lennox and Addington, she is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Bickmell. She married Charles Rodney Rose in 1893. Mr. Rose died in 1952. The couple had one son, Stanley M. Rose, who died in 1963.

The eight grandchildren whom she helped raise are Fred Rose of Hamilton, Wilmot of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Dougl a s ex Windsor, Gordon of Toronto, Mrs. G. Smith (Marjorie) of Windsor, Mrs. H. Eiford (Eva) of Port Credit, Mrs. Carlton Miller (Jean) of Belleville and Mrs. K. Fraser (Freda) of Windsor.

For most of her married life, Mrs. Rose was a resident of Bath. She has 18 great-grandchildren and 16 great-great-grandchildren. She has lived at the Sheppard Nursing Home, 259 Albert St., for the past three years.

Trade Balance Shows Increase In Seven Months

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's trade balance for the first seven months of 1966 showed a sharp improvement over 1965, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Monday.

The export balance on commodities was $134,000,000 to the end of July, up from $6,100,000 a year earlier.

Imports during July held almost level at $737,800,000 as exports climbed 8.3 per cent to $852,400,000. The month's export balance almost doubled July, 1965, figures.

For the seven-month period exports were up 17.3 per cent, imports 14.7 per cent.

A 23.4-per-cent increase in exports to the United States boosted the seven-month total to $2,433,800,000. July export to the U.S. were 13.8 - per - cent higher than a year earlier at $301,500,000. Imports during the month were three - per - cent higher at $317,000,000.

Liberals Win Byelection in New Brunswick

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)— Premier Louis J. Robichaud's controversial municipal reform program survived its first test at the polls in a provincial byelection Monday as Mayor Stephen H. Weyman retained a Saint John City seat for the Liberal party.

Dr. Weyman, 43, polled 8,271 votes, only 63 more than Progressive Conservative Lorne McGuigan, 30, a high school teacher who received 8,208. Gilbert Soucy, 25, a union official and the first New Democratic Party member to contest a seat in the New Brunswick legislature, trailed with 908.

Premier Robichaud arrived here late Monday night from Fredericton to extend greetings to the mayor.

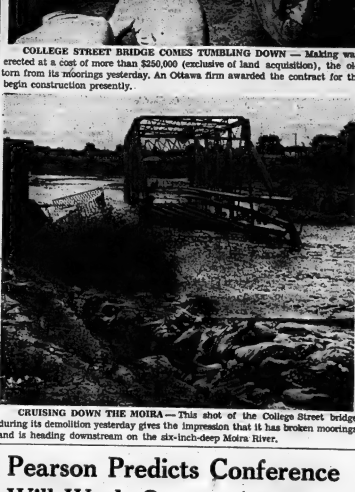
"Judging from the results in Saint John, I think the people of New Brunswick would react extremely favorably to the program in a general election," he said in an interview.

However, Progressive Conservatives said there were allegations of irregularities at the polls and they were making immediate plans for a recount. President George L. Keith of the Saint John City PC Association said in a statement: "After checking with our poll agents, we find a large number of spoiled ballots and no reasonable explanation. . . ."

ABOUT 300 SPOIL BALLOTS

About 17,400 of 26,267 eligible voters cast ballots at 136 polls. The number of spoiled ballots was estimated at between 320 and 360.

Provincial PC Leader C. B. Sherwood said the final outcome of the byelection is "unsure," according to the figures.



The premier said the outcome of the byelection was a personal victory for the mayor and a victory for his government's Program of Evolution, a sweeping plan to give the province direct control of health, education, welfare, justice, assessment and taxation while abolishing county councils.

Dr. Weyman fills a vacancy created by the resignation in January of Lands and Mines Minister Daniel A. Riley. He polled 47.37 per cent of the vote, Mr. McGuigan 47.21 and Mr. Soucy 5.22.

The result gave the Liberals 31 seats in the 52-seat legislature assembly, 11 more than the Progressive Conservatives. No date has been set to fill a Restigouche county seat left vacant by the death of Dr. Georges L. Dumont, former health minister who died in July.

Pearson Predicts Conference Will Work Out an Agreed Statement on Rhodesian Policy

By CARMAN CUMMING

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson predicted Monday that the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference will work out an agreed statement on Rhodesian policy.

Talking with reporters, he disclosed that virtual agreement has been reached on sanctions policy. And he said he is hopeful the troublesome majority rule problem can also be settled, possibly along the lines of a Canadian formula.

"I think we'll get a good communique, but this is the toughest conference we've ever had," he said.

The statement was the most optimistic to come out of the conference since, wrangling on the Rhodesian problem began at the opening a week ago.

It followed a day that had been called in advance the "day of decision" or the "showdown day" of the Rhodesian discussions.

Pearson began it with a visit from Simon Kapwepwe, the foreign minister of Zambia who has been at one extreme in the conflicting range of opinions about what to do on Rhodesia. He urged Kapwepwe not to make any hasty decision on his threatened walkout from the conference until he had considered carefully revised British proposals put forward by Prime Minister Wilson.

Pearson also attended the session of the conference and had two private talks with Wilson, the last one late in the evening.

Pearson has been playing an active mediating role between Britain and the African militants since he produced a compromise formula at the conference Friday.

The Africans are demanding that the white Rhodesian government be brought down and majority rule granted to the breakaway colony.

Pearson indicated the conference has reached general agreement on sanctions and will ask the United Nations Security Council to impose compulsory sanctions on a limited range of products.

This kind of solution was suggested by Pearson Friday as a compromise between African demands for general compulsory sanctions and British reluctance to turn to the UN.

Present UN sanctions against Rhodesia, on oil and military hardware, involve only a recommendation from the Security Council to UN members.

Under compulsory sanctions, all UN members would be ordered by the Security Council to cut off trade in certain products.

Pearson has suggested that this kind of boycott might be imposed on Rhodesian sales of pig iron, chrome and asbestos and on her imports of oil.

The hope is that this program could be made fairly effective without bringing the UN into a head-on clash with Rhodesian allies South Africa and Portugal.

Britain has made it clear that it cannot afford serious disruption at this stage of its valuable trade with South Africa.

Pearson indicated that the question of majority rule was the main one now facing the conference. He said it had generated a lot of heat and emotion in the conference but "I think we can work this out. . . ." The Canadian proposal on that point also followed a middle road somewhere between the African and British positions, although it was not spelled out in detail.

Pearson reported that Monday's sessions, restricted to the chief delegate and one aide from each of the 22 delegations, made better progress with fewer people in the room and with brisk back-and-forth discussion.

He said the conference is "really getting down to cases," discussing how sanctions could be implemented and what should be done after the Rhodesian white government falls.

He said he expected the conference would end on time Thursday, and that he would return to Ottawa Friday.

Three Provincial Liberal Leaders Opposed to Sharp's Move to Postpone Medicare

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A mounting attack by Andrew Thompson and his Ontario Liberal party against the decision to postpone start of the federal government's medical care program for one year apparently is drawing little support from other provincial Liberal parties.

Three leaders Monday expressed disappointment but appeared unopposed to Mr. Sharp's move. Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland said he was prepared to follow the finance minister's judgment. Two other leaders declined to say anything immediately and others could not be reached for comment.

Mr. Thompson Saturday told a weekend meeting of 48 Liberals in Peterborough that he was dismayed by Mr. Sharp's announcement in the House of Commons Thursday that the program was being delayed a year ago as an anti-inflation measure.

Mr. Thompson said he planned to fight for restoration of the original starting date of July 1, 1967.

Monday night the Ontario Liberal party's policy committee passed a resolution urging the original date be restored. The resolution will be presented to the national Liberal party conference in Ottawa Oct. 30-12.

HE'LL FOLLOW

Premier Smallwood's only comment on the announcement was:

"I'm quite prepared to follow the Canadian government's judgment in this matter."

Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island expressed "deep disappointment" over the postponement.

"The province will continue with available funds to provide medical care for recipients of welfare and old age assistance and is considering other possible coverages," he said.

"The financial position of the province is such that we could not possibly finance a universal medicare plan without federal assistance."

Premier Louis J. Robichaud of New Brunswick said in Fredericton Friday the postponement was "regretted" but his Liberal government would proceed with its planning for a medical care service.

"We will ensure that this service will be provided for New Brunswick citizens on the date when federal participation is available.

STILL PLANS ATTENTION

"It should also be noted that it is still the intention of the federal government to give priority attention to medicare legislation when Parliament resumes its work in October."

Adrian Berry, Alberta's party leader, said "It's unfortunate that it was deemed necessary at this time to make this decision."

"The economics of the (medical care) program are quite complex, however, and one year's delay may not be too serious.

"If this will in fact be an anti-inflationary step, then the long - term interests of Canadians will best be served. There are no simple answers on a question like this in our kind of economy."

Jean Lesage, former premier of Quebec, said he wanted to see what happens at the forthcoming federal-provincial conference before making any comment.

Peter Nicholson, Nova Scotia Liberal leader, said Monday night he was not ready to comment.

Party leaders in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia could not be reached for comment Monday night.

HAS COMMITMENT

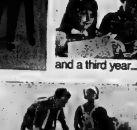
In a statement Monday Mr. Thompson said the Liberal party had a moral commitment to bring in medical care.

"We had the policy in 1919 and . . . we pushed for this policy in the last two general elections."

He said there were better ways to stop inflation than postponement of medical care and cuts in university scholarships and research spending as announced by Mr. Sharp.

"Medicare, university scholarships and research represent long - term investments which this country must make to remain strong.

"They should not be cut when it is possible to control inflation by chopping less important, non-investment, short-term projects."



Mr. Thompson said Saturday he doubted whether Prime Minister Pearson, in London for the Commonwealth prime ministers conference, knew Mr. Sharp intended to make the announcement.

However, a spokesman for Mr. Pearson said in London Monday the prime minister knew of and approved Mr. Sharp's speech.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

Archery is making tremendous strides in popularity. Whereas once it was a means of livelihood and defence, archery today in the civilized world is pursued as a sport. Increasing numbers are turning to it and many are using it as a means of hunting. Archery is legalized as a hunting medium in parts of Ontario.

Dr. Robert P. Elmer in his book "Archery" says the sport could have existed 15,000 years ago. Other authorities say it is between 5,000 and 6,000 years of age.

In war the ancient Egyptians conquered the Persians by using the bow and arrow. Ulysses used a "C" bow to shoot his wife's admirers. English soldiers, later to become the best wartime archers in the world, learned the art from the Normans.

In the 14th century, English kings made archery compulsory, as a result England scored impressive victories over the French at Crecy, Poitiers and Agincourt.

Later the English mounted their bowmen which resulted in shooting ranges from 400 to 700 feet. In one battle England flung its mounted bowmen against the French who had 11 princes, 1,500 knights and 15,000 soldiers whereas the English host less than 50.

Archery as a target sport is making fine popularity progress in the city and district. At present it rates a fine club and to be one of the best in Ontario, with some 45 members — and expanding annually.

It is the brainchild of Jeff Calvert born near Sherwood Forest, Robin Hood's famous "hangout" near Nottingham, and four associates which include Floyd Armstrong, Gordon Gregory, Al. Eady and Bill Eakins. It's present executive is John Widdicks, president; vice president Jeff Calvert, secretary John Smith and treasurer Sandra Donaldson.

The club is compiling an enviable record in provincial archery circles. At least two of its members show championship potential that if further developed should rate them as eligible for Canada's national archery team which competes in the 1967 world tournament in Amsterdam, Holland. It has provincial records to its credit.

The club was formed through a "bow-string conversation between Calvert and Armstrong who decided the scientific angles of archery could be developed here through organization. Calvert was a master-bowman, the top echelon of archery in England.

Floyd Armstrong became interested in archery on the home farm when a small boy. "Guns were not allowed for boys at my age in my home, so I turned to the next best hunting weapon," he said. He made his own bows at split cedar, fashioned his own arrows and declared hunting war on the local woodchuck tribe.

The five original executives formed the club back in 1961 and started target activities on a field near Marysville. Eight months later Mr. "Hap" Ketcheson of Wallbridge offered them the use of a rolling field range — "a perfect archery site" — which they have been using ever since. They feel it is one of the best ranges in Ontario.

For winter activities they rented an arena dressing room where they set up targets. The result was an increase of membership by 25 interested archers. Last year they used the Ellis Hall and picked up another ten members. They will seek another site for next winter's activities.

The club is affiliated with the Ontario and National Associations of Archers. The latter is sponsoring the world tournament in Holland next year. Three men and three women archers will form the national team.

The only two women in Canada thus far showing world tournament potential are the current Dominion champion Jean McDonald of Toronto and Mrs. Carol Armstrong of the Belleville club. "We have some fine male archers here, but they'll need practice to develop their natural skill," said Mr. Armstrong.

Popularity of archery is rapidly increasing according to Mr. Armstrong. "A few years ago archers numbered 400-500, now they are up in the thousands."

"It's field or cutting, archery is a sport for all ages. To play it well contestants must be physically and mentally co-ordinated. It is not just a game of sticks and strings. It has now reached a scientific stage," he said.

It has been suggested that in 1967 that a season be set aside for non-game fish hunting for carp and suckers. Armstrong said since this has been tested in Cornwall with no ill-effects governmental departments have indicated they are behind the idea.

Duck Crop Said Best In Years

WINNIPEG (CP) — The best duck crop in many years is preparing to move down the flyways across the Prairies to the United States wintering grounds, Ducks Unlimited (Canada) says in its monthly report on waterfowl.

Early broods, now strong in flight, are massing with adults on the larger marshes in preparation for the flight south. Large flocks of geese have already moved into Central Alberta, the report said.

In Manitoba, the population was up across the entire province with Saskeram Lake, near The Pas in northern Manitoba, carrying "an extremely heavy" duck population.

Dodgers' Blue Beards Whip Mets

Orioles Beaten

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Blue Beards are soaring higher and higher.

Two members of the Blue Berets, relief pitchers Ron Perranoski and Phil Regan, wiped out New York Mets Monday night and helped the Los Angeles Dodgers to their fifth straight victory, a 3-2 decision.

The triumph increased the Dodgers' National League lead to 1½ games over second-place Pittsburgh Pirates and 2½ over third - place San Francisco Giants, while it left the only other game, California Angels edged American League leading Baltimore Orioles 6-5.

The Berets, the Dodgers' brilliant relief corps that received the name because of the team's blue hats, merely sat out in the bullpen, while until a Dodger pitcher gets trapped in the middle of enemy fire, then come in and snuff out the threat.

Perranoski and Regan got the call Monday night with the Dodgers trailing 2-1. Perranoski struck out the first six men he faced, tying a league record for relievers, then handed the ball to for two more innings, as Los Angeles grabbed a 3-2 lead.

When the left - hander gave up a leadoff single to Ken Boyer in the ninth, manager Walter Alston called on Regan. The righthander got pinch hitter Chuck Hiller to force Boyer at second, then ended the game by inducing Cleon Jones to ground into a double play.

Los Angeles won Monday night with two runs in the fifth inning. With runners at first and third and one out, Tommy Davis grounded a hit-and-run single to left field. Manny Mota scored easily from third, and Willie Davis raced all the way home from first with the lead run.

Bob Rodgers dashed home from third as second baseman Ron Hunt threw out Willie Smith at first and slid under the throw home from first baseman Ed Kranepool. The Orioles argued vehemently and unsuccessfully that Rodgers was out.

Minor Baseball Results

The Belleville Minor Baseball League's Tyke division final is all square at 1-1 after Lions Club topped DeMille Construction by an 11-8 score last night. The game was played at Park Dale. Third game in the best of five is scheduled for Thursday at 5:45 p.m. at the Alemite Park.

DeMille snapped an 8-8 deadlock with a three - run outburst in the top of the final inning. Lions Club failed to score in the last trip to the plate. David Rutherford picked up the win, allowing five hits while fanning two and walking six. Ron and Don McTaggart shared the pitching duties for Lions and touched for 12 hits while striking out nine and walking six.

Steven Kirby led the winners' hit parade with four singles while Peter Crawford supplied three and Andy Ricketts banged out a pair. John Venutil, Michael Yott and Tom Coughlan also hit safely for the DeMille team. Greg Sly's double was the big hit for the losers who got a single each from Ron McTaggart, John Cole, Robert Webb and Don McTaggart.

Braves Are Happy With Hitch

NEW YORK (AP)—Manager Billy Hitchcock of Atlanta Braves says it was inevitable that the players give the credit to Hitchcock.

Whatever the reason, the Braves have won six straight games, 21 of their last 22 and 32 of 33 since Hitchcock, coach of the club, replaced Bobby Bragan as manager of the National League baseball team Aug. 1.

Hitchcock interprets this change as ability showing itself over the long haul. But the players interpret it as meaning they're happier playing for Hitchcock than they were laboring under Bragan.

The Braves were in seventh place, 10½ games behind the leader when Hitchcock became manager. Now they're tied for fifth, 10 out.

Batting—Jim Fregosi, Angels, drove in five runs with a grand-slam homer and a double as California edged Baltimore Orioles 6-5.

Giants Seek Mays Flankers

SAN FRANCISCO - (AP) — After 364 games, San Francisco Giants still seek two men to play on either side of centre fielder Willie Mays.

And that doesn't even begin to go into all their problems. But they're not about to get headlines in an election year."

A spokesman for Yonkers Raceway said the parimutuel handle dropped more than $2,000,000 a week after news of the investigation was announced.

In a separate statement, the Harness Racing Institute said Sands had made a "broad smear" of the industry. Knotts denied it.

MORE ATTEND GAMES

NEW-YORK (AP)—The National League set an all-time season attendance record during 1966. The total reported by league headquarters reported, total 1966 attendance reached 10,796,586. The previous record of 10,581,136 was set last year. This is the fifth straight year the baseball league has set an attendance record.

Championship Opener

Warners Nip Cementmen

Stewart - Warner and the Point Anne Cementmen lived up to expectations in the first game of the Commercial Softball League championship series last night.

The Belleville boys nipped the Cementmen 1-0, at the Point, on the strength of an earned run.

All remaining games in the four-of-seven tilt-fest will be played in Belleville, with the next two on Wednesday and next Monday. Games will start at 7:30, not 8:30 as first announced.

The league's two top pitchers, Ron Marsele for Point Anne and Stewart Warner's Doug Ellis, both with no-hitters to their credit this season, matched pitch for pitch last night.

Stewart Warner broke the twin row of zeros in the third inning. Rod Turner drew a walk leading off the frame. He stole second and took third as Bertrim grounded out. Carr also walked and Turner raced home on a passed ball while Marsele was pitching to cleanup batter Lyle Wannamaker. That was it. Ellis had superb control while stopping Point Anne on four hits. He struck out nine and did not walk a batter. His club committed the only error of the ball game.

Marsele allowed just three hits but scattered six batters. He gave up four free passes.

Claude Carr had a first, second and third baseman in Warner. They threatened in the second when Chuck Rowbotham led off with a double and Pat Glancey singled him to third. Marsele struck out the next batter and picked off the third over the remainder, fanning the last five men in a row.

Point Anne's chances came in the first of the game as Marsele's two-out double, and in the fourth, when Ron and Glen Marsele had back-to-back hits — to no avail. Jim Horwood got the other single. Only in the first did a man get as far as third base.

The losers' Glen Marsele was ejected in the fourth inning for alleged "rough play" while running to first base.

Peterborough Rallies

PETERBOROUGH CP — Coach Bob Marsh of Vancouver blamed it all on goalie Pat Baker of Peterborough after his team's "woe - is" loss Monday night in the second game of the Canadian senior lacrosse finals.

Baker, under heavy attack for the first three periods, over the Vancouver club. The best-of-seven series for the Mann Cup now is tied 1 - 1 with the third game Wednesday.

"The Peterborough goalender made the difference in this game," Marsh said in the dressing room. "Baker beat us repeatedly when our boys were right in on him."

Marsh said the Petes put the pressure on his club in the last quarter and "my defence didn't play well as well as they did on Saturday."

Peterborough started the game with a fast break in the first quarter, but Vancouver came on strong to lead 7-5 going into the final quarter.

'PLAYED OUR GAME'

Jack Gibson, Peterborough manager, said: "We played our game, running and checking hard, for the last 10 minutes of the final quarter and it paid off."

Rookie Bill Armour led the Petes with three goals and John Davis added two. Bob Allan, Terry Downer, Ken Gerr and Ken Rutten each scored one.

Peter Black picked up two goals to lead the V's in scoring. Single goals were added by Gord Fredrickson, Gerr and Bob Wasylyk. Wayne Pecknold, Bob Salt and Don Boyd.

After the game, Marsh said he was satisfied with the officials but thought the referees could clamp down on slashing.

"The Petes got away with some slashing out there in the second quarter," he said, "and over the right eye.

If the officials continue to let it go we'll lay on the wood too," Marsh said Salt suffered a slight concussion during the game and Black received a cut

Rough Riders, Argos Invade West

Tigers Meet Als

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Credit coach Jerry Williams of Calgary Stampeders with a big first in Canadian football—the transcontinental sleeper play.

Williams flanked one of his quarterbacks 2,500 miles east of his line of scrimmage in Toronto's Exhibition Park Sunday and the manoeuvre shattered Edmonton Eskimos, the team Calgary may have to beat out for a spot in the Western Football Conference playoffs.

The Calgary coach set up the play by releasing Eagle Day, his starting quarterback at the beginning of the WFC season and handing the job to Pete Liske, whom he acquired from Toronto Argonauts in an off-season trade.

Day paid his first dividend Sunday when he replaced rookie Wally Gabler late in the first quarter and engineered four touchdowns in Toronto's 34-14 victory over the Eskimos, a team that had only one victory over the Eagle in his seven-year career with Calgary and Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

DAY GOES WEST

Day will be available to the Argonauts when the Eastern Conference cellar-dwellers play the remainder of their interlocking games on an eight-day western trip starting Sunday when they visit Saskatchewan Roughriders in Regina.

Assuming the Eagle works his magic against the Riders, repeats against Winnipeg Blue Bombers when the Argos visit them the following Wednesday and polishes off British Columbia Lions in Toronto four days later, only one flaw remains to be overcome to ensure the success of Williams' strategy.

The Calgary coach still has to figure out a way to win a few football games.

The Stampeders, virtually without a running attack since they lost Lovell Coleman and Ted Woods in the season's opening weeks, dropped into a last-place tie with the Lions Saturday night when they were beaten 14-3 at Vancouver.

TIME TO TINKER

Williams has another four days to tinker with his offence before the Stampeders' home engagement Saturday night against the Bombers, who dropped to third place when they lost 27-24 to Saskatchewan Sunday.

Also on Saturday, the B.C. defences will be tested as the Lions entertain Ottawa Rough Riders, the Eastern Conference leaders, who move on to Edmonton the following Monday.

Ottawa coach Frank Clair says his team is set for the season, but he might be interested in a big, experienced defensive tackle if one becomes available.

Montreal and Hamilton clash in Hamilton Saturday night, but the Alouettes will again be without J. W. Lockett, out with a broken arm. Although the big fullback began working out with the team Monday, he won't be ready to play for another two weeks.

Argos Effective-Except In Win Column

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts, who won their first game in six starts Sunday, have gained more yards in the air, completed more passes and gained more first downs than any other Eastern Football Conference club.

But the conference leading Ottawa Rough Riders are the top ground gainers, giving them undisputed possession of first place in the yards-gaining department.

The Argonauts have gained 1,137 yards passing, 106 first downs and completed 73 passes in their six games, according to statistics released Monday.

Hamilton Tiger - Cats, who hold second place in the EFC with eight points—two less than Ottawa — have outscored the Rough Riders 102 to 101.

Third - place Montreal Alouettes' 56 first downs by rushing is tops in the conference.

KEMPF TOP SCORER

Peter Kempf of the Alouettes leads the individual scoring race with 38 points on two touchdowns, four converts, seven field goals and a single. Tommy Grant of Hamilton and Whit Tucker of Ottawa are tied for second with five touchdowns each for 30 points.

Bob Paremore of Montreal is the top ground gainer with 473 yards in 94 carries for a 5.0-yard average. Paremore's longest run has been 78 yards and he has scored one touchdown.

Don Jackson of Montreal is second with 356 yards on 70 carries, while Bo Scott of Ottawa is third with 345 yards on 71 carries.

Russ Jackson of Ottawa is the leading passer with 57 completions for 906 yards on 117 attempts. The Rough Rider quarterback has passed for nine touchdowns. His longest has been 53 yards and his average is 7.7.

Rookie Wally Gabler of Toronto has 64 completions to lead in the conference and also has the most yards gained by passing—907. But his percentage—completed passes is .467 and Jackson's is .487.

Bobby Taylor of Toronto is the leading pass receiver with 445 yards gained on 31 interceptions for an average of 14.4 yards. Taylor's longest gain has been 46 yards.

Hamilton's Ron Sutherin has a league - leading five interceptions.

Hamilton also boasts the conference's top man in the kickoff returns department in Willie Bethea, who has run eight returns back for 230 yards and an average of 28.8 yards.

Garney Henley of Hamilton leads in punt returns with 182 yards gained on 27 punts for a 6.9-yard average. Dave Mann of Toronto is the leading punter with 2,167 yards on 50 punts for a 43.3-yard average.

Leafs Take Opener 2-0

TORONTO (CP)—Ed Rakow collected only one hit Monday night as he pitched Toronto Maple Leafs to a 2-0 victory over Richmond Braves in the opener of their International League's best-of-seven Governor's Cup finals.

Rakow pitched hitless-ball into the eighth inning when Tommie Aaron singled.

Rakow faced only 30 batters. A fourth-inning walk to Bill Robinson accounted for the only other Richmond base runner.

Rakow struck out 10 as did Richmond pitcher Ron Reed. But Reed could not stop Reggie Smith, Toronto's league-leading hitter.

Smith hit his fourth home run of the playoffs in the second inning to provide the only run Rakow needed. Smith also singled in the sixth and scored an insurance run on a triple by Mike Ryan.

Second game is to be played here tonight.

Announce New Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids and repair damaged tissue. A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured inflamed tissue.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most important of all — results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

New Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

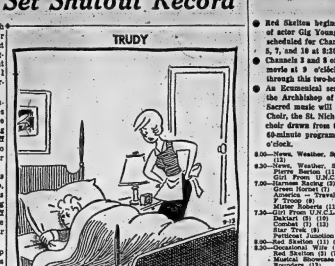
Dodgers Set Shutout Record

LOS ANGELES (AP)—With Don Drysdale showing better control and Claude Osteen out of a slump, Los Angeles Dodgers head into the pennant stretch with the National League's most formidable array of pitching power.



The weekend's four successive shutouts of Houston Astros—a Dodger club record—gave Los Angeles a league-leading total of 38 shutouts. The staff earned-run average, also best, stands the loop, is a shade under 2.7.

The Dodgers' current pace is reminiscent of a year ago, when they won eight of nine, swept the Astros, and then went on a 14-game spree that gave them a first game 4-0 over the Astros, has been pretty steady throughout the season despite arthritis in his pitching elbow.

DRYSDALE'S IMPROVING

Drysdale, though his 9-16 record doesn't indicate it, has shown improved form since Aug. 14, when he allowed only two runs in nine innings against Chicago Cubs. In seven Dodgers eventually won in 14 innings.

Last Saturday he went 3 1-3 innings, combining with Phil Regan for a four-hitter, 1-0, 10-ining victory over Houston.

Regan is a bulwark of the Dodger bullpen, with a 13-1 record and 25 other saves.

Osteen started the sweep of Houston, giving up three hits Friday night, when the Dodgers won 7-0. Though normally a slow starter, Osteen finished the first half of the season 16-7, since mid-August.

Don Sutton sagged after the all-star break, but since Aug. 9 he has never given up more than two runs in his eight starts, winning three and losing two.

Another effective Dodger hurler is Bob Miller, 4-6, who picked up all of his victories the first half of the season.

Making Study Of Recognition Of Red China

The following dispatch by Associated Press Staff Writer Max Harrelson presents an American viewpoint of the problems Canada faces over the possible recognition of China.

By MAX HARRELSON

OTTAWA (AP)—Prime Minister Pearson is under public pressure to recognize Communist China, and, in general, to adopt a foreign policy more independent of the United States.

A high-level study is reported under way in the department of external affairs to determine when and how to recognize the Peking government. A decision is expected within 12 months.

The department also is reviewing Canada's policies on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and Canada's role in the Caribbean.

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin has been plugging for a two-China solution of the controversy over seating Peking in the United Nations. This would admit Communist China without expiling the Nationalists. Little popular support for this plan is discernible here.

Retired Canadian diplomat Chester Ronning, who recently undertook two peace missions to Hanoi, was widely applauded by his appeals for immediate recognition of Peking and for Canadian support of Peking's admission to the United Nations. He said these steps could contribute to peace in Asia.

NEWSPAPERS AGREED

Ronning was supported by leading Canadian newspapers. They have been critical of the government's reluctance to go ahead without waiting for Washington's agreement.

While the main pressure seems on the side of Peking recognition and admission to the United Nations, there is still a vocal opposition.

Producer Puts a Modern Touch on Old Westerns

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A. C. Lyles is the sole survivor of a doughty tribe, the makers of program westerns.

Years ago, nearly every movie studio employed producers to turn out regular programs of westerns starring Buck Jones, Tim McCoy, Johnny Mack Brown and others.

Today, only Paramount's Lyles remains in action, and he has put some modern touches on the old western.

He's no old-timer, excepting in years of service. Now 46, he claims to have started his career with Paramount at 10 as call boy in a company theatre in his native Jacksonville, Fla.

He graduated to usher and at 17 made the big leagues to the mailroom of the Hollywood studio.

A. C. went on to the publicity department and for 15 years razzle-dazzled the press on behalf of William Fine and William Thomas, colorful producers of Paramount's B-movies.

It was a natural school for learning how to squeeze a production dollar.

"I can get more on the screen for less money than any producer in town," Lyles boasts. His writers are crammed with recognizable names and they are filmed in first-class sets.

How does he get the names?

FRIENDS HELP

"Friendship" explains the producer, who has one of the widest acquaintances with stars in Hollywood. "Also, fashion the scripts so that each character has at least a good scene. Then I'm able to hire names like Pat O'Brien, William Bendix and Brian Donlevy to do one day's work because they have good scenes."

The set?

He borrowed a trick from Fine and Thomas and uses sets that have been built for big-budget films.

"I always have a few finished scripts so I can start a movie whenever good sets become available," he said. "Another thing: I plan the films that have a lot of outdoor shooting to be made in the summertime, when you can get an hour's extra production."

Such shortcuts and 10-day schedules keep his films down to reasonable budgets. He won't tell how much, but the sums are inexpensive enough to prompt Paramount to order 18 Lyles' features during a 30-month period.

His upcoming movies: Waco, Howard Keel, Jane Russell, Terry Moore, Red Buttons, Howard Keel, Joan Caulfield, Brodrick Crawford, Fort Utah, John Ireland, Virginia Mayo, Brian Donlevy; Huntsville, George Montgomery, Vancouver — he's Yvonne DeCarlo, Tab Hunter, "The pictures earn 40-percent returns in the United States and 60-per-cent foreign," Lyles explains. "They're biggest in Italy, Germany, Japan and England, where westerns are highly popular."

Once Bored With Hollywood Jean Arthur Now Loves It

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jean Arthur, one of Hollywood's golden girls, rode to stardom on her looks, a wonderful way with a comedy line and a husky voice that had a quality of quiet crackle in it. Then she quit Hollywood.

She left behind a reputation as a fine comedienne and a shy actress in a community of compulsive extroverts.

Miss Arthur's shy? says Miss Arthur with a grin. "I was just bored.

She isn't bored now and finally has come to love Hollywood. Television, so often mechanical by actors, has turned the trick.

Miss Arthur, husky voice intact, is starring in Mother Is a two brushed lightly by the years, was launched on a new career last night in a series called The Jean Arthur Show on CBS.

PLAYS LAWYER

She plays a lovably uninhibited, wise and mildly kooky lawyer in partnership with her son. The comedy came as a surprise to Jean Arthur fans, who keep seeing her as a lovely uninhibited, wise and mildly kooky girl playing opposite stalwart young men named James Stewart and Gary Cooper in those late evening revivals.

Miss Arthur has weathered the years between Mr. Deeds goes to Town and Mr. Smith goes to Washington and The Talk of the Town with the best of her contemporaries.

She made her last film, Shane, 13 years ago but it was filmed in Utah, so her absence from Hollywood has been even longer than that.

"I hated the place," she recalled. "Not the work, but lack of privacy; those reporters and fan magazine writers and all that surrounding exploitation. But I think that it has all changed. Anyway, I am enjoying it all of this—even interviews."

PLAYED BROADWAY

After quitting motion pictures, she returned to her native New York and Broadway to star in a revival of Shaw's St. Joan and a hit revival of Barrie's Peter Pan.

A couple of years ago some CBS executives and Lucille Ball tried to persuade her to take a whirl at television.

She decided to dip a tentative toe in the TV pool by playing a guest spot in a Gunsmoke episode. "It's pretty much like everything about it—the role, the method of work, the people involved.

Part of her enjoyment in the show, she admits, involves the clothes. Those may be a special pleasure for the feminine audience, too, since television has been little high style since Loretta Young and Dinah Shore left the weekly schedule.

Some Excellent Comedy Seen in New Shows

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—A wide variety of comedy, some of it excellent, was displayed on U.S. television Monday night as four new shows were unveiled, of which this viewer saw six, the half-hour programs.

Family Affair on CBS is hardly pegged to a novel idea—a bachelor and three orphans who are unexpectedly saddled with children. If the mood and tempo of the first program are maintained, it promises to be a warm and charming comedy. Brian Keith plays the mono-syllabic foster parent and Sebastian Cabot is a perfect gentleman's gentleman. One of the three orphans, a tiny child named Anissa Jones, crept into the audience's heart in the two minutes although it took her 30 to secure her position in the bachelor household.

Jean Arthur, who has a skilful way with a comedy line, came back to show business after a long layoff, appearing in a CBS series that seemed unworthy of her talents. Miss Arthur in The Jean Arthur Show plays a successful woman lawyer in partnership with her son. But in the feeble opening show the two people had me making an idiot of herself in misguided efforts to help a gambler beat a murder rap.

NEEDS BETTER MATERIAL

Given some better material, Miss Arthur could pull this together and that wistful quality that made Peter Pan's Wendy and lieutenant, played with grim liniency by Howard Duff, and his young prosecutor rather than an older uniformed man. The first show revolved around a gambler's desire to speak to frame the young policeman.

The Monkees on NBC and Mayor Hogan, Run on CBS were half-hour comedies. The Monkees are a long-haired group of rock and roll group. They were involved with a beautiful princess and her wicked uncle who was trying to kill her.

Run, Buddy Run had Buddy, played by Jack Weston, drawn a sinister criminal syndicate bent on murdering him. But the mobsters were on the lumpen side such side excursions as a wild motorcycle ride through a busy supermarket.

The Roger Miller Show on NBC was a pleasant enough, hip-type variety half-hour, particularly when Miller was singing in his off-hand way and had Bill Cosby at the side making small talk.

England's Dairy Queen Given Royal Welcome On Visit Here Tuesday

A royal visitor to Belleville received royal treatment yesterday, complete with tours, touring car and a police escort.

Pamela Cox, 18, Dairy Queen of England and Wales, visited Belleville as part of her month-long trip to Canada.

She was greeted by J. A. Johnston, director, cheese division, Ontario Milk Marketing Board, and Donald Joss, president, Black Diamond Cheese.

Miss Cox thought the 72 degree weather was uncomfortably warm. "That's about as warm as it ever is back home," she said. "I think this is very warm. Everyone keeps telling me what a nice, fairly cool day it is."

Pamela was taken on a tour of Foxboro Cheese Factory by manager Harold Elliott, and a tour of Black Diamond Cheese. She visited Mayor Jack Ellis at City Hall, where she signed the city guest book. She also viewed the milk marketing board warehouses and was the guest of Black Diamond at a dinner and reception at Hotel Quinte last night.

Her trip to Foxboro Cheese Factory was her first visit to a cheese factory.

She told CJBQ's Phil Flagler in an interview she found the dairy queen competitions at the CNE extremely interesting. "They work more or less on the same principle as ours, but they have to know cattle and we don't."

LIVES ON FARM

Pamela lives on a mixed farm, which she describes as "medium - sized," near Manchester, England. She said her father has both Friesian and Angus beef cattle on the farm.

"I've enjoyed every minute of my tour so far," she said. "People have been so hospitable here."

She said she was impressed by the size of Canada. "It's such a vast, huge country, much different from England. The road we've been travelling on are wonderful to; the only problem is that you drive on the wrong side."

Pamela recently finished a course in a secretarial college and hopes to become a farm secretary following her reign as Dairy Queen. She is still a member of the Young Farmers' Club, similar to our 4-H Clubs.

She has been in Canada since August 31 and will leave from Quebec City September 20 for a short stay in the United States.

OFFICIAL SIGNING — Pamela Cox, Dairy Queen of England and Wales, who visited Belleville yesterday, signs the city guest book while Mayor Jack Ellis looks on.

Of her trip in general she said, "It's all enjoyable." Her sponsors, the Milk Industry Board, hope that, besides being enjoyable, her visit to Canada is helping to promote English and Welsh dairy products in this country.

Verwoerd's Assassin Was Surly Psychopath With Ill-Defined Grudge Against All Society

By BRIAN BARROW

CAPE TOWN (CP)—Dimitri Tsafendas, Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd's assassin, was a surly psychopath with an ill-defined grudge against society.

It has been established beyond all doubt that there were no political motives behind his lethal knife thrusts.

Yet it is already evident that his crime will have a deep and far-reaching effect on the political situation in South Africa.

Tsafendas removed from the scene the one man whose presence meant strength, stability and an unswerving continuity of purpose. No Afrikaner leader since Paul Kruger enjoyed as much veneration and loyalty among his people as Verwoerd.

His stature in this country, even among his political enemies, was gigantic. He was the most astute politician South Africa has ever had. To the Afrikaner and indeed to all his Nationalist followers he was a revered father figure who did more to realize the Afrikaner dream than any other man alive.

It was he who severed the link with Britain and took South Africa out of the Commonwealth and it was he who fulfilled the greatest of all Afrikaner aspirations—the establishment of an Afrikaner-dominated South African republic.

SIGNS OF RIFT

He had in fact become a living legend. Nobody was going to be there for another 10 to 15 years, infallible and indestructible. Everyone looked up to him and this made him the greatest single unifying factor in the Afrikaners' history. But now he is gone and his disappearance has struck at the very roots of the Nationalist party's existence.

Three weeks before his murder his Nationalist party never seemed more solid. Then suddenly there were signs of a deep rift between the more moderate Nationalists of the Cape and the extremist right-wing groups in the north. No matter how deep this rift, Verwoerd had the power and moral authority to keep his party united indefinitely. When he cracked the whip, all obeyed.

His successor as prime minister will not have nearly the same strong hold on the situation and it now seems likely that the long-awaited split in the Nationalist ranks will come into the open at last. The result could be new and deeply significant moves in South African politics.

The rethinking was already in progress before the assassination. There was a ferment in the Nationalist party which was generating a lot of emotion, with well-defined factions in the Transvaal and the Cape jostling for positions of influence.

The struggle began after the massive Nationalist victory at the last general election and it became more intense after the easing of international pressures following the favorable judgment in the South West Africa case.

The conflict was forced into the open only two weeks ago when the Nationalist newspapers of the Cape launched a bitter attack on a right-wing journal called the South African Observer which in a series of articles questioned the loyalty of a number of prominent Cape Nationalists known for their moderate views. The journal was conducting a kind of McCarthy inquiry of its own.

This clash however was only the top of the iceberg. It became much more significant when the fact leaked out that sponsors of the Journal were a right-wing group of Nationalist parliamentarians led by the minister of posts and telegraphs, Dr. Albert Hertzog. This meant that the rift was not only among the rank and file but existed at top cabinet level.

LONG STRUGGLE LIKELY

One of the main differences between the two groups is over racial policy and concern that too much energy is being devoted to petty apartheid (such as not allowing a white football team to tour Japan) and not enough to the larger and more moral concept of separate freedom for the various races.

Each faction has been busy preparing its own leader—a man who best represents its idea of a successor to Dr. Verwoerd.

His disappearance from the scene has come so suddenly however, that neither side is sufficiently prepared for a trial of strength. Thus the new prime minister might well be a stop-gap leader who will keep the ship on course while the struggle for Verwoerd's real successor intensifies behind the scenes and eventually grows into a full-scale clash.

That clash might come sooner than many would care to think. When it does there will be a new regrouping among the various political parties which will draw even the opposition parties into the vortex and eventually see the beginning of a new deal in South Africa.

Pearson Heads Body Striving To Win Accord

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson today was appointed to head a seven-country committee that would draft a new communique in a last-ditch attempt to bridge the Commonwealth split over Rhodesia.

Sitting on the committee with Pearson as chairman will be Prime Minister Wilson of Britain, President Milton Obote of Uganda, Prime Minister Holyoake of New Zealand, Senator Hector Wynter of Jamaica, Foreign Minister Sardar Swaran Singh of India and Finance Minister Arthur Wina of Zambia.

Canada's Arnold Smith, Commonwealth secretary-general, also was named a committee member.

The new committee was appointed as Afro-Asian countries rejected terms of a previous Canadian-prepared draft communique and demanded major changes.

The Afro-Asians insisted on majority black rule for Rhodesia before legal independence is granted. Wilson has refused to budge from a British policy of majority rule after independence which the Africans interpret as meaning British support for a minority-white regime.

As the conference leaders adjourned for lunch, Pearson said that "things are going well at the moment."

He previously had expressed optimism that the conference would find a way to prevent a deep Commonwealth split over the Rhodesian issue.

Smith told reporters there is a good chance that the conference may not have to be extended beyond its scheduled closing Thursday but he was not sure.

The Afro-Asian amendments to the draft Canadian communique were drawn up at a caucus before the 22 Commonwealth leaders resumed their closed-door discussions today.

The amendments, which included the major demand that there be no legal independence in Rhodesia without Negro majority rule, were considered at the restricted meeting of leaders on the conference's ninth day.

The Africans also demanded the Commonwealth support mandatory United Nations against Rhodesia and the use of force if sanctions fail to topple the minority-white regime of Ian Smith.

Contract Rejected By Union

SUDBURY (CP) — Pickets were out again today at some International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. plants here after a stormy union meeting Tuesday night in which 4,500 employees rejected a company wage offer and called for strike action.

A union bargaining committee recommended acceptance of a three-year contract but a motion was made from the floor declaring that the meeting did not concur with the committee. The motion was carried by a show of hands.

L. A. Soden, president of the 36,000 - member United Steelworkers of America local here, said that with the motion passed it would mean a secret ballot planned for Friday would not be needed on the offer or on whether to strike.

However, Terry Mancini, union area supervisor, said after the meeting every effort will be made to hold a strike vote Friday.

"I am not sure what our status is," he said. "This union is not going to be run by mob rule."

ANT SHORTER PACT

Union officials said the men turned down the three-year contract with a demand that it be shortened to two years.

Details of the contract, agreed on in a memorandum signed by company and union negotiators in Toronto Monday night, were released at the closed Tuesday night meeting. Union officials said it calls for a wage and benefit package of 86 cents an hour retroactive to July 10.

Meanwhile at the company's Port Colborne refinery, the night shift was turned back by about 100 wildcat pickets. Members of the Port Colborne local are to meet Thursday to vote on the wage offer.

52 Trucks Blasted by Viet Cong

SAIGON (AP)—A Viet Cong demolition squad stormed into a military motor pool near Saigon before dawn today, captured an American soldier, killed four South Vietnamese militiamen and blew up 52 trucks.

U.S. officials estimated damages at $1,000,000. They said the guerrillas escaped.

U.S. Army officers said the Viet Cong blasted a hole in the barbed wire fence surrounding the motor pool on the outskirts of Saigon and charged through with guns blazing. A platoon of militiamen on guard pulled out during the initial onslaught.

Officers said the installation's administrative building was destroyed.

In the air, U.S. bombers struck at a North Vietnamese missile centre for the seventh day in a row Tuesday.

Federal Govt. Puts 'No Trespassing' Sign on Revenues

By DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government put a "no trespassing" sign on its own tax revenues today as bargaining opened on new federal-provincial tax arrangements.

At the same time, it offered the provinces more freedom to levy the taxes they need as long as they accept the responsibility for them.

The double theme is sounded in Finance Minister Sharp's opening statement to the federal-provincial tax structure committee which starts a two-day meeting this afternoon.

The statement was released Tuesday night as provincial delegates headed by seven premiers and three finance ministers arrived in Ottawa carrying tax demands.

Both Quebec and Ontario weighed in with notice that theirs will be big.

The indicated Ottawa reply was, in effect: "Levy them yourself."

Mr. Sharp says the federal government will surrender no more "tax room" to the provinces and intends to change the Income Tax Act to make clear the provinces have access to all the revenue sources they need for their growing services.

The federal government proposes to separate federal and provincial levies of personal income taxes to get rid of the idea in the public mind that any bigger slice of taxes for provincial purposes can be taken only if Ottawa settles for a smaller one.

Other main federal proposals for the 1967-72 tax agreements:

Sharp's Tax Proposals Have a Familiar Ring

OTTAWA (CP)—Some of the remarks by Finance Minister Sharp in his opening statement for today's federal-provincial finance ministers' meeting have a familiar ring.

He calls for recognition of the principle "that both Parliament and provincial legislatures must accept their financial responsibilities and that each should look to its own electors for direction as to what money should be raised and how it should be spent."

John Diefenbaker sounded the same theme in somewhat different language to a federal-provincial conference six years ago when he was Conservative prime minister.

"It is an old adage of public finance that the government that spends the money ought to collect the money," said Mr. Diefenbaker Oct. 26, 1960.

Mr. Diefenbaker was ringing the death knell of the tax-rental system under which, in most provinces, Ottawa collected all personal and corporation income tax and estate taxes and paid an agreed share to provincial treasuries.

Instead, he offered a scheme under which provinces would collect their own taxes in those fields. To facilitate that, the federal government would reduce

Astronauts Ride Rocket To Height, Speed Marks

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Gemini 11 astronauts, riding a blazing Agena rocket, soared higher and faster in space today than man has ever come before.

"I tell you, you can't believe it!" Charles Conrad exclaimed as his spacecraft raced to 850 miles above the earth over eastern Australia. "Utterly fantastic!"

"We're on top of the world!" he said.

"Just out of my left window, I can see all the way around to the very end . . . with the horizon all around," he said.

The record-breaking journey started with a massive jolt of power from the Agena at 3:13 a.m. EDT.

"It's going!" Conrad said. "It's really going!"

"Have a good ride," the ground controller told him.

After the first kick of speed the Agena's long, hard pull against gravity gave Gemini 11 a bizarre record as the slowest orbiting spacecraft. It fell from the usual 17,500 miles an hour to 15,662 m.p.h. before reaching the peak of its outward trip.

Then Gemini started downhill — with gravity. It raced faster and faster until it was barreling along at 17,884 m.p.h., faster than man has ever gone before.

Looking down at the ocean, Richard Gordon said, "that water really stands out, so blue."

He said clouds covered part of the globe, but Africa, India and Australia really stood out.

The ground controller, asking for instrument readings on rendition as the crew slipped through a fringe of the Van Allen belt, said:

"Sounds like it's safer up there than a chest x-ray."

"Affirmative," answered Conrad.

Gemini 11 continued in its high orbit during two trips around the earth, about 3½ hours, before the astronauts ignited the Agena main engine for 24 seconds to return to an almost-circular orbit of 180 to 189 miles.

At 8:40 a.m. EDT Gordon opened his hatch and stood in his seat as Gemini 11 passed high over the India Ocean.

For two hours 20 minutes he was to snap scientific pictures of relatively young stars.

Fiscal Highligts

OTTAWA (CP)—Highlights of Finance Minister Sharp's proposals to the federal-provincial tax conference today:

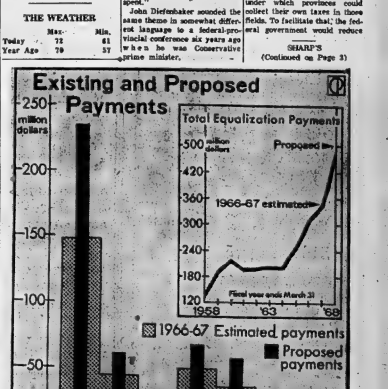
Queen and Prince Will Visit Ottawa, Montreal Next Year

LONDON (CP)—The Queen and Prince Philip will visit Canada next summer but will confine their week's tour to Ottawa and Montreal, Buckingham Palace ruled out any further extension.

The palace, in announcing the trip today, said it will start about June 30 when the royal couple will fly to Ottawa for centennial ceremonies. They then will visit Expo 67 at Montreal before returning to London.



The palace spokesman said the return flight will be about July 5 or July 6. He said visits by the Queen to other Canadian communities have been ruled out because of the "heavy administration" involved in the other royal visits by the Queen Mother and by Princess Alexandra and her husband, Angus Ogilvy.

The Queen Mother will visit Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Newfoundland during July for about 10 days after the Queen and Prince Philip have left.

Princess Alexandra will visit Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories during the second half of May and early June.

The Queen and Prince Philip last visited Canada together in October, 1964.

They touched down at Newfoundland on their way to the West Indies in February this year, and Prince Philip visited Canada by himself in March after his visit to the United States.

PAYMENTS WOULD BE RAISED — Federal government equalization payments to six provinces would be raised, according to a plan proposed to the provinces at the federal-provincial fiscal conference. The large graph shows estimate payments for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1967, under the existing equalization plan and the federal government's proposed payments for the fiscal year ending 1968. The inset graph shows total payments by the federal government to the provinces since the 1957-58 fiscal year. The Atlantic provinces adjustment grants are included in both graphs. Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta, classed as "have" provinces, receive no equalization payments. (CP Newsmap)

Anti-War Democrats Defeated In Several Primaries in U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Kennedy clan suffered defeat at home but ra pro-Kennedy man got a governorship nomination in the West as primaries to pick candidates for the Nov. 8 general election were held in 12 states Tuesday.

Some other races indicated popular support for President Johnson's Viet Nam policies as several anti - war Democratic candidates were defeated.

Edward McCormack, a longtime challenger of the Kennedys, captured the Democratic nomination for governor of Massachusetts. He defeated Kenneth O'Donnell, a top aide to the late President Kennedy.

Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts took no sides publicly in the primary but promised to support the winner in November.

This means Kennedy will be working for McCormack, whom he defeated in a bitter battle for the Senate nomination in 1962, against Republican incumbent John A. Volpe, who was unopposed. McCormack is a nephew of John McCormack, Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Former Massachusetts governor Endicott Peabody, trying for a political comeback, defeated Boston Mayor John F. Collins in the Democratic race for Senate nomination.

Peabody will face in November Republican Attorney - General Edward W. Brooke, who was nominated without opposition. If victorious, Brooke will be the first Negro in the U.S. Senate in 85 years.

Peabody also defeated a third candidate, Joseph Lee, a descendant of the two presidents Adams. Lee campaigned for opposition to the Viet Nam War.

Wisconsin Democrats gave Lieutenant - Governor Patrick Lucey their nomination for governor, Lucey, a staunch supporter of the late President Kennedy, will face Republican Gov. Warren Knowles, who was unopposed for renomination.

In the Massachusetts Republican primary for a House seat, a housewife-lawyer ended the political career of Representative Joe Martin, who had been in the House 42 years and twice was his Speaker. Martin, 81, who first went to the House in 1924, lost to Mrs. Margaret Heckler, 35, by more than 3,000 votes.

In Minnesota, Gov. Karl Rolvaag, rejected by organized labor by his own Democratic-Farmer-Labor party, won the chance on his own to seek a second term.

Rolvaag, 53, stormed past his lieutenant - governor, A. M. (Sandy) Keith, 37, who bucked Rolvaag in June to win the party's convention endorsement.

Rolvaag will face Republican Harold Levander, 55, a South St. Paul lawyer, who swept past nominal opposition.

Other primaries were held in Arizona, Colorado, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Utah and Vermont. Voters picked nominees for six governorships, nine Senate seats and 74 House seats.

Trio Finds Trout Hungry

A party of three Belleville men got a handsome return from a four-day canoe trip in Algonquin Park this past weekend.

Bill Henderson, Bill Murray and Jim Hutchison found the lakes trout in a hungry mood Friday through Monday. And a healthy speckled also joined the banquet.

The trio brought home 16 lake trout, ranging in weight from four to eight pounds.

Henderson added the speckled, a beauty which topped the scales at four and three-quarter pounds.

The fish were landed in Lavieu Lake after a 30-mile portage.

Vorster Retains Control of Police Force

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) — John Vorster, South Africa's new prime minister, announced in Parliament today that he would temporarily retain control of the police force in view of threats to the country's internal security.

Vorster made the announcement after being sworn in as prime minister today and naming a close friend, Petrus Pelser, to take his former job of Justice minister.

Pelser, 51, is a lawyer and deputy Speaker of the House of Assembly (lower house).

But Vorster, who had control of the police for the five years he was justice minister, specified he was keeping it while giving up the ministry.

Vorster was making his first appearance in Parliament as prime minister after President Charles Swart swore him in to replace assassinated Hendrik Verwoerd.

Vorster also announced that a senior judge had been appointed to investigate all aspects of the assassination of his predecessor eight days ago.

Three Crewmen Killed in Train Wreck

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — The CNR's main line across Newfoundland was expected to be blocked until at least noon today following a head-on collision Tuesday night between two freight trains that killed three crewmen.

The three, members of the locomotive crew of one of the trains, were killed when an empty boxcar immediately behind the diesel engine sliced off the locomotive cab.

Five men in the cab of the lead locomotive pulling the second train and two men in the train's caboose were injured, but all were in satisfactory condition in hospital early today.

The collision occurred on cliff-side tracks a few miles west of here about 10 minutes after westbound freight No. 203 pulled out of the Corner Brook station. The second train was standing east on tracks through Crow Gulch.

The tracks are about 130 feet above the waters of the Humber River, but none of the locomotive or cars plunged down the cliff.

The wreck pulled down communication lines between Corner Brook and Port aux Basques, western terminal of the narrow-gauge cross-Newfoundland line.

Ruby Reschke Of B.C. Lions Faces Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver waitress Paula Russell, 24, said Tuesday she will bring suit against B.C. Lions football player Ruby Reschke, who allegedly bit her posterior.

Miss Russell, a student at Vancouver City College, said the incident took place on Labor Day in a city hotel where she is employed as a part-time waitress.

She said five other players bet a total of $30 one of them wouldn't bite Miss Russell's buttocks.

"That's more than I make in a week," she said.

"I don't know who did it, but I know it wasn't me," Reschke, formerly of the University of B.C. said Tuesday. "And I haven't received a writ or heard from a lawyer yet."

Board Gives Bell Leave For Takeover

Bell last month offered stockholders in the companies a 30-per-cent premium on the current market value of their common shares. It received more than enough offers to boost its holdings in each to the 51-per-cent mark.

Although many of these persons are attracted by advantagements of schools offering correspondence on a commercial basis, most high school board officials note that correspondence courses in elementary and secondary school academic subject is offered by the Ontario Department of Education at no charge to Ontario residents not attending school.

Courses are available in most of the subjects offered in the regular school programs and cover exactly the same work as is taken in the shcools. A student may enrol for work in any grade of the elementary or secondary school program. When he has completed the required subjects he can qualify for an Ontario Secondary School Graduation Diploma.

Any person interested in these correspondence courses should write to the Director, Correspondence Courses Branch, Department of Education, 559 Jarvis Street, Toronto 5. Further information may be obtained from local school authorities.

Executive Forced to Change Location of Retarded Home

BY ZULA GOSLING — 392-3339

TRENTON — Owing to the "expressed attitude" of York sub-division residents towards the location of a proposed new District Association for the Retarded taking over the Walter Hinchey farm, a municipal property west of Trenton, association members voted last night to build a $30,000 to $40,000 residence for adult retarded in the 14-room home and to look for a new site for the main site on which to build a residence.

The association members were told by a meeting proposed by Trenton solicitor H. E. Smithrim, a past president of the group, which has one of the plans, "the animosity of the residents."

Around 30 sub-division residents and an equal number of association members, (most of whom were parents of retarded children) spent a two hours period last night at loggerheads over the idea of locating the home in the sub-division.

William G. Weston, Trenton lawyer, hired to express the opinion of the residents, was barely able to get his points across. Mr. Weston's considered opinion had to do with land devaluation.

Unidentified residents kept getting up to ask references to "big brutes" and expressing fears that they or their families would be in danger of molested or even murdered by the "six foot two retarded 'children'".

Hal Wise, Peter Gomery, guest speaker at the first association meeting of the season, and an employee of the Ontario retarded group, tried to explain that the incidence of crime per capita was much lower in the case of retarded than "normal" persons.

TOLD GRUESOME STORY

A former resident of Bath, England, told a gruesome story of a mentally retarded man from his area having murdered two little girls, detained in a home for the mentally disturbed, escaped and murdered two other girls.

"You lost the sympathy of the residents the minute he told that story," Mr. Gomery told the association members later.

Admitting that they had never had contact with retarded persons and that they knew nothing of the care and treatment of such persons, the sub-division residents were adamant in their demands that the home be located elsewhere . . . anywhere but the York sub-division.

Association members in rebuttal said they certainly didn't want their children located in a community so full of bigotry and hostility.

There was nothing for association president Bart Boers and his executive members to do but come up with the alternate' peepout, of seeking another site and building a residence.

At that, Mr. Gomery said the York residents had done the association a favor. He said government grants on a new home were much higher than on a reconstructed home.

A committee will investigate the possibility of a 50-acre tract of land to the south of the York sub-division and other available properties.

Expect Tenders On Sewer By Friday

TRENTON — Tenders for the installation of a sanitary sewer and a watermain on Edwards Street are to be in to the town office by Friday of this week.

Meanwhile, Carr's Electric has completed the installation of a sewer main on Roscoe Ave. and is now making house connections.

Carr's will move to Henry Street to install a watermain between Dufferin Ave. and McLellan Ave. and, while the installation of a watermain on Henry between Queen Street and Dufferin Ave., will be done by Carr's.

However, it is fortheoming that Residents on the street objected strongly to the installation at the OTB hearing in Trenton last week.

Carr's should also start the sewer installation on Front Street from Middle Street to the new bridge area, soon. This will tie in with the sewer already being installed by the Gaffeny Company in the industrial area of the western bridge approach on Front. Carr's will continue the sewer from the bridge vicinity to Bondhead Street.

Says Planned Recreation Not a Frill

Quinte Kiwanis Club members were told Monday night that increased leisure means planned recreation a need rather than a frill.

T. J. Clancy, chairman, commercial division, Belleville United Appeal, told the meeting at Johnny's Restaurant that government doesn't take over planning in health, welfare and recreation fields, but that voluntary agencies are better able to meet local needs, adopt experimental programs, adapt quickly when basis is appropriate and tailor programs and services to meet specific and individual needs.

"Voluntary agencies concentrate on preventive measures, on most of day to day problems in human relationships and prevention of physical, mental and emotional disease."

He said year-round despair, ill health, and impairment are evident attendant effects on economic productivity, family and community life and dramatized things, but are the areas of voluntary concern.

The Belleville United Appeal, operated by its contributors, offers its membership (contributors) a choice of a package deal, which can't be 100 percent popular, but appears to be the best possible compromise.

He listed the benefits of united giving as "one campaign, one solicitation, one pledge (payroll deduction for many), and one receipt for income tax purposes.

"All this seems highly impersonal, especially when we give what we feel like giving rather than what we know we should be giving."

He said the main goal of the 1966 campaign is to broaden the base of support.

"Approximately 5,000 of 11,300 actively employed people in our community presently contribute to the United Appeal. If another 200, or 10 percent, decide to give, this years' goal of $106,720 . . . will be easily attained.

"It appears the greatest single force motivating agencies to seek admission to a unified fund is the immediate and continuing success of that fund in raising its objective.

"Thus it is respectfully suggested you join together to support the United Appeal in a manner that does credit to our city, as the balanced network of essential services is made possible only through your own personal or corporate generosity."

Physically Handicapped Get Teaching

The Bay of Quinte District High School Board agrees that a term will provide home instruction in secondary school subjects for students chronically unable to attend school.

The program is for an itinerant teacher employed by the local board to spend at least two and a half hours per week in the home of each student receiving home instruction. The program is supplemented by instruction provided by the Correspondence Courses Branch of the Department of Education.

Board officials note, however, that a home instruction unit can be set up only when a medical certificate recommending such action is submitted.

The school board was one of enquiries regarding the home instruction service from any other students in the Belleville area, who are physically unable to attend secondary school. It is pointed out, however, that this instruction is provided for physically handicapped persons, but does not include persons who may be mentally or emotionally disturbed.

No Wonder Little Dog Was Rattling

LONDON (AP)—Jason was a rattling good dog, and that was his trouble.

"He actually began rattling," explained his owner, James Gerard, today.

"I'll get so much every time I move that he rattled. It was unnerving.

"So I finally took him to a vet. The vet handled him, moved him about a bit, and sure enough, Jason rattled."

Jason's owner is a scrap metal merchant in suburban Ilford. Jason had been swallowing the merchandise.

From Jason's stomach and intestines the vet removed seven ball bearings and a pintale rail fitting. Each of the ball bearings was an inch in diameter.

Jason appears to be recovering.

Poppy Fund Committee Holds Meet

The members of the Belleville poppy fund committee met at the summer cottage of the Belleville Legion, A.V. Liddle, recently. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss ways and means of extending what they represent to make this endeavor as big if not bigger next season than it was in 1965.

Following the meeting a social time was enjoyed at which time Mrs. E. Liddle served refreshments.

Sharp's

its levies by fixed percentages. The provinces could either collect the percentage Ottawa gave up, or they could boost taxes on their own. The federal government would handle the collecting for provinces if they wished.

Although Mr. Sharp's tax-sharing proposal differs in detail from the five-year Conservative plan that became effective April 1, 1962, he didn't make any move to resurrect the old tax-rental plan.

The rental scheme was born during the Second World War and remained a keystone of federal-provincial fiscal relations until 1962.

Provincial premiers didn't take kindly to Mr. Diefenbaker's 1960 proposal. Quebec's Jean Lesage termed it "completely unacceptable." To British Columbia's Premier Bennett it was "totally unrealistic."

T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan forecast a "return to the bad days of the 1930s."

WENT INTO EFFECT

Unacceptable or unrealistic or not, the plan went into effect for the five-year period ending next March 31.

By this year, the federal government had given up 24 per cent of basic personal income tax to give the provinces taxing room.

Seven provinces have moved in to collect that amount. Three others take more. Manitoba and Saskatchewan take 29 per cent, so their taxpayers pay an additional five percentage points.

Quebec collects 16 own income tax under rules that differ from the federal system. It receives the 24-percent abatement as a credit and an additional 25 percentage points as an equivalent for opting out of certain federal - provincial shared-cost programs.

All provinces except Quebec use Ottawa as the collecting agent for their income tax. Quebec collects its own.

The provinces may not like Mr. Sharp's plan any more than they liked Mr. Diefenbaker's six years ago.

Federal

—An increase to $461,500,000 from $353,800,000 in equalization payments to the poorer provinces, calculated on a "prosperity index" formula.

—A federal shift away from direct participation in shared-cost social programs, with an offer of an additional 11 per cent of personal income taxes, plus extra, to replace federal payments.

Establishes payments to protect provinces in case of regional or general economic recession.

COST $730,000,000

The major shared - cost arrangements in question are hospital insurance, national health grants and the new Canada Assistance Plan covering old age assistance, blind and disabled allowances and unemployment assistance. Together, they cost the treasury more than $705,000,000 a year.

They are basically areas of provincial jurisdiction, and federal participation in such areas chagrins "a continuing influence on provincial decision-making," says the statement.

Federal conditions for these programs mean that federal cost payments could continue under a different and "unconditional" formula and provinces would be able to take the full responsibility for their programs they desire.

The federal philosophy on tax-sharing is that the principle that governments at all stages can be made only in the face of federal withdrawals.

"The principle that does call for recognition is a different one: Namely that both Parliament and provincial legislatures must accept their financial responsibilities and that each should look to its own sources for direction as to what money should be raised and how it should be raised."

Existing tax arrangements designate a "standard rate" of personal income tax and a standard abatement to provide taxing room for the provinces.

EXCESS RATE

The provinces are free to impose any rate they choose, and three provinces in fact exceed the rate with their own taxes. they risk accusations of "double taxation."

Mr. Sharp said the federal government proposed to recommend to Parliament removal of the "standard abatement" and "standard rate" from the Income Tax Act.

The cumulative effect of the 27-point tax transfer for shared-cost programs is expected to result in a 35-40 federal withdrawal spilt of personal income taxes.

Provinces now levy about 25 per cent of the basic personal income tax, about 26 per cent of corporation income tax, and 75 per cent of estate taxes.

Mr. Sharp makes out a firm federal claim against further provincial encroachments on the personal income tax, corporation and personal income taxes.

He said federal and provincial governments also have "concurrent national rights in these fields.

HAVE NATIONAL ASPECT

But he says corporation income taxes have "a national characteristics, since profits may be earned outside the province in which the corporation's head office is located. And the tax is needed as an instrument of national economic policy.

He outlines a similar argument for federal claims to personal income taxes, adding that equity is achieved between the rich and the poor across the nation."

The federal task to promote balanced economic development runs as an underlying current through the statement. Mr. Sharp emphasized that Ottawa will continue to employ federal and provincial measures on a shared - cost basis "for economic purposes."

One such program that would be allowed to expire is the roads - to - resources agreement.

MORE . . .

under which about $1,000,000 of the original 2026 federal commitment of $75,000,000 remains to be spent.

The meeting will hear a welter of provincial counter-proposals. Conflict must be resolved by the end of the year, when Ottawa's authority to collect taxes on behalf of the provinces expires.

Mr. Sharp's statement does not deal directly with inflation, a late and important item placed on the agenda at his own request.

MANNING HAS PLAN

Premier Manning of Alberta does. He calls for a one-year interval to gear public spending policies to the danger of inflation, with a new five-year tax agreements taking effect after that.

New Brunswick proposes a labor tax to attract industry to areas of unemployment. It would be a 50-per-cent rebate for labor in full - employment areas.

Ontario will ask an immediate increase of 4½ share of personal income taxes and Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson asks for the entire revenue from personal income, corporation and succession duties and the province, with the exception of about 40 per cent of tax from joint corporations.

Premier Thatcher said Saskatchewan must have more personal income taxes. The province now can now running about $32,000,000 would be whittled to zero in five years.

If applied this year, the new formula would increase payments to Ontario by $36,800,000 to a total of $236,300,000.

The Atlantic provinces would gain $37,900,000 over existing payments to bring Nova Scotia and Manitoba's payment would increase by $1,800,000 to $28,200,000.

Tax revenues would flow out of Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia into the equalization fund and they would receive no payments.

GETS GOAL

Mr. Sharp said the goal before Ottawa and the provinces is this:

"We must somehow fashion machinery which will permit a strong federal ngovernment to accomplish the economic and social responsibilities which belong to it, but without impairing the fiscal freedom and responsibility of the provinces.

"We must on the other hand fashion machinery which will guarantee the vitality of the provinces to provide the greatly expanded and improved public services which are expected of them, but without at the same time hobbling the federal government in carrying out its duty to have different laws for different parts of Canada — differences which might have the effect of obscuring or weakening its proper role as a government which governs Canadians and is elected equally the interests of all of them.

"We in Canada, in other worlds, cannot solve the problems of 20th century federalism without abandoning one level of government to another. Nor can we do so by adopting a kind of compartmental federalism, under which the federal and provincial governments would attempt to function in isolation.

"We must find another way."

ment, attempting to bridge the split between Britain and the Afro-Asians, was understood to cover the main points of contention without spelling out firm recommendations for action.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson played a major role in attempting to mediate the struggle and preserve the Commonwealth.

Informants said Commonwealth leaders spent about 40 minutes discussing the Canadian draft and the Afro-Asian demands and then returned to other world issues.

WENT TO COMMITTEE

The Rhodesian problem was thrust into the hands of a special committee working under Canada's Arnold Smith, Commonwealth secretary-general.

Meanwhile, Pearson invited representatives of three Caribbean countries to lunch at his hotel. Attending were Prime Minister Forbes Burnham of Guyana, Senator Hugh Shearer of Jamaica and Dr. P. V. J. Solomon, Deputy Prime Minister of Trinidad. These three countries are generally supporters of Britain's position on Rhodesia.

As the conferences broke up for lunch, Pearson was asked by reporters how discussions went.

"We're right in the middle of it," he said. "It's too early to tell yet."

Asked if he still is hopeful, the Canadian leader smiled and said: "Yes, I am. I'm hopeful. Things are going well at the moment."

Pearson and his aides worked halfway through the night to outline a communique to bridge the differences between the demands that there be no local independence in Rhodesia without majority rule and that British policy to work for majority rule after independence.

The communique said the struggle is whether the black man or the white man is is rule Rhodesia, which now is controlled by the minority-white regime of Ian Smith.

SEEK CHOICE BETWEEN

The Canadian draft, under Pearson, worked in Pearson's downtown hotel suite until 2:30 a.m., EST, getting a British and an Afro-Asian phrases in an effort to produce a single document all 22 countries could sign. The draft was considered by delegates at another session starting shortly after 9:30 a.m.

The decision to call on Canadian mediation came late Tuesday after Sir Sydney Bailey prepared by the Commonwealth secretariat under Canadian Secretary - General Arnold Smith and was rejected by Prime Minister Wilson on the one hand and amended on the other by the Afro - Asian delegates on the other.

Instead of issuing separate communiques setting out their differences — agreeing to disagree, as observers generally put it—the delegates accepted a request by Pearson's aide try to patch together a compromise declaration.

Barring last minute change of position among the delegates, however, there was little prospect of total agreement.

By late Tuesday, the Rhodesian question seemed to have left Britain's hands, according to reported only by Australia, New Zealand, Malay and Malawi.

Opposing them were a group of at least 35 nations from Africa, Asia and the Caribbean. Their spokesmen said they also had the support of Canada and Cyprus, although Canadian officials were careful to maintain a public attitude of closemouthed neutrality so their mediation efforts would not be compromised.

High Level Of Hatred By Workers

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's new compulsory arbitration legislation has created a pretty high level of hatred among employees of the Saskatchewan Power Corp., says a union official.

Jim Kimmerly, international representative for the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, said Tuesday that because Premier Ross Thatcher proclaimed the Essential Services Emergency Act law Monday, the Crown-owned corporation may have difficulty retaining skilled personnel.

The law was proclaimed after union members rejected a final con - negotiable government wage offer of six per cent. Proclamation ended a 15-day strike by about 1,200 employees of the corporation's gas division.

Passed last Thursday by the legislature, the act gives the union and SPC until noon Saturday to choose nominees to an arbitration board. The board then has seven days to name a chairman.

Other contract negotiations of any provincial court to serve as chairman.

SELECT NOMINEES

No announcement was made after union officers met Tuesday to select their nominees.

There was no indication when the SPC would name its nominees.

R. E. Hale, regional director of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the act would directly affect at least 10,000 workers, possibly 30,000, in private and public industry in the province. The act covers workers furnishing water, heat, and/or gas to and employees of hospitals, homes for the aged, nursing homes and other institutions.

A spokesman for the Saskatchewan Federation of Labor said one result of the new law would be a larger SFL delegation to the CLC meeting in Ottawa Sept. 27 and 28 to discuss injunctions against unions and compulsory arbitration.

Pearson Will Be Heard In Truscott Case

OTTAWA (CP) — A rule change will allow the Supreme Court of Canada to hear new evidence in the Steven Truscott appeal.

Judges made the change last week with the Truscott case in mind. It allows them to hear witnesses when criminal cases already disposed of by a Court of appeal are referred to the Supreme Court for an opinion.

The cabinet last April asked the court to review Truscott's conviction of the strangling of a 12-year-old girl in Clinton, Ont., in 1959. He was 14 then and has spent the last seven years in prison serving a life sentence..

Until now, Supreme Court judges have been confined to consideration of existing evidence in such cases.

Proceedings in the Truscott appeal are to open Tuesday. The court will sit briefly to determine the bridge. A temporary line may be introduced and to set a date for the hearing of witnesses.

Both the Crown and the defence are expected to seek permission to introduce new evidence.

The court resumes its summer session Sept. 26 and the following week begins its fall term. It is understood that the Truscott appeal will have priority and will be heard as soon as lawyers are ready to proceed.

College Street Bridge May Be Completed This Year

The possibility of an earlier than expected completion of the new four-lane College Street bridge was indicated today by the local representative of Mastercraft Engineering and Construction Co. Ltd. of Ottawa, who are building the new structure.

"Our contract completion date is not until next June, but we are going to try to do the job this year," stated the company representative.

On the job only since the middle of last week, the Ottawa firm has made rapid progress in preparing for the new bridge structure.

The old one-lane truss bridge has been moved from its piers and pushed out of the way to the north of the bridge site and workmen armed with jack hammers are ripping out the old piers.

CONCRETE STRUCTURE

The new bridge will be a concrete structure with pre-cast beams from the Wilson Concrete Ltd. of Belleville, who were the low bidders on the sub-contract. Concrete piers will be poured in concrete with reinforcing steel.

On completion of the bridge the Grantland Nation Park, a portion which was carried on the old structure, will be replaced by parkland. A temporary line was run across the river bed to provide service while the new bridge is under construction.

The old truss bridge structure now lying on the river bottom will be sold for scrap.

Pressure on UN

A letter from a Vancouver reader, appearing on this page today, makes a plea for support of the principles of the United Nations.

Unhappily the lofty idealism embodied in the charter of the world body too often has been clouded, by all and sundry.

That the UN does represent a moderating influence in the world, however, cannot be denied. Ineffectual as it appears at times, and despite the many instances of national pride and willfulness taking precedence over the rule of law, the world body has achieved positive success in many spheres. This has been the case particularly in the functioning of its many subsidiary organizations — such as UNRRA, which seeks to improve the lot of refugees and of underdeveloped countries. At the military level it has achieved considerable success with its various peace-keeping missions, with Canada playing a leading part in this sphere.

The fact that the United Nations organization has survived so long is a matter for satisfaction but the suspicion remains that in a really serious crisis between east and west, say the involvement of China (which is not a member of the UN) in the current war in Viet Nam, would gravely impair such influence ks it still commands.

A cartoon in The Vancouver Sun portrays the situation skilfully, with a dapper U Thant (the Burmese diplomat is planning to retire from the post of UN secretary-general) stalking off after plunging a knife into the back of the pathetic angel of peace representing the world body. The caption, after the manner of Julius Caesar, when knifed by Brutus, reads: "Et tu, U?"

Perhaps U Thant may be persuaded to remain in the post, although only he knows, after five years in it, how frustrating his tasks are, and how humiliating it is to witness the authority of the organization being eroded still further.

Citizens' Rights

Questioning of Canadian citizens in Canada itself by FBI agents is a disturbing factor in the otherwise friendly relations between this country and the United States.

A number of these interrogations apparently have taken place in recent months, and some have related to Canadians (and Americans) who have crossed into Canada from the United States in order to avoid the draft.

Just what the legality of such questioning of people by agents of another power is open to debate, and the time is coming when this should be dealt with by Parliament, or in talks between Ottawa and Washington. Citizens' rights are being placed on the line.

The latest case involves a Mrs. E. L. McKegney, of Sarnia, who says she was questioned for an hour by a U.S. secret service agent August 26, after she wrote a letter to President Johnson opposing U.S. policy in Viet Nam.

Mrs. McKegney, a member of the Sarnia Senior Citizens' Committee to End the War in Vietnam, said the agent told her the letter constituted a threat against the life of the president. She said she could not recall that her letter contained any threats against the president. However, she had said in one paragraph that she did not think the U.S. "could continue killing innocent people without expecting repercussions."

Whatever the contents of the letter, the point that should be cleared up is the role of the U.S. secret service in this matter. The agent, a Mr. L. S. Bates, of Detroit, was reported to have been accompanied during the interrogation by a member of the Sarnia city police force. Police Chief James Torrance said the border police forces exist co-operated in this way and his men had gone to Detroit a number of times to question U.S. citizens.

Sarnia RCMP Sgt. J. T. Fraser, on the other hand, said Agent Bates had never talked with the federal police and he had no knowledge of RCMP officers questioning citizens in the United States.

Clearly, if there is to be any co-operation between Canadian and U.S. police in this kind of activities, clear boundries should be brought in. The RCMP is the body that is responsible for internal security in Canada. It is also Canada's counter-espionage organization.

However, Mrs. McKegney put the matter into perspective when she said: "It was only after I started to think . . . to wonder if what was ordinary, the way it was carried out. I don't suppose I would mind (being interrogated) if I had threatened the president, but I didn't. If this is reciprocal (RCMP questioning U.S. citizens) we should know."

And that is just about the size of it. It would not be surprising if this issue comes up in Parliament, as one affecting the rights of a citizen, as well as the jurisdiction of police forces on both sides of the border.

UN Charter Must Be Upheld by All

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

A wave of concern must have circled the world as the news that Secretary - General U Thant had decided not to offer himself for a second term. His words: ". . . in my view, the tragic error is being repeated of relying on force and military means in a deceptive pursuit of peace . . ." give some hint as the mental and physical strain he has been under.

I believe if "We the peoples of the United Nations . . ." gave him letters of encouragement to continue his work, and express our faith that UN the Charter can, with some revision, maintain international peace and security, he will reconsider.

How individuals commit unusual actions in civilian life they can, after examination by psychiatrists, receive treatment in institutions for their own and the peoples safety. Some provision for this happening internationally should be included in the UN Charter.

The Memorandum of Law prepared by the Lawyers' Committee on American Policy toward Vietnam states: "The United States Government in its war in Vietnam has violated: 1. The United Nations Charter. 2. The Geneva Agreements of 1954. 3. The Constitution of the United States.

The rule of law must govern the settlement of disputes between nations.

Long live the United Nations!

The French As Tourists

Christian Science Monitor

We must, it would seem, revise certain impressions of French tourism.

We had assumed that endless streams of foreign tourists habitually flocked to Paris, the Riviera, the Loire Valley, inundating it with their presence. In this assumption we were, apparently, correct, with a matter of fact, the number of foreigners visiting France in 1965 amounted to almost a quarter of the entire French population. And during that year roughly one out of every 200 Americans managed to work France into his itinerary.

Where we appear to have erred was in assuming that the Frenchman himself is quite content to remain in France, escaping the visiting crowds only by journeying in season to some more remote corner of the land, him in the typical Norman style. Somehow, we did not envision as innocent abroad, scattering francs with gay abandon.

But, we are told, between 1962 and 1965 the French income from foreign tourists has been raised some $28 million below what Frenchmen are themselves spending abroad — a statistic which has not gone unnoticed by the French Government.

Tourism officials are this year backing the distribution of thousands of badges to those Frenchmen who have a command of the English, German, or Spanish tongue with the hope that the U.S. will gallantly come to the assistance of the bewildered tourist.

If all goes well, Frenchmen de Gaulle may be able to reverse the tourist flow and thereby vanquish yet another threat to the glory of France. Now if only the British, Spanish, and Germans don't catch on, creating a "be kind to French tourists" campaign, distribute badges to their French-speaking colonials, and ruin the whole scheme!

Leaving Canada

Canadian Press Writer
Marilyn Argue

It's easy to talk! Is Canadians, as long as you talk about football, TV and sex, says novelist Nicholas Monsarrat.

The 56-year-old author of The Cruel Sea will end his 13-year sojourn in Canada (he makes his home in Ottawa) within the next year, but he's not pulling up stakes because of the country's frontier conversation.

"This is the longest I've ever spent in one place," said the former diplomat and naval officer. "I don't like growing roots. One gets sort of stale."

The Monsarrats have sold their island in the St. Lawrence and their boat and car, a $15,000 Bentley.

"We're looking around the world for somewhere to live, and we've narrowed it down to England, Switzerland or the Caribbean," he said.

To Your Good Health

'Good Ear' Likely Weak Without Man Knowing

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband and I are in our 60's. He is totally deaf in one ear but has extra good hearing in the other.

Our problem is that every time I speak to him he claims he hears the first few words, but not the last few because I lower my voice on purpose, which I do not.

Is it possible that his hearing works this way? I've watched myself and am careful to speak as loud as I can, but still he says I do this to torment him. — Mrs. B. R.

First I doubt that he hearing in his better ear is "extra good." It must, be impaired considerably. Have an ear specialist test his hearing and put an end to that argument.

I strongly doubt that his hearing "works this way." More likely it is a matter of his straining to hear what you say. With an effort, he can make out the words. But he is difficult for anyone to keep straining to hear, so he relaxes and misses the last part of what you say. Or, more likely, folks do some lip-reading even without consciously knowing it, that ought account for his "hearing" some and not the rest.

A suitable hearing aid for that "good ear" could make a world of difference for both of you. It is characteristic of people who are hard of hearing to let it go that it's not their ears, but that others don't speak clearly. This is a natural reaction, I suppose, because hearing usually fails so gradually that the deaf person doesn't realize how much sensitivity he has lost, and he honestly thinks it's because everybody has stopped speaking clearly.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have to take two tablets of probenecid a day for gout. I also like to take aspirin for other aches once in a while, but have been told never to combine the two drugs since aspirin will offset the benefits of probenecid. Is this true? — F. H. A.

Yes. No harm is done except that the good effects of the probenecid are offset by aspirin or other types salicylates. Therefore your doctor to suggest substitutes for aspirin.

A warning against the use of aspirin with that drug is contained in my booklet "The Modern Way to Stop Gout." (Readers intending a copy may obtain it by sending 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 16, Dundee, Ill.)

Dear Dr. Molner: I am allergic to the sun; nevertheless I love to get a good tan, I have a very fair complexion, but I do not burn. I break out and my skin itches and looks terrible. Can I take anything to prevent the sunburn? — Mrs. H. H.

It is too complicated a question to be answered yes or no, but in certain cases of sun sensitivity, dermatologists are having success with various medications. I suggest that you consult such a specialist and give him enough time to follow through on more than one approach to the problem if necessary.

* * *

Note to Mrs. E. R. S.: There are benefits in going to one physician and regularly in and of "shopping around," but when there are concrete reasons, such as yours, for deciding to change, then change. It's a free country. The county medical society can supply you with the names of dependable doctors in your vicinity. Or, in your case, since you have had contact with a specialist, ask him to recommend a general practitioner. If the new doctor has had your medical records or copies of your records, this will can be substantially overcome by his taking a careful history from you.

Dams Threaten Historic Sites

San Mateo (Calif) Times

Archaeology traditionally has centred so much of its attention on biblical locations in Europe and Asia, it comes as something of a shock to realize American archaeologists are racing the clock—and man-made dams—to rescue as much of North American early history as they can to preserve the early cultures of this relatively new land.

Last year the United States scarce water supplies are being replenished by water conservation projects. Dams are filling canyons with water and many of the earliest settlements are being inundated.

Archaeologists are trying to beat the water to the sites and excavate as much of the remains of early American civilization as possible, but lack of manpower and funds available damn many of the sites.

Most American early history books teach lightly, if at all, on the 10,000 years of civilization which existed on these shores before the arrival of the white man. But excavations of former Indian settlements made by archaeologists tryin to outrace the dam completes have uncovered distinct civilizations of surprising advancement.

Population explosions, the reverse of low city profits, the decimation of the bison long before the white man was here to thin its ranks, the spread, and introduction of the long house thousands of years before history records previously credited to Iroquois invention, are among (recent) findings.

America is not old enough for its inhabitants to be greatly concerned about its distant past. But if future generations are to know anything at all about what happened here before the arrival of explorers from the old world in the 15th century, the archaeological race against water takes on a critical character.

Food Costs Hit Every Home

Montreal Star

Few Canadian housewives needed that recent dispatch from Ottawa to make them aware of steadily rising food costs. The meagre, but by no more personal form, has been received each week at the check-out counter of every grocery and supermarket. Although she might not know that the all-food index was up seven points, from 128.0 to 132.2, in the past year, the shopper who pays 79 cents a pound, that milk tickets were costing a cent or two more per quart, depending on her location.

Unfortunately, neither personal experience nor the pronouncement from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics offer any clues as to where the additional outlay for the family food budget has spent on food today actually brings so many other components available. Some raw materials that tracking down the share retained by each stage of production from farm to table often becomes an almost hopeless task.

For a start, however, Canadian consumers should receive this their dietic situation is not unique. Dominant among the many factors contributing to higher food costs is the relatively sudden transformation from a world of apparent surpluses in foodstuffs to one of shortages and immediate shortages. Warnings of an impending global food crisis have been with us for more than two decades; now that crisis is at hand.

Six years ago, the Royal Commission on Price Spreads of Food and Prices published a finger at high processional costs of major food chains as a major culprit. The commission also deplored the lack of adequate information on the relationship between incomes, prices, and productivity. Noting that there was a definite correlation between prices of food and those of other commodities, the commission recommended the establishment of a permanent independent commission which would keep the whole area of food industry under review and report annually to government.

The need for such precise information is even greater today than when the commission made its report.

Strictly Personal

Kids Have More Toys Today

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

When Lewis Carroll took a trip he would stuff toys and tricks into his pockets, to amuse any children he might meet during the journey. One of these tricks was a gun made out of paper, which would crack loudly when jerked a certain way.

This was around 1880, and the children were vastly amused with such simple devices. Now consider the children of 1966, and the things that amuse (or bore) them to death.

We talk a great deal about the rising standard of living in the last half century, but we rarely appreciate that our children have enjoyed (or suffered) the same well rise.

Entertainment, which was scarce then, has become almost too bountiful. Toys have multiplied by the hundreds, not only in profusion but in kind, and also in sophistication. Children today see, hear, and share in more of the world around them every day than they did in an entire year during Lewis Carroll's lifetime.

Today, a child of 10, as I have said before, is in some ways twice as old as the children of Carroll's day. He is not older emotionally, but intellectually and socially. The movies, radio, television, all the paraphernalia of a mechanical culture, combine to give him a premature sense of size and power and a vast desire to participate in the seemingly attractive vices of his elders.

Yet a child of the age is not equipped to cope with the world on such terms, and so, while he is exposed to adult pleasures, he is still treated on the basis of his chronological age. The tensions resentments, rebellions, and strains are extreme cases, outright delinquency.

And I think that unless we take a historical perspective, we cannot understand the mounting number of "juvenile delinquency" — which is not so much a matter of "bad" kids as of agency running wild as it is of younger children growing up too fast in their own way.

Each year, younger and younger boys want the family car; each year, younger and younger girls want to use lipstick and high heels. Some parents can handle these difficulties in a satisfactory way, and others can't. Children of the latter may become delinquent in one way or another.

The problem is a deeper and broader problem than poverty or parental strictness or providing community recreation. These are all shallow and partial answers; the underlying cause is the frightful speed of technological progress, which leaves our morality lagging miles behind our mechanical skills. And we are now beginning to pay a heavy (but predictable) price.

Safeguarding the health of children by immunizing them against contagious diseases which years ago caused innumerable deaths in a community is a function of health authorities. In this district the advice takes a practical form as silly and sucessful clinics are held at the Riwanis Community Centre for pre-school age children. False Alarms Bug Firemen

It is difficult to understand why some persons are so foolish as to turn in false fire alarms. The danger should be obvious to all.

A particulary bad example occurred in Roxborough Township when the Avonmore volunteer fire department was sent out on a false alarm. Precious moments before a legitimate call was received for a barn fire in the Moose Lake area. Naturally, the department was Monkland-bound and saw the flames in time to save the structure, but the firemen could as easily have been rushing off in the opposite direction.

False alarms are bad business either in the city or the township. Charges are laid against offenders but they are seldom apprehended.

Loss of property is serious enough, but loss of life or serious injury is even more tragic. The Lord's Day Act will be increased when fire departments are lured away from their home areas by false alarms.

Time is a most important element in firefighting. A delay of only a few moments in getting to the fire scene could result in a tragedy. Thus, turning in false alarm is one of the most irresponsible and inexcusable offences that can be perpetrated.

Perhaps schoolchildren should be cautioned about the evil of arson! It is turning in false alarms. Arson is not being done in all school systems, but perhaps also should warn their children and explain to them the risks such acts involve.

Firemen, after all, risk their own lives very often in protecting the lives and property of others. The least the general public can do is spare them the unnecessary hazards of false alarms and embarrassment of rushing out to non-existent fires.

There is an old saying that

RAISIN CRUMBLE PUDDING

A forthright and clever woman of my acquaintance bluntly asked me why a food editor would put a recipe for Apple Crisp in print, adding, "Everybody knows how to make Apple Crisp. When I look at a commonplace recipe like that I immediately begin to plan what I can do to jazz it up."

I could not remember printing Apple Crisp recently so my feelings remained unruffled but I did borrow her idea.

Raisins are such a good staple and double as a goodie for the children that most provident have them on hand.

Here is a recipe that will get you over the dessert hump for at least one dinner.

RAISIN CRUMBLE PUDDING
(serves 6 to 8):

Crumble:

1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. single-acting baking powder
½ tsp. salt
¾ cup granulated sugar
½ cup brown sugar, packed
2/3 cup cold butter or margarine
1 egg yolk
1 tbsp. milk
1 tsp. vanilla

these crumbs. Add egg yolk, milk and vanilla to remainder, blending until you have a moist mixture. Pat evenly into ungreased 8" or 9" pan. Cover evenly with raisin filling. Mix walnuts with reserved crumbs and sprinkle and pat over top. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 30 min. or until gold-tinged around edges and on top.

This of course may be served warm with pouring cream or do as we did — serve it at room temperature with a scoop of orange sherbet on top of each serving.

Filling:

1¾ cups raisins
¼ cup granulated sugar
2 tbsps. cornstarch
¼ tsp. salt
1¼ cups hot water
2 tbsps. lemon juice
¼ cup chopped walnuts

First make Raisin Filling: Mix together dry the raisins, sugar, cornstarch and salt. Stir in the hot water and cook, stirring, until thick and clear. Remove from heat and stir in lemon juice.

Now make the Crumble part by sifting the flour with the baking powder and salt into mixing bowl. Add the sugars. Cut in the butter or margarine with a pastry blender until crumbly and size of peas. Measure out and set aside 1 cup of Raisins are a staple that will help you prepare an easy and quick dessert for your current dinner. Try the recommended Raisin Crumble Pudding Mary Moore gives you today.

Girl Can Join Mounties But Not as Constable

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP)—A girl can join the Mounties—after a fashion. Women have been civilian members of the force since 1950.

You don't see them patrolling highways, in the musical ride or posing for tourists on Parliament Hill, though. In fact, you don't see them at all, because they are peering at fingerprints, scanning menu sheets or forging language dictionaries.

They are the technicians, dietitians and translators who work behind the scenes.

About 100 women now qualify as civilian members. Women doing the same work more than six years ago were called civil servants, employed civilians and special constables.

Most of the RCMP women work in the mountainous grey headquarters building in suburban Ottawa, but matrons and nurses are hired locally at needed at stations across the country.

Women civilian members operate under the same rules as regular members. They require authority to take leave and are on 24-hour alert but they are never called on for actual police duty.

They are subject to rigid requirements of character and ability and must keep the details of their work in strictest confidence.

WAR LIFTED BARRIERS

The first female breakthrough was in 1942 when the Second World War moved a lot of women into man-made jobs. One of the women originally hired is still with the force. She is Helen Foster, a brunette blue-eyed technician in the fingerprint section of the identification branch.

Anyone who has ever been arrested in Canada for an indictable offence has his fingerprints on file there, and that makes almost 800,000 prints. The record is kept until the person dies or becomes aged and criminally inactive.

Fingerprints received are checked for a previous record in the name index, and if nothing shows there, through the master fingerprint collection. Any information on file is sent to the inquiring police department.

If there is no record the prints are added to the master collection. More than half of the 62 civilian members in the section are men, and work is supervised and checked by 15 regular RCMP officers.

PROVIDES HEALTHY DIET

Training technicians in the intricacies of fingerprint classification takes six weeks, but Mrs. Foster says "they are not really any good to us for about a year." The main appeal of the section's work, she says, is that "there's something new every day."

Perhaps the most important woman with the force is Miss N. M. Allree, senior messing officer since 1947. She's at least partly responsible for the traditional square - jawed, lean Mountie silhouette.

The head of a staff of six dietitians across the country, she says Mounties are "healthy men, and we try to keep them that way." They like a man-sized meal, "meat, potatoes, vegetables, salad and apple pie," but they don't go over board.

"They are interested in keeping an ideal weight."

Every year she tours some of the RCMP establishments, and last year her tour took her to the Arctic.

She says prospective dietitians with the force should have freedom to travel and preferably some experience, as well as a university degree in home economics or food science, and one year's dietetic internship.

LIFE IN A SETTLER'S CABIN — Mr. and Mrs. Bob Phillips stand in the doorway of a genuine settler's cabin which they rebuilt on a cottage site about 10 miles from Ottawa on the Gatineau River. Re-build Cabin On 11-Acre Lot Overlooking Gatineau River

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP)—Scratch the quarter between the logs in a pioneer's cabin and you should find some horsehair.

But because horses are scarce, the settler's cabin rebuilt by an Ottawa couple has four-free walls.

That's about the only concession to the space age Bob and Mary Anne Phillips have made though. The furniture from friends' attics or thrift shops is all at least 100 years old. A black iron Franklin stove takes the chill off evenings and running water is courtesy of a hand pump connected to a rainwater tank.

"Sometimes we even make our own candles," says Mr. Phillips, 44, the tall, blue-eyed director of the special planning branch of the privy council. He and some friends rebuilt the cabin on his 11-acre plot of rocks and trees overlooking the Gatineau River.

The Phillips already had a cottage on the property about 10 miles north of Ottawa. About a year ago, their interest in Canadiana found a focus in the cabin project and they advertised and found the one they wanted on a farm about 40 miles away.

"No one had lived in it since the 1920s," says dark-haired, brown-eyed Mrs. Phillips, 43.

"The windows and doors were pretty well shot, and the floor was rotten because it had been built right on the ground.

"The owner was delighted that we wanted the cabin, because his great - grandparents had built it, and his grandfather had been born there."

OLD LUMBER ADDED

With the help of their children, Margaret, 17, Brigid, 13, and Jennifer, 12, they numbered "every splinter," tore it down and loaded the logs for a trailer trip to the new site.

A demolition project in downtown Ottawa provided century-old lumber for the new front and side Dutch doors, and wide boards for the ground and loft floors.

Little paint was needed—ever the furniture has been restored to its natural pine finish. Mrs. Phillips' mother wove the grey and blue window curtains, and is teaching the girls to use the cabin's spinning wheel.

Several friends of the Phillips have followed their lead and settler's cabins are going up on the summer properties of Parliament Hiller Fraser and Robert George of external affairs.

"We're delighted, because otherwise these pioneers' homes would just get decayed or burned," says Mrs. Phillips.

And the Ottawa Valley is a wonderful place to find them. Interest hasn't been as high here as in southern Ontario, so the furniture isn't as expensive."

Mr. Phillips, in the process of rebuilding a second smaller cabin, is just as pleased with his construction job.

"They cost no more than the same amount of space in a modern cabin. And with a cement foundation and wood preservative, we figure they'll last another hundred years."

Women's Institutes

RIVER VALLEY W. I.

RIVER VALLEY — On Thursday, September 1, Mrs. Ross Bush was hostess for the regular meeting of River Valley Women' Institute. Mrs. Glenn Bush presided and Mrs. Ernest Carr reported on the correspondence.

Mrs. Vernon Harry, Mrs. Norman Rosebush and Mrs. Jack Bush gave reports. Mrs. Glenn Bush was appointed a delegate to the Trent Valley Convention in Peterborough and Mrs. Ernest Carr is alternate.

Mrs. Roy Tucker convened the program and read a poem on agriculture. Mrs. Alex Bush gave the motto and Mrs. Harry Morrow conducted a sing-song.

A short playette, entitled "Country Fair", was both interesting and humorous. The cast included Mrs. H. Morrow, Mrs. J. Donohoe, Mrs. Vernon Harry, Mrs. Ernest Carr, Mrs. Philip Cooley, Mrs. Norman Rosebush, Mrs. Roy Bush, Mrs. Stanley Irvin and Miss Joyce Carr.

A display of aprons was shown and a prize awarded for patched overalls. A jumbled word contest on industry closed the program.

The next meeting will be held on October 6 at the home of Mrs. Roy Tucker and a silent auction for A.C.W.W. will be conducted in November.

Successful Living

Adopting Older Child Takes Special Talents

DEAR DORIS: You say there is a need for parents to adopt older children. We think we would like a school age child but are wondering what the problems would be and whether we would be able to handle them.

Can you give us any idea of the sort of child who is being successfully placed for adoption? — DICK AND DORA.

DEAR D. AND D.: Here are some recent cases.

(1) Bob, age 2. Half-Chinese boy; placed with white family, quite successfully. Now asking for a baby sister, preferably part Indian.

(2) Jim, age 10. Had been emotionally disturbed, and was in treatment centre. Father and stepmother agreed with worker that he would never do well at home, so he was made a permanent ward. On discharge from centre, he was placed on adoption with a couple in another city who had been foster girls. Arrangements is working out well.

(3) Jack and Bill, brothers four and six. Placed together with a family 200 miles away. This required much travelling for the adoptive parents, as older children need preliminary introductions and gradual development of friendship with new parents.

(4) Five colored children, ages three months to two years, have been placed for adoption in the past year by this agency, four with white families and one with colored family.

The child care agency where you are will explore with you the type of adoption you would find mutually satisfying.

DEAR DORIS: Is it part of being a good in-law to just never want to talk to one's married son alone? My boy and I were such good pals before he married. I was a widow and he and I used to plan together about running the house and helping the younger ones.

I do miss our talks, but my new daughter-in-law is always in the same room with us, whenever he comes to see me, or I go there. — MORE ALONE THAN EVER.

DEAR MORE ALONE: Can't you see how you can keep from wanting to be alone? Stop it yourself, now! Yet he does belong to her, now, and it's a rare D.I.L. who has the poise to retire from the scene or seat her husband off on a walk with his mother.

I'd suggest you work at cementing good relations with her. When babies start coming and M.I.L. is needed, both parents will be consulting with you if you show a discrete amount of interest.

DEAR DORIS: R has been brought to my attention there is a leaflet available called "Refrigerator Housekeeping."

Enclosed is the necessary plus postage. Maybe I can pick up a few pointers that could be applied to my good restaurant. — DRIVE-IN MANAGER.

DEAR D.I. MANAGER: It is on its way. The suggestions offered are designed for a home refrigerator by a home economist; it does seem clean-way perishables, defrosting, when to throw out stale foods and leftovers and why.

I expect an alert restaurateur who takes a pride in serving good food could shake his own operations against these pointers.

DEAR DORIS: Tape recordings are opening up a new world. Recently I saw a short film called "Friendship Tapes" made in Saskatchewan and showing how schools in that province are linked to schools in many lands through these taped recordings.

As in our own Exchange programs, these preparing the material to send overseas found they were learning a great deal about their own community and way of life as well as learning about life in far-away places.

Full generations the written word has helped to bridge the gap between peoples, nationalities or creating links of friendship; now a new dimension has been added. How much more of the warmth of personality can travel through the spoken word! — STELLA BELL (London, England), General Secretary, Associated Country Women of the World. (Excerpted from The Countrywoman, Sept. 1966).

DEAR MRS. BELL: Isn't it the truth! And I couldn't agree more that folks who do the taping incidentally hone up on what is going on around them; just as journalists the use get a liberal education in the very digging for answers to assorted (and how!) questions posed by my readers.

DEAR DORIS: I have a weight problem — underweight, that is! I am 17 years old, five foot three, and weigh 92 pounds (if I'm lucky.) So, as you have likely guessed, I'd like to know if there is a reliable, medically approved pill or formula to gain weight — besides eating.

I do that too — four times a day plus snacks — but still I'm all gone concerning the lean line in! I eat good, regular meals, with heavier foods at supper, as well as a fair-sized bedtime snack (and all that does is keep me awake!)

Even if there is a method of adding weight that I haven't heard of, please reply with the enclosed stamped, self-addressed envelope. — CICI.

DEAR CICI: Let's clear this first: Are you in good health? Your doctor may be able to suggest a particular reason for your slow gains. With his go-ahead, you could use the ideas in our ten-cent leaflet "Chart for Curves."

But at 17 you are doubtless putting your nourishment into growing up instead of round. And you may be so active you run it off as fast is you substitute the food.

Have you heard of relaxing?

DEAR DORIS: My husband and I are regular readers of your column and thought perhaps you could help us locate a poem. I believe it is called "I Had But Fifty Cents." — AVID READER.

* * *

DEAR AVID: I can't find it among my souvenirs. Anybody else have a clue?

* * *

(Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let Dr. Doris shed light on your particular human problem. And remember that stamped envelope!)

Most Young People in Prague Dress Well But Conservatively

By MARGARET NESS

PRAGUE (CP) — The youth look is here, too.

On central St. Wenceslas Square, which is actually a boulevard, one can see the Czech version of the Beatle haircut and the tight pants so boys and girls have clothes skirts on the girls. But it isn't a pronounced fad. Most of the young people dress well but conservatively.

The Institute of Interior and Fashion Design, the government organ to aid the home-furnishing and fashion industries, does acknowledge the influence that youth is wielding in most countries.

I and my travelling companion, Mrs. Jo Aldwinckle of the Oshawa (Ont.) Times, conferred with several members of the institute's staff. They agreed that young people want to have their own styles. The institute has been doing serious research, not only on fashions for the young, but on the psychology behind the need for self-expression in clothing.

While London and New York already have many young designers creating way-out clothes for their own age group, the institute indicated it doesn't approve of this youth revolt. Two of the directors did agree that the way-out look was infuriating their fashion. However, in a showing especially arranged for us of some of the current ready - to - wear styles, we didn't find any of the really zany clothes now prevalent even with the top Paris houses.

The styles weren't stuffy and they were extremely good. Tunics, swinging skirts, even a

Western influence in some cases, along with the saucy cap with almost an Oliver Twist look—all these were definitely designed for the young market.

But the mod fashions on the main streets did make Prague look like a city in Western Europe. It was different in Warsaw, Poland. There we could have counted on our fingers the number of really off-beat boys we saw during our week there. And you produced a long skirt.

But in both countries we found the young people most friendly. The Institute of Interior and Fashion Design kindly sent a young student of the staff to meet us at Prague airport and take us to our hotel. Helena Zlamcova was pretty, smartly dressed and spoke excellent English.

TAKEN ON TOUR

One afternoon in Prague's delightful old city hall square we shared a sidewalk cafe table with a young bearded sculptor and his wife, also a sculptor. They spoke of Little Carnaby and husband insisted on paying for our coffee and they took us off to their little car to see some of their favorite places and then back for more black coffee to their small studio apartment in the old picturesque section of the city.

By sharing a cafe table we also made friends with a young Polish couple in the lovely ancient Polish city of Krakow where Helena Rubinstein was born. Both worked from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and they suggested we meet them again the next afternoon for coffee and some sightseeing.

The husband brought his Polish-English dictionary with him. When we tried to insist on paying for the coffee this time, he looked up the word host and refused to let his wife and himself. Then he found the word guests and indicated Jo and myself.

Last Year's Game Should Be Cleared Out of Freezer

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP) — If you have any game in your freezer from last year's hunting season, it should be cleared out before anyone shoots any more.

The bag limit is actually based on the total amount of game in your possession. And although it is hardly likely the game warden is going to go looking in your freezer, it's still the law.

"Besides, it's not going to improve if you keep it any longer," says Frances MacIlquham, an expert on cooking game. "You are not embalming it for posterity."

"Meat that has been expertly dressed under ideal conditions should keep a year. But venison is lean and coarse in grain and any such meat will dry out in moisture. If it has not had a secure article wrap, chances are it has begun drying in some degree."

Mrs. MacIlquham is author of Canadian Game Cookery, a book that has gone into 14 in the writing and is due out in late October.

Elk, moose, caribou and deer are all considered venison for purposes of cooking, she says.

CUTS CONFUSING

"There is some confusion. People say, 'Here's a recipe for venison but how do I cook moose?' Actually, for cooking purposes you can include antelope, mountain goat and mountain sheep. They're ruminant and also lean and coarse compared with domestic meat.

"But hare should never be included in this class of game. Bear compares to venison as pork does to beef.

"Don't worry about what cut you have. Most game cuts are unidentifiable unless you're an expert.

"Cook them in moist heat as a pot roast, stew, pie or ground for hamburger. The chief thing is to overcome inherent dryness. Cook roasts and steaks only rare or 140, because salt will rob them of moisture."

Mrs. MacIlquham says many hunters complain that their wives won't cook game, and many wives tell her it isn't fit to be eaten.

"There is no recipe for cooking bad game meat," she says, adding that to keep it from going bad "you have to be prepared to give it the treatment it should have."

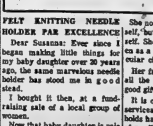
"Have it dressed and stored promptly and properly or you might as well leave it in the field."

FAVORS MEDIUM RARE

Roasts and steaks are at their best medium rare, she says.

"Thaw frozen roasts only enough for larding. Put them in a hot oven for a short time, over searing to seal in the juices, then reduce to moderate heat.

"A meat thermometer is the surest way to determine how well done it is. Follow the beef reading.



"Frozen or chilled steaks and chops should be brought to room temperature for fast, even cooking."

To make venison sausage, mix 2 lbs. of lean venison cut into strips, ½ lb. beef fat cut in strips and chilled hard, ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs, 2 grated nutmeg, 2 teaspoons salt, a pinch of saltpetre, pepper to taste, 1 lemon, ½ teaspoon sage, powdered, 1 teaspoon fine herbs, powdered.

Put venison and beef fat through a grinder using a coarse disc. Mix in other ingredients, and grind again with fine disc.

For patties, form into thin round cakes, roll in flour and fry until well browned. Serve with maple glazed fried apples.

For finger sausages, press into butcher's sausage casings, press closely so there are no air bubbles, cover and age overnight in refrigerator, then put in the column.—Susanna

FELT KNITTING NEEDLE HOLDER PAR EXCELLENCE

Dear Susanna: Ever since I began making little things for my baby daughter over 20 years ago, the same marvelous needle holder has stood me in good stead.

I bought it then, at a fund-raising sale of a local group of women.

Now that baby daughter is rais ing her own family, she has suddenly discovered this wonderfully simple way of keeping her various sizes of knitting needles neatly and safely tucked in place, yet available and visible at a glance.

She not only wants one for herself, but history is repeating itself. She is making several dozen as contributions to her particular church group sale.

Her friends tell me it also has all the desirable features of a good gift item.

It is colorful and imaginative, serviceable and practical. It holds four dozen or more pairs of needles all graded as to size, as well as tape, ruler, scissors, etc. Inexpensive, it requires two medium squares of felt (cut with pinking shears if possible), a couple of dozen fasteners, a bit of thread and glue and is not much trouble to make.

We would love to share the wealth with you Susanna, and are including the instructions which we will be delighted to have you pass on to your readers. — Mrs. R. MacDonald

Since I'm the one who's going to be doing the passing on, then I'd like to do it in style!

Not one but two we made up copies of your instructions, but we've thrown in the outline of another precious item.

It's a delicate, chintzy, wristy type, half-of-wool-blend — and feeder. Elegant in plaid taffeta, too.

. . . and you can have one with out the other — all for the price of a bazaar item idea or small hint for the column.—Susanna

TOO PRETTY TO TEACH

TOKYO (AP) — High school officials ordered teacher Michiko Tamiya, 23, to choose between her job and her title of beauty queen of Tokushima. Keeping the crown would have "an undesirable effect on the children and reflect on the school's standards of teachers," they said.

Woman Has Strange Hobby Of Hunting Rattlesnakes

CALGARY (CP) — Mrs. Joseph Bissenberg has a hobby that sets her household buzzing when she works at it.

She is a spare-time rattlesnake hunter.

"I've only been involved with snakes for three or four years but I think they're fascinating," she says.

"Most people can't stand them but I'm used to snakes, enjoy the hunt and that's the most important thing."

Mrs. Bissenberg first became interested in snakes four summers ago while visiting her father at Val Marie, Sask. A nest of snakes had been found 35 miles south of the homestead.

"So we decided to have a bash at it," she recalls.

USES FORKED STICK

She uses a forked stick and looped string to catch the reptiles. Gentle pressure with the stick behind a snake's head keeps it from biting while the string is looped around its neck to hold it fast. The snake then is placed in a sack.

"By the time the string is around the snake's neck he is in an ugly mood and must work quickly to place him in the sack," she said.

Unlike most other snake species, rattlers will not curl up in the air and try to strike at their captors, she said.

"They just sway there at the end of the string until you drop them in the bag."

Once in the bag they won't strike, either. They can't strike unless they have something firm to push against, she said.

Mrs. Bissenberg usually wears slacks and either snow boots or heavy, high boots for the hunt.

THINGS SHE'S CRAZY

What does her husband think of her hobby

"He thinks I'm crazy," she said. "My sisters have tried it and although they weren't as enthusiastic as I am, I think they enjoyed themselves. At least they aren't forever making sarcastic comments."

Mrs. Bissenberg said she does not intend to go into the snake-supplying business.

"We can't have them around the house, so to the zoos they go."

Mrs. Bissenberg gave three rattlers caught at Val Marie to the Calgary zoo.

Four Feminine Faces in New B.C. House

VICTORIA (CP) — The only woman member of the last B.C. legislature was defeated in Monday's election, but the new house will have four females faces, three of them on the Social Credit government side.

And there's a good chance that one of them will be given a cabinet post.

Lois Haggen, 47, member of the New Democratic Party and former school teacher first elected in 1956, was defeated by Agriculture Minister Frank Richter in Boundary-Similkameen riding in Monday's vote.

She was among 15 women candidates.

Those who made it at the polls, all newcomers:

Patricia Jordan, 35, a doctor's wife and mother of two sons elected in North Okanagan.

Isabel Dawson, Alberta-born mother of one son and a vice-president of the B.C. Social Credit League, who headed the poll in coastal Mackenzie riding.

Winning all over NDP homestead, lawyer Anthony Gargrave.

Grace McCarthy, mother of two and lieutenant in the Vancouver civic politics, who was chosen along with running mate Education Minister Leslie Peterson in the new twin-seat riding of Vancouver Little Mountain.

Eileen Daily, elected for the NDP in Burnaby North, beat out another woman, Social Credit Inez Whittle, and Liberal Ralph Wollosehuk.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said during the election campaign that if a Social Credit woman candidate were elected, she would be given a place in the cabinet.

Most woman member of the old, Mrs. R. Strome gave a report on the annual W. M. C. penny day held at Cobourg Camp in July.

The evening message was given by Mrs. David Strome.

Ann Landers
Rebellion at Bottom Of This Problem

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a girl, 18, brought up by cultured parents who have high morals and good taste. I have been exposed to extensive travel, fine art, music and literature.

ANN LANDERS

My father is one of this city's most prominent civic leaders.

You would think that I'd be interested in young men of similar backgrounds and interests, but I'm not. For some strange reason, I am drawn to crude roughnecks — boys with backgrounds very different from mine.

I am in college now and have been a couple of times before. I would be ashamed to have my parents meet any one of them. They would have had a fit and maybe I have. Why am I attracted to the unpolished types — fellows who are poor marriage material? Straighten me out . . . PLEASE !!! — CONCERNED ABOUT THE FUTURE.

DEAR CONCERNED: When a girl is attracted to young men she'd be ashamed to introduce to her parents, it strongly suggests she is rebelling like a pouting child. This is probably a phase that will pass. (Soon, I hope.)

You write like a girl whose thinking is fairly solid — on the conscious level, that is. Keep your wits about you, Toots, and don't go off your rocker and marry one of those birds.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have a problem. It is called exaggeration. When "Los Angeles Heartache" complained about her daughter-in-law's dirty house you replied, "If all the women who wrote to me on this subject were lined up they would reach from Anchorage to Amarillo."

The distance from Anchorage to Amarillo is approximately 2,400 miles. If you allowed six feet of space for each complaining woman 2,376,000 women could fit into that space very nicely.

Will you take twenty lashes with your old typewriter ribbon — so I gargle my garters! — D.D. OF MILES CITY.

DEAR D.D.: I just put in a new typewriter ribbon so I'm going to try my darndest to weasel out of the punishment. (If there's anything I hate it's ink on my back.)

I figure that for every woman who writes about a problem there are about a thousand who have it but don't write. Since you apparently are good with figures than I am please let me know if this gets me off the hook — somewhat.

P.S.: If I am guilty of overstating the case you are equally guilty of understating it. I just learned that the distance between Anchorage and Amarillo is 3,496 miles ! ! !

So go ahead and gargle your garters, Bub.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I have been married for six years. We have no children. I went to a very fine doctor last week and he told me I'd have to have surgery if I wanted to have a family.

My husband says I should go to another doctor and not tell him about my first doctor's diagnosis. Would this be ethical? I don't want to make an enemy of the first doctor if the word should get back to him. What is your advice? — MONTEREY.

DEAR MONTEREY: Most physicians have no objections if a patient seeks the opinion of another physician. By all means go to one or even two others. This is not unethical behavior. It is prudent.

TRUDY

"You're in for a nice, quiet evening—Mom got all talked out at her ladies' club meeting this afternoon."

Bringing Up Baby

MAITA COLLECTED by MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 3

The undefined status of a toddler presents some problems to the mother. Neither all baby nor fully developed child, he needs more attention than the stay-put baby. Since he tries more things, there are bound to be more frustrations. Then too, the pressure to learn good behavior, plus the need to assert himself, make the toddler a bit unruly. Ways to meet these normal "growing pains":

▸ Extra tenderness to offset frustrations . . . extra patience at seeming perversity . . . extra guidance in all phases of development.

New and appetizing, too. Gerber Junior Apricots is made to tickle a toddler's fancy. Filled with flavour, it is ready and waiting to be happily enjoyed.

Nursery cue for you-know-who. A plastic plastic ice cream container, covered with gay wallpaper or contact paper, makes a nice waste-basket for the nursery. Good way to help teach your toddler to pick up scraps after a round of paper-playing.

Appetite delights for busy sprites. Year-olds' appetites may lag a bit, but primary business is the growth rate slows down. Easy way to continued meal-appeal . . . serve Gerber Junior Foods and serve 'em a goodly variety. Their extra-special goodness stems from the fact that they're "custom-cooked" to help preserve nourishing food values and natural colours and flavours. Seasoning is added with a knowing hand to suit a toddler's taste.

Winning combinations for active toddlers: Gerber Junior Dinners. Their special "zea-scrole" dishes are especially delicious because they combine vegetables, cereal and meat for flavour to spare. There are such extra-special delectables as Chicken Noodle with Vegetables and Spaghetti with Tomato Sauce and Beef. And these are just two of thirteen good-tasting Gerber choices. National Research Council Fifty Years Old This Month

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP)—The National Research Council celebrates its 50th anniversary this month, working harder than ever though two of its wartime offspring have grown up and assumed part of the load.

The council's first half century hasn't been easy. Its early growth was stunted by the Depression, then it had to mushroom almost overnight to handle a vital military role in the Second World War.

The council's two biggest wartime projects — development of weapons and defence tools such as radar, and early work in atomic energy—now have separated and stand alone in their respective fields as the hive that eventually operates on its own."

Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. "We're something like a beehive," says Dr. Kenneth Frank. Jin Tupper who first joined NRC in 1939 and returned in 1966 after a 16-year absence to become its vice-president for applied science.

"Every so often we send out a queen bee to spawn another

The giant research centre which now has almost 3,000 employees, two-thirds of them scientific and technical staff, has come a long way since the federal government established an in-house council to co-ordinate and promote scientific and industrial research in Canada late in 1925.

The council quickly discovered it had little to co-ordinate; industrial and university research was practically non-existent.

First step to remedy the situation was a system of grants and scholarships to help university professors stimulate research projects and to assist students in post-graduate work.

This was a $37,000 project in 1937 but it grew rapidly, climbing to $300,000 in 1939 and $21,900,000 in the 1965-66 fiscal year. There was an additional $12,000,000 provided in subventions in 1965-66 in grants from the Medical Research Council, an autonomous unit responsible for policy in medical research and established within NRC's administrative framework in 1960.

Once research projects were stimulated, the council then established associate committees, bringing together experts in particular fields to give guidance and advice in the solution of research problems.

Today there are some 40 associate committees, co-ordinating research programs in fields such as water pollution, plant breeding, dental research and space research.

The council's next step was to obtain its own laboratories and in 1930 it took over the top two floors of the five-storey Bryson building on Queen Street in downtown Ottawa. The building was demolished early this year to make way for an office building-hotel complex.

BUILT WIND TUNNEL

In 1938 NRC got a second laboratory in an old lumber mill where Canada's first major wind tunnel was constructed — a nine-foot tunnel that cost about $125,000 and remained in use throughout the Second World War.

The council expanded again in 1952 with completion of its central laboratory on Sussex Street, on the bank of the Ottawa River. But the Depression revealed any further projects until the war when the council spread into its present 400-acre site on the eastern outskirts of Ottawa.

Wartime expansion was not limited to Ottawa. By the end of the war NRC's tenfold expansion involved 21 new laboratories from Halifax to Vancouver.

The expected industrial reaction failed to materialize after the war and the reorganized NRC expanded with the country.

The council's largest wartime undertaking, the top - secret atomic energy project which started in Ottawa and Montreal before moving to Chalk River, put its first nuclear reactor into operation in 1945. The project grew so rapidly as it explored peaceful uses of nuclear power that became a separate Crown corporation in 1952.

ZEEP STILL USED

The first reactor, ZEEP (Zero Energy Experimental Pile, is still in use although it now is dwarfed by its more sophisticated siblings at Chalk River and Whiteshell, Man., and giant reactors in the nuclear power stations at Pickering and Douglas Point in Ontario.

The council has moved into new fields.

It started this year by taking over as manager of one of the Churchill Research Range, a sprawling rocket-launching site on Fort Churchill, Man., on the west shore of Hudson Bay. The station previously had been operated jointly by the Defence Research Board and the U.S. Air Force Office of Aerospace Research.

Workmen now are putting the finishing touches on the Algonquin Radio Observatory where a giant 150-foot radio telescope soon will begin probing the heavens for radio signals from stars so distant they cannot be seen even with the aid of powerful optical telescopes.

The observatory is nestled in a quiet corner of Ontario's Algonquin Park, relatively close to the Ottawa laboratories but far enough away from populated areas and their source of electrical interference.

Another new division dealing with radiation biology is being organized to study the effect of radiation on living things, including people, a project that will grow in importance as industry finds new uses for radioactive materials.

The council also is helping industry develop and expand its own research capabilities. A program initiated in 1963—whereby the council pays salaries of new research teams in companies where none previously existed or for new research workers added to staffs —generated a $44,000,000 research effort of combined government and industry funding.

The $1,000,000 budget for this project in 1962 has grown to $4,500,000 and covers all commercial research outside the defence industry. But the expansion has been so successful that a shortage of senior staff has kept actual expenditure below the budgeted amounts.

NRC's initial role of advising the government has changed during its 50 years of operation and last spring Prime Minister Pearson established a new 28-member Science Council of Canada to advise the government on science policy.

But NRC will retain a strong voice in the council. NRC's president, Dr. E. G. Ballard, has been named to the new body.

NRC's anniversary ceremonies Sept. 26-28 will be relatively quiet. Governor-General Vanier will launch the three-day event and Mr. Pearson will speak at the closing banquet. In between, 2,000 scientists from across the world will gather for a series of scientific lectures.

WAGE ADVANCES OVERTAKE PRODUCTIVITY

—The index of wage increase is climbing faster than the production increases index in Canada and now they are within one percentage point of being equal, based on a 1961 level putting both indexes at 100. From 1961 until 1964, industrial productivity increased at a faster pace than wages and salaries until in 1964 productivity was 3.8 index points higher. Since 1964, wages have moved ahead faster, and in the first three months of 1966 the wage index was at 145.6. Productivity was 145.7. It means that the production returns on wages and salaries are now about the same as they were five years ago at the start of the current boom period. Economists believe the wage index acceleration will be even greater as new contracts won in the last five months show up in the figures. (Newsmap)

Church Elders Defended by General Council

By NEIL LOUTTIT

WATERLOO (CP) — The general council of the United Church, spurred by former moderator Very Rev. E. M. Howse, Tuesday came to the defence of church elders who were criticized in a report from the committee on Christian faith.

The council did not accept the report and referred it to presbyteries, conferences and congregations for further study, to be brought back to council at a later date.

The report said elders were not fulfilling their roles. It also recommended the term "ordination" not be applied to the service which makes a layman an elder.

Dr. Howse led the attack on the report and termed the recommendation of cutting out ordination as a "retro-step."

"It suggests that we must not waste the term 'ordained' on those scientists from across the world will gather for a series of scientific lectures.

SEES CHAOS

The former moderator said such a change would create chaos when seeking union with the Anglican Church. He indicated ordained elders would be a significant contribution to a new United - Anglican Church.

Elders in the United Church oversee the spiritual life of the congregation, while stewards are responsible for the financial aspect of the church.

The report criticized poor communication between ministers, elders and congregations. It also urged that more women should be elders of the church, despite a survey that revealed four out of five churches have women elders.

FOUNDER'S TOMB — The tomb of El Mahdi is venerated by Sudanese and once was a place of pilgrimage for Moslems from as far away as central Asia. The Mahdi — Moslem Messiah — was a tribal leader who founded the Ansar sect and led a revolt against Anglo-Egyptian rule in 1881, besieging and finally killing British General Charles Gordon at Kartoum in 1885. Lord Kitchener avenged Gordon at Omdurman 13 years later with an army that included Winston Churchill. Mahdi's body was removed from the tomb, beheaded and thrown into the Nile. (CP Photo)

Gentle Manner of Sudanese Masks Penchant for Quarrels

A Canadian Press reporter travelling in Sudan finds a deceptiveness in the gentle manner of the people of the African country. He describes how it masks the violence that has split the nation in the last decade.

By CARL WOLLINS

KHARTOUM (CP) — Sudan seems to mimic the contrasting behavior of the two rivers that join to form the mighty Nile at Khartoum—the quiet White Nile and the erratic Blue.

The resulting split personality shown in the gentle reserve of the Sudanese manner and a simultaneous capacity for destructive argument that has caused chronic civil war, periodic revolution and continuous political dispute.

Khartoum, where the rivers merge for the 1,000-mile run to the Mediterranean, has a tidy, sedate air that is rare in the cities of northeastern Africa.

Dark-skinned Arabs in neat white turbans conduct their central market in a subdued atmosphere that lacks the clatter customary in Arab commerce. The people are polite, friendly. Few and Sudanese motorists, unlike their hero-happy counterparts in neighboring countries, are models of courteous restraint.

But the tree-ringed desert capital and its starker Nile-side neighbors of Omdurman and North Khartoum have witnessed gory massacres in the past, riot and revolution recently. Political bickering has produced more than 100 ministerial changes in a decade of both military and civil governments.

RULED BY BRITISH

It was here that the Mahdi, the self-proclaimed Moslem messiah whose great-great-grandson became Sudan's prime minister at the end of July, slaughtered British and Egyptian intruders led by Maj.-Gen. Charles Gordon in 1885. Thirteen years later Lord Kitchener, with the young lancer Winston Churchill in his army, avenged Gordon Pasha by massacring the Mahdi's successors at Omdurman and established a British hegemony over the Sudan that lasted 57 years.

Since the British departed and Egyptian ambition was turned aside by Sudanese nationalism, the Sudan republic has experienced two revolutions and debilitating civil war — a separatist rebellion by the non-Moslem Negro people in the three southern provinces that has persisted since Sudanese independence Jan. 1, 1956.

Perhaps it is the quiet, White Nile current in Sudanese behavior that has kept the world from paying more than perfunctory attention to the Blue Nile turbulence in Sudan. This country has experienced the tribalism, civil unrest, political instability and Essi-West pressures that have afflicted other newly-independent African states, but without the accompanying scurry of peace missions, aid officials and anxious envoys that have attended comparable events elsewhere on the continent.

Sudan, after all, is Africa's biggest country, with almost 1,000,000 square miles of varied territory, the sixth most populous with about 12,000,000 people. It spans the Sahara wastes of the north and the fertile tropics of central Africa.

Sudan was the first of 32 African states to achieve independence in the last 11 years, although that distinction is usually claimed by Ghana, which was 15 months later than Sudan in gaining autonomy.

RULED BY ARMY

The country was taken over by the army in 1958 and tried a return to democracy in a student uprising of October, 1964. But it still lacks a permanent constitution. Islamic, tribal and British-style laws compete. Only six of the nine provinces are represented in the constituent assembly. Party distinctions are drawn on religious, sectarian or regional lines rather than on policy or doctrine.

The Congo-style secessionist struggle involving one-quarter of the country has been waged until recently in virtual privacy, despite its heavy cost in lives and suffering.

The Khartoum government now admits its "administrative errors" and is feeling its way towards a settlement. But some authorities estimate that up to 1,000,000 pagan or Christian southerners—wary of government by the descendants of Arab slavers in the north—have been killed or driven into Uganda, Kenya and former Belgian Congo in a war between 15,000 northern troops and perhaps 5,000 Anya Nya guerrillas, the "poison insect" fighters of the bush.

The outside world has treated Sudan's problems more casually than those of almost any other African country. The United States, for example, has directed less than $100,000,000 of its foreign aid to help the republic out of its troubles while pouring more than $3,000,000,000 into the United Arab Republic with slight diplomatic return.

The reason may be that difficulties seem less urgent in a country where trouble wears a deceptive overlay of polite restraint, where leaders of the ousted military dictatorship are allowed to live in unpunished retirement and new leaders are beginning at least to talk quietly and earnestly about reform and a settlement with the southern separatists.

Tomorrow: A rickety bridge between Arab and Negro.

Red Guards Fought by 100,000

By RENE-GEORGES ENAGAKI

TOKYO (AP) — China's Red Guards are meeting stiff resistance as they push the cultural revolution from Peking into the countryside, Japanese correspondents reported yesterday.

They reported that a crowd of 100,000 battled the youthful guards at Kweilin in southern China when the reformers demanded the resignation of the city's mayor and that army troops were called in to restore order.

In another development, Peking's official New China news agency indicated that Premier Chou En-lai has been removed from his post as vice-chairman of the Chinese Communist party. However, he apparently retained the premiership.

The Japanese correspondents reported from Peking that the clash at Kweilin, a city some 300 miles northwest of Canton, was one of several in a number of cities involving the Red Guards and local peasants and laborers.

ADMITS MISTAKES

The Peking People's Daily said the students have made "certain mistakes," but added "no matter what the pretext, fighting between the students and farmers and laborers must not be permitted."

The reports of violence indicated that official advice in the People's Daily urging the Red Guards to stop using force and asking others to accept the cultural revolution was not taking effect.

Mrs. H. C. File — Phone 354-4896

Mr., Mrs. H. A. Oliver Wed Sixty Years

NAPANEE — Surrounded by neighbors, friends and relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Harold (Harry) Oliver celebrated 60 years of marriage at their home on the Deseronto Road, Monday, September 12. Both are well and active.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver were "At Home" officially from two to four in the afternoon and from seven to ten in the evening, but in reality there was open house all day.

Highlight of the day was a cablegram from Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II, to offer her felicitations on this special day. Greetings came, also, from Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, John Diefenbaker, Douglas Aikenhead, M.P. for Prince Edward Lennox and from Premier Roberts. A plaque from the Ontario Government was brought to them personally by Norris Whitney, member of the Legislature for the riding, and Mrs. Whitney, who called Saturday because they could not be present Monday. Cards, letters, and messages offering congratulations and wishing them well came in large numbers, and many flowers.

Ethel Joyce was not quite 17 years old when she left the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Joyce on the old "Madole" farm on the Deseronto Road, to drive to the Methodist parsonage in Deseronto to be married to her neighbor, Harry Oliver. The minister was the Rev. A. J. H. Strike.

There was no honeymoon trip, except the trip from the parsonage to her husband's home a few rods away from her own. "I have been here ever since", Mrs. Oliver states, "but there have been many honeymoon trips since then".

Mr. Oliver, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Allan Oliver, is the last survivor of a family of five boys. He was born in the house where he still lives. Mrs. Oliver has one sister, Pearl now Mrs. Frank Heindl of Rochester. They have one son, Morley, of the Empey Hill district, and two grandsons.

The house was gay with a profusion of gift flowers. Pouring tea in the afternoon were Mrs. Heindl and Mrs. Gladys Gould of Deseronto, and in the evening, Mrs. Heindl and Mrs. Roy Rourke of Napanee. Daughter-in-law Mrs. Morley Oliver was in charge of the guest book.

Mrs. Oliver is a member of the Grand View Women's Institute, a director of the Napanee Fair Board, and a member of the Rebekahs, the Queen of Sheba Lodge, number 259. She was a member of the Eastern Star Lodge in Napanee for over 30 years. Mr. Oliver is a past master of Craig Lodge, number AF and AM 401, and has his 50 - year jewel. He also belongs to the I.O.O.F. Lodge in Deseronto. He was a member of the Richmond Township Council for 12 years, and reeve for one term. They are members of St. Mark's Anglican Church, Deseronto.

South Africa Likened to Pre-war Reich

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) Pastor Martin Niemoeller of West Germany said here Monday night that South Africa now stands where Nazi Germany was before the Second World War.

But he said race tensions were less threatening here than in the United States.

The controversial Lutheran pastor, who spent eight years in jails and concentration camps for his opposition to Nazism, told a public meeting that in four weeks in South Africa he found the country "does not look beyond its frontiers."

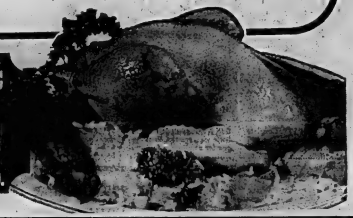
"It is 30 years backward and stands where we were before the war," he said.

But he said he found no hatred among non-whites here. He added he found more hatred in the United States where, he said, the racial situation was more threatening than in South Africa.

Pastor Neimoeller, whose visa application was delayed 24 months before being approved, is on a study tour organized by the South-racial Christian Institute.

The 74-year-old pastor has spurred controversy in post-war Germany by opposing its rearmament and advocating reconciliation with eastern Europe.

DISLIKES GRANT POLICY



OTTAWA (CP)—Gideon Rosenbluth, president of the Canadian Association of University Teachers, says the government's decision to reduce increases in research grants is "a rash decision." In a statement Tuesday, the president of the 9,000-member organization said the reduction would be "a serious blow to our scientific, social and cultural development."

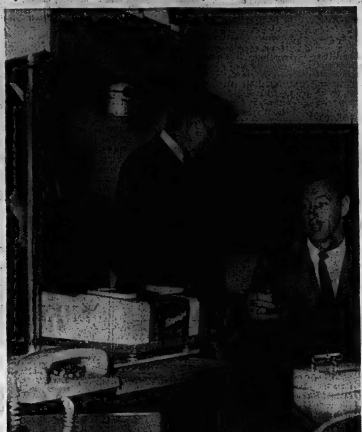
Bell Engineering School Here Trains 2,000 Students a Year



Bell Telephone's Engineering School here pumps around $400,000 annually into Belleville's economy, the city council learned yesterday afternoon. Mayor Jack Ellis, several aldermen, Chamber of Commerce Manager O. F. "Brad" Bradley, and news representatives gained this information on a tour of Bell's school and at a luncheon at which the hosts were local Bell manager Charles Buckley and other executives.

First stage in the visit to the engineering school, 214 Pinnacle Street, was an introductory lecture by Roger Harvey, staff engineer-training. Mr. Harvey explained the purpose of the facility as the development of personnel capable of engineering the most economical plant, based on the best possible design and meeting service requirements. Students in the courses, most of which last one week, are drawn from Bell Canada, other Canadian telephone companies, Northern Electric and from various foreign countries.

The 2,000 students registered this year took 37 courses in technical, economic, and management training. Computer training is playing an increasingly larger role in the school's operations and the company plans the establishment of an interdepartmental data training centre here in the near future.

During yesterday's tour the visitors were given a demonstration of the Visual Electronic Recorder Blackboard, usually shortened to VERB. This communication device transmits the handwriting of the operator in one location to an instrument which duplicates it in another location. The speed of the handwriting is projected onto a screen which constitutes the "remote blackboard." Mr. Harvey contacted Dr. Blatchford of the Engineering Department at Queen's University who solved several problems for the Belleville audience while carrying on conversation with Mayor Ellis.

Bell Canada justifies the expense of the engineering school by theorizing that if the engineers can do a 5 percent better job after taking the course then their companies will realize savings of $30 million on the $600 million worth of capital expenditures for which these men are responsible annually.

Doctor Pulled Wrong Teeth Of Patient

OTTAWA (CP) — That Canadian doctors are human is shown by the physician who "out the goodness of his heart" agreed to extract some of a patient's teeth but pulled out the wrong ones.

Cost of this case, one of three "wrong side" operations reported in the Canadian Medical Protective Association's 1965 annual report, was $3,075 in settlement.

"For these mistakes there simply is no excuse," the report says.

"Doctors should make notes and having made them should consult them so they know the side on which surgery is to be done.

"They should not be tempted to operate on one or other side simply because an intern or a nurse happens to have prepared that side for operation."

The two other cases—an operation on the wrong knee and a hemiotomy on the wrong side—also ended in small settlements.

The association provides its 37,000 member doctors, who pay $15 annual fee, with legal aid in medical civil cases and regularly informs them of the risks involved in certain medical practices.

The report said that member doctors last year received 61 writs and 311 threats of legal action. Four of seven lost cases are being appealed. 17 court cases were dismissed or discontinued and there were 12 settlements.

The judgments cost a total of $230,950, settlements $101,549.

The report regrets that foreign matter, such as instruments, continues to be mislaid. Three cases, all reported in the same night, were settled for $2,400, $785 and $5,300. Court costs in one of them totalled $14,286.

WILL OPPOSE GIVENS

TORONTO (CP) — Controller William Archer Tuesday announced he would oppose Mayor Philip Givens in municipal elections Dec. 4.

Will Separate Siamese Twins By Operation

TORONTO (CP) — Plans for surgical separation of the McGee Siamese twins are going ahead despite a condition that is "a major threat to a successful operation," the Hospital for Sick Children said in a statement Tuesday.

The date for the operation, to be performed by a team of 24 doctors under Dr. James Simpson, will be announced Thursday.

The operation, originally set for mid-September, may be delayed due to the position of the twins' hearts.

"A condition that originally looked correctable may be insurmountable at the time of the operation," the statement said.

The hospital said the doctors have been in communication with Dr. Eardley S. Allin of Edmonton who operated on a set of Siamese twins in 1950. Those twins had an anatomical arrangement of their hearts similar to that of the McGee twins.

HEARTS DIDN'T FIT

Dr. Allin found that when the twins were separated, their individual hearts protruded outside the chest cavity for 2½ inches. The twins did not survive the operations.

"Early in the investigation of the McGee twins it was established they had separated hearts that were contained in a common pericardial sac," the hospital statement said.

"These hearts, instead of lying in the normal vertical axis of the body, are placed horizontally, side by side, the bases of each baby protruding into the chest of the other."

Despite the danger of the operation to the McGee twins, neither twin will live if the operation is not attempted, the statement said.

The McGee twins, Sherry Ann and Crystal Ann, were born in Guelph on June 2 and shared a weight of nearly 13 pounds. They are joined together from chest to navel.

Viet Nam Elections Are Only Minor Step Along Road U.S. Has Chosen

WASHINGTON (CP) — The elections in South Viet Nam have been more successful than the United States evidently dared hope.

The voting turnout was comparatively high and the anti-election tactics of the Viet Cong guerrillas relatively ineffective.

But the elections represent only a minor step along the hazardous, difficult and expensive road the U.S. has chosen to follow in South Viet Nam, it is generally agreed.

The successful candidates are simply responsible for drawing up yet another national constitution—the fourth—for the battered area.

The key unknown in the situation in which Viet Nam is just a part — the 750,000,000 - man-power enigma of China—remains unchanged.

The official U.S. attitude continues to express optimism that China will continue to avoid direct armed intervention unless North Viet Nam is invaded from the north.

EDEN PESSIMISTIC

Other observers are less sanguine than the U.S.

"In the present situation in Southeast Asia, the danger of direct conflict between the U.S. and China is real," writes Sir Earl of Avon. As Sir Anthony Eden, later prime minister of Britain, he provided jointly with a Soviet counterpart over the original Geneva conference on Indochina in 1954.

"There is . . . a tendency in the Anglo-Saxon world to underestimate this danger, which will not grow less just because the war in Viet Nam makes us unpopular with it," he writes in a prelude to a 12-point peace formula.

"The reverse is nearer the truth."

Says a Canadian source with direct knowledge of the area: "It seems useless at this period to forecast just what the Chinese may do."

If the Chinese have unleashed a vastly warped ideological purity internally via the rampaging young Red Guards, he says, can it be assumed that China will continue to exercise its caution about an anti-Communist war raging on its doorstep?

MANPOWER BEACHHEAD

China is believed to have 40,000 men inside North Viet Nam now. These are labelled as labor battalions working to maintain the two railways which connect the North Vietnamese capital of Hanoi with China to the east and west.

In one sense, this force can be regarded as protecting a vital Chinese interest.

Another sense, observers note, the force can be regarded as a manpower beachhead and a precedent for any expansion China might choose to institute for military purposes.

Lord Avon's analysis, taken from his recently - published book called Toward Peace in Indochina, credits U.S. President Johnson with statesmanship so far for resisting a war psychosis now existing.

But Lord Avon says that while China likely seeks no wider war either, "neither will she flee from it so that the field of manoeuvre may not be large."

ADVERTISING WORKS

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP) — A promotional campaign through southern Saskatchewan filled eight vacancies on the Moose Jaw police department, increased staff by six men and provided a waiting-list of recruits. Police Chief M. G. Crawford said the city has not had to force recruited from small towns and rural centres.

Beer Drought May Spread In Province

TORONTO (CP)—A strike by employees of Brewers' Warehousing Co. Ltd. here may bring a beer drought to Toronto taverns and spread to other Ontario centres, a company official said Tuesday night.

"We took this battle on with the expectation that it might spread throughout the province," the spokesman said.

It was ahead of the strike, and accompanying drought, might spread via, a sympathy walkout by Brewers' Warehousing employees in other Ontario centres.

The strike has cut off supplies to licensees of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, who depend on the warehousing company for deliveries.

Private individuals, however, can continue to buy beer at certain Brewers' Retail stores while the supply lasts. In Toronto, there also may be beer at any of the five breweries which maintain home delivery services in the metropolitan area.

Brewers' Warehousing, owned by Ontario's breweries, closed its 26 of its outlets in Toronto Tuesday and maintained 19 others with supervisory personnel. The company will not move to other outlets as stocks are depleted in the 19 stories still open until the beer is gone.

HIRE TRUCKS

Hotels and other licensed outlets in Toronto hired trucks of every description Tuesday to pick up beer at the Brewers' Warehousing outlet in the city's east end. When this warehouse is emptied, supplies for the metropolitan area will have dried up.

Some outlets managed to get supplies for periods ranging between two days and three weeks.

Drivers for the breweries have refused to cross picket lines set up by warehousing employees. Both groups are members of Local 308, International Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers of America.

Union officials said the dispute stemmed from the refusal of the company to reclassify a 44-year-old employee from temporary to permanent status. A company spokesman said the company's right to set employment standards is at stake.

The company admits it has an upper age limit of 40 for placing persons on permanent staff. The spokesman says that it is made an exception for the 44-year-old employee in view of an understanding with the union on hiring practices it would lead to a precedent.

Norman Wilson, executive secretary of the provincial council of the Brewery Warehousing locals, said the union's 1,200 members are fed up with the firm's hiring practices.

3 Provinces Arrive to Find Plates Empty

OTTAWA (CP)—Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta arrived at the federal government's tax - sharing table today to find their plates still empty.

Finance Minister Sharp told them, in effect, that Ottawa has gone as far as it can in taxsharing and if they want more tax income they will have to raise it themselves.

The three have for years been the "have" provinces, with per-capita incomes and tax revenues well in excess of other seven. They are excluded from the tax equalization payments given to the others.

The "have" provinces now get 50 Ottawa 24 per cent of all personal income taxes collected within their boundaries, plus 25 per cent of corporation income tax collections and 75 per cent of succession duties.

Tendency of Provincial Govts. To Dictate to Ottawa Has Gone On Long Enough Says Gordon

CALGARY (CP) — Walter Gordon, former federal finance minister, said Tuesday night that the tendency of provincial governments to dictate to the federal government has gone on long enough.

He told a group of Young Liberals here that one of the most important things for the Liberal party is to reiterate the imperative need for strong central government in Ottawa "that is consistent in its policies and decisive in its action."

"The tendency for provincial governments to call the tune, to dictate to Ottawa has gone on long enough."

Mr. Gordon, Liberal MP for Toronto Davenport who resigned as finance minister after last fall's general election, said that at its fall policy conference the Liberal party should adopt as its objective greater Canadian control of industry and trade unions.

The party should aim at foreign control of important industries, or most of them, being acquired by 1984, to implement a recommendation by an earlier committee that Ontario institute a 15-year school system by 1970.

The committee, under J. R. Thomson, was appointed by minister of secondary education for the province, says:

"This suggested change is more easily proposed than accepted. Any reorganization of the present system which retains the elements which are considered necessary to maintain present standards and to provide for individual differences of students, will require time for planning and eventual implementation.

"However, the recommendation is under intensive study."

The disbanding of the committee means that further recommendations for making changes in Grade 13 must come from within the education department. The Ontario Teachers' Federation also is studying the matter and may establish a formal committee on the abolition question.

Education Minister William Davis said Tuesday night the Grade 13 question is still under study by his department. But further committee action would be taken and future developments would come directly from the department.

The Grade 13 study committee, which first recommended that the grade be abolished, was appointed in February, 1964, and reported in June the same year.

Abolition of Grade 13 Rejected by Committee

TORONTO (CP) — Abolition of Grade 13 has been rejected for the time being by a provincial committee appointed to do away with the grade.

The committee's final report, made public Tuesday, says "the recommendation that the 13-year program be reorganized from within the education department. The Ontario Teachers' Federation also is studying the matter and may establish a formal committee on the abolition question.

Education Minister William Davis said Tuesday night the Grade 13 question is still under study by his department. But further committee action would be taken and future developments would come directly from the department.

So s-hunting you will go.

But don't forget; a deer doesn't wear a red wool-knocker and cap to match; a bear is brown or black (there's no racial distinction here); a moose has long antlers and a humped snout, so don't get trigger-happy and blast at anything that moves in the brush.

If you're a small-game hunter carrying a dollar licence you can shoot north of Number Seven now, but don't shoot anything south of the highway until September 20th. It's agin the law. All except bear which can be shot from September 1st to January 31st on a bear-deer or bear-moose licence.

If your target for the day is rabbit, squirrel, pheasant, Hungarian partridge, grouse, raccoon, fox and migratory birds, September 24th rings up the curtain for you.

And don't forget, migratory birds include ducks, geese, woodcock, rails, coots, gallinules and Wilson's snipe. If you want target practice you can knock off blackbirds, cowbirds, crows, starlings and house sparrows. Landowners only can shoot hawks, kingfishers and owl in defence or preservation of property. The hunting, shooting and possession of any bird other than the above, is illegal.

If you're a migratory bird hunter you'll need the $2.00 permit. This includes farmers and their families who hunt these birds on their own property. And this is in addition to the small-game dollar licence.

And this is "old hat" to veteran duck-hunters and possibly news to the younger trigger-pulling nimrods.

If you've been fattening your potential dinners with special feed mentz, remember the area you've been using as free restaurants, must be clear of all feed seven days prior to the date of this open season.

If you insist on the free lunches within this period the area may be closed to hunting. The mentzies are keeping a tight eye on this procedure and the law says areas may be reopened seven days after they have been found clear of feed.

If bait is found after a second inspection or additional feed has been put in,the area will remain closed for the balance of the open season.

"Hungry" hunters are well advised to obey the legal angles of securing their quarries, and not spoil the sport not only for themselves but well-meaning hunters who act within the law and hunt for the sake of hunting and what it brings along.

Lands and Forests officials point out that one wing with all feathers must be left attached to all migratory birds and can be removed only when the bird is being prepared for immediate cooking; after the bird is taken in the residence of its owner for preservation or after the bird is depodited in a commercial preservation plant.

And in case any hunter is laboring under this illusion, it's stated, legally, that no person shall kill in one day more than his legal limit and shall not hunt after he has done so regardless of the number in his party. Possession limits shall not exceed two days' limit.

And officials warn that if you try to obtain a hunting licence by giving false information, brother, you're in trouble. If you do so, and are caught, you will be prosecuted as if you were not the holder of a licence.

As for you hunting youngsters, you may obtain a licence at the age of 15 subject to successful completion of hunter safety training and the written consent of both parents or guardian. At the age of 16 hunter safety training is still required. Non-residents, except persons from Manitoba or Saskatchewan, require a non-resident licence.

And the law says, "it is an offence under the Criminal Code of Canada to sell, barter, give, lend, transfer or deliver a fire-arm, air-gun, or air pistol or ammunition therefore to a person under 16 who does not have a valid permit in Form 45 punishable on summary conviction."

Johnson Bat Keeps Dodgers Up Top

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

It could be the World Series for Los Angeles Dodgers and city Hall for Lou Johnson all over again this year.

The two seem to go together, and the Dodgers couldn't be more pleased.

They maintained their 10½-game lead in the torrid National League pennant race Tuesday night by crushing New York Mets 8-3 behind Johnson's slugging.

The left fielder clouted two homers and drove in four runs, surpassing last year's marks that helped direct him to City Hall in Los Angeles where he received a special citation for his unexpected part in the Dodgers' successful fight for the pennant.

Johnson was called up to the Dodgers, his 18th team in professional baseball, in an emergency last season to fill the left field spot suddenly left vacant when Tommy Davis broke his right ankle May 1.

SURPASSED HOPES

The Dodgers didn't really expect much from Johnson, but he did more than most of their hitters in driving them to the Series.

He batted only .259, but many of his hits were clutch hits and he drove in 58 runs and tied Jim Lefebvre for the team lead in homers with 12.

But this year Johnson is doing even better. His performance against the Mets raised his average to .299 and vaulted him ahead of his 1965 slugging totals. He now has socked 13 homers and driven in 71 runs.

He is second in both departments only to Lefebvre, who has belted 23 homers and knocked in 72 runs.

Los Angles' two competitors also won Tuesday night, Pittsburgh Pirates remaining 1½ games back of Milwaukee Braves in the Senior Circuit.

Nip Trudeaus 6-5

'Cats Win Away From Finals

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Not a bad night's work for a fellow who wasn't even scheduled to play in the ball game!

Joe Barrows pitched and helped bat the Bobcats to a 6-5 squeaker over Trudeau Motors at Alemite Park last night, giving the Trudeaus a commanding 3-1 games lead in the four-of-seven B. and D. softball semi - final.

The clubs go back at it Thursday. Game time is 8.30, at the Alemite.

Barrows received the pitching nod when a couple of teammates took him in arriving at the park and the Bobcat management elected to play pitcher Joe Barrows in the outfield. Leahy had been slated to pitch the game.

Joe Barrows drove in two runs, with a homer and single in his first two trips to the plate. On the mound, he limited Trudeaus on three hits for six innings and stayed around until a pair of walks chased him in the ninth. He and relief man Bob Lott gave up eight hits in all.

Trudeaus jumped into a 2-0 lead in the top of the third. Baker and Marcule singled. Muirhead blasted a long fly ball for one run and Mavety singled for the second. Barrows slammed the door from then until the eighth.

He punched his homer through the hole in left-centre in the bottom of the inning for the 'Cats' initial run.

Bobcats broke away for a 6-2 lead in the fifth. Lott led off the fourth. A walk ignited the rally and Mowat's double tied it 3-2. Skerew's hit and Don LeSage's double made it 4-3 and chased loser Pat Marcule in favor of Bill Noonan Jaffe. Barrows greeted him with another run-scoring single. Two errors and Gilbert Mills by C. LeSage and Mitts helped as 11 Bobcats batted.

Jaffe pitched perfect ball after getting out of the fourth frame but the damage had been done. He and Marcule allowed eight hits, each fanning two. Marcule gave up the loss walk. On the winners' hill Barrows claimed seven strikeouts and three walks.

He tired in the eighth when Drake and Muirhead lashed singles and an error loaded the sacks. Weston and Phan hit solid fly balls to score a run each. That tightened the score to 6-4.

The losers tried again in the ninth and when Barrows walked two, after one was out, he was replaced by Lott. Muirhead singled one run home for the 6-5 score before Kerr's ball to short hit base-runner Jaffe for the game-ending out.

Terry LeSage and Barrows, each with two, Leon Mowat, Don LeSage, Paul Meraw and Billy Mitts had the Bobcat hits.

Stu Muirhead, John Baker and Larry Mavety got two each for Trudeaus. Roger Drake and Pat Marcule stroked the others.

Marciano Considering Comeback

MILAN, Italy (CP)—Rocky Marciano, former world heavyweight boxing champion, said Tuesday he has been training for the last five months for a possible return to the ring.

But the 43-year-old United States boxer added: "This possibility, however, is very faint."

Marciano, who retired undefeated from boxing 10 years ago, told reporters in this Italian city:

"I would like to resume boxing but I will only do it if I can get back into good enough physical shape after several more months of training."

Marciano came here to visit a Napoleonic charity institute at nearby Pavia.

Marciano's last fight was Sept. 21, 1956, when he knocked out Archie Moore in a title bout.

Jockey Sam McComb had his biggest day of the 1966 season, riding three winners. McComb rode Mercheval to victory in the second race, then guided Scatford Farms' Newsy to a dead-heat victory with Larkspur Lady in the third and took the fifth with Bill Beasley's Revelling.

Mercheval returned $32.80 and combined with Nurserwood, a $46.60 in the first race, for a $252 daily double.

The exactor of Royal Encounter and Bedford in the sixth was worth $80.10.

Bishop said the New Westminster team outhustled Oshawa in the game Monday which Gaels defeated 15-4. The style for New Westminster evened the best-of-seven final at one game each.

Tigers Cool Kaat To Regain Second

K.C. Nips Indians

By RON EAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Jim Kaat Tuesday missed a golden opportunity to pass Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles Dodgers for most victories in the major leagues this year. Both have 23.

A three - run homer by Willie Horton and a solo by Bill Freehan gave Detroit Tigers just enough runs to post a 6-5 triumph over Minnesota Twins and deny Kaat his 24th victory and ninth in a row.

In his last four outings, the Minnesota southpaw has surrendered six homers, but not till Tuesday did it seem to matter. The Twins always come back with at least enough runs to win, and often a lot more than enough.

They almost did it again Tuesday, too. Minnesota got three unearned runs in the second and, after Detroit had taken a 6-3 lead, Zoilo Versalles hit a three - run homer to bring Minnesota within a run.

Then in the sixth Jake Wood singled, Al Kaline walked and Horton hit his 25th homer. Freehan hit his following inning eighth.

In other American League contests, Boston Red Sox beat Chicago White Sox 10-1, Washington Senators edged New York Yankees 3-2 and Kansas City Athletics outlasted Cleveland Indians 3-1 in 15 innings. Baltimore and California were rained out.

The Detroit victory put the Tigers back in second place, 9½ games behind the Orioles, and dropped the Twins to third, 10 games out.

George Scott was the hero of the Boston rout, driving in four runs with a single and a double.

Bob Saverine hit a two-run homer, boosting the Senators past the Yanks as Phil Ortega, 11-12, went the distance. Bobby Murcer drove in a run for the Yankees with a triple and scored on a single by Joe Pepitone.

Kansas City and Cleveland were threatening to play just about forever until Roger Repoz's two-run homer in the 15th sent everybody home. Fred Whitfield's 17th homer had tied the game for Cleveland in the eighth.

Vancouver Looks To Non-Flying Scorer

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Sid Warick, Vancouvers high-flying forward in the Mann Cup series, will go to any length to avoid airplanes.

He wasnt aboard when the Vancouver club flew east for last Sunday's opener of the Canadian senior lacrosse final against Peterborough Petes. He arrived by train 30 minutes before Monday night's second game.

The best-of-seven series, tied 1-1 after Vancouver's 11-9 victory in the first game and Peterborough's 9-8 win in the second, resumes tonight at 8 p.m. EDT.

Warwick, a 26-year-old veteran of three Mann Cup finals, was shut out Monday but coach Bob Marsh feels with two days of rest he'll start scoring goals again.

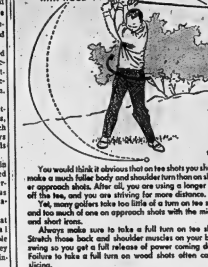
Warwick has 30 points in Mann Cup play and has scored more than 200 goals since entering senior ranks in 1961. He was Vancouver's top scorer this season.

The series is being played at the Peterborough Memorial Centre where Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League begin pre-season training Thursday.

WILL PUT DOWN FLOORS

The ice has been installed but a plywood floor will be laid down for tonight's game.

"It will definitely be to the advantage of the Vancouver club," said Peter playing coach Bob Allan. "They have played on wood floors in their league this year."



The Petes are accustomed to concrete floors.

"However, I'm not as worried about the floor as I am about the crazy efforts we've been making and the cheap penalties we take," Allan said. "If we can only stay on the floor, we'd be more successful."

Allan, a high school teacher in Peterborough, said his club misses Larry Ferguson who suffered a torn cartilage in his right knee during the Ontario Lacrosse Association semi-finals against Toronto three weeks ago.

SHORTER BACKSWING WITH IRON, LONGER WITH WOOD

You would think it obvious that on tee shots you should make a much fuller body and shoulder turn than on shorter approach shots. After all, you are using a longer club off the tee, and you are striving for more distance.

Yet, many golfers take too little of a turn on tee shots and too much of one on approach shots with the middle and short irons.

Always make sure to take a full turn on tee shots. Stretch those back and shoulder muscles on your backswing so you get a full release of power coming down. Failure to take a full turn on wood shots often causes slicing.

Then, on approach shots, where the accent is on accuracy rather than distance, take a shorter swing with less body turn. A long swing with a short club can only undermine accurate approaching.

Study the illustration showing a shorter swing with the iron and a longer swing with the wood. Then recall this picture the next time you play.

The Handguns

Frank Allis nosed out Dick Charlton for top score at the Quinte Marksmen's regular shoot last night, Allis had 252 and Charlton 250.

Don Parks had 242, Ray Read 234, and Harry Hodgkisson 213.

The annual Labatt's competition is scheduled for Sunday, September 25 and the Quinte Marksmen will be defending the title won last fall.

Blank Braves Again

Leafs Half Way Home

TORONTO (CP) — Right-hander Galen Cisco pitched a four-hit shutout to lead Toronto Maple Leafs to a 2-0 victory over Richmond Braves Tuesday night in the second game of the International League Governors' Cup final series.

Leafs now hold the best-of-seven finals 2-0 as they also shut out the Braves, on a combination by Ed Rakow, in the first game.

Cisco struck out two, walked none and gave up four singles.

The Leafs took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the fourth inning when third baseman John Ryan, a native of Oshawa, singled with one man out. Shortstop Al Lehrer then doubled, scoring Ryan.

Reg Smith completed scoring with a home run in the eighth inning. It was Smith's fifth homer in the seven played games the Leafs have played.

Cecil Upshaw, the second of three Richmond pitchers, took the loss.

The series resumes at Richmond tonight.

PROPER POSITIONING OF RIGHT HAND

In No. 1 we see a common grip fault that can only lead to inconsistent shotmaking. The golfer has gripped the club too much in the palm of his right hand, much like a baseball player would hold a bat.

In a proper grip the club should pass across the top joint of all four fingers of the right hand (No. 2). It shouldn't lay against the palm.

When the right hand is closed around the club (No. 3), the "V" between the right thumb and forefinger should point approximately at your chin.

In other words, the right hand grips the club almost entirely in the fingers. Such a grip gives you maximum "feel" and control of the club. It also places the right palm in a position that more or less parallels the face of the club. This enables you to return the clubface squarely to the ball time after time.

Million Ducks Killed By Eating Lead Pellets

By JAMES OSBORNE

OTTAWA (CP) — Shotgun pellets can be fatal to ducks even when they miss.

Expended lead shot eaten by waterfowl from lake bottoms has killed up to 1,000,000 ducks a year in North America, says Canadian Wildlife Service biologists.

Lead poisoning was estimated in the 1950s to have claimed 650,000 mallards a year. That adds up to more than produced in all Manitoba waterfowl management areas.

Most losses occur in winter, after the hunting season. Loss of 1,000,000 ducks that time of year means 1,700,000 fewer birds when the next hunting season starts, V. E. F. Solman, a wildlife service researcher, told the 1965 federal-provincial wildlife conference.

One answer is a substitute for lead pellets. Iron is similarly priced but harmful to gun barrels. Nickel is more expensive yet appears a more likely substitute, and can be obtained as a nickel refining by-product.

Solman explained the cost comparison this way:

Lead shot costs 16 cents a pound. Nickel is about $1 a pound. But the difference is less significant when compared to total hunting expenses.

A 1961 survey showed the average waterfowl hunter spent $80 a year. About $11 of that went for ammunition —about 75 shells. The amount of lead in the shells was worth about 80 cents, and nickel pellets would add $3.20. So with nickel shot the hunter would spend a total of $83.20 a year.

Teflon-coated iron shot is also being considered, as well as copper and zinc.

None of the shot substitutes is as heavy as lead, and therefore less effective. This would also mean more birds injured, and more birds lost to hunters.

Solman says he wants a shot developed that will kill ducks at a range within which the hunter is likely to recover them, and at a range within which the hunter can avoid losing crippled birds.

His said reducing lead poisoning by substitutes and reducing crippling by hunter education would be the same as increasing production of current breeding areas by several million birds.

Styling changes emphasize the lean, clean contemporary lines of popular Beaumont for 1967 exemplified by the Custom sport coupe (above). Freshly-styled features include new hood and fenders, rear panels, and new grille and headlights exclusive to Beaumont. Front and rear bumper bars have also undergone styling changes. Available in two series — Beaumont and Custom — and in nine models, Beaumont is available with many options and accessories, including front disc brakes on all power brake-equipped models. A luxury "sports option," available at extra cost on Custom Sport coupe and Custom convertible only, includes Strato bucket front seats, centre floor console with either 4-speed or automatic transmission. Engines available for Beaumont range from an Econoflame 140-hp six up to an Econo-Jet 350 hp V8. There are many new standard safety features.

Falconry Not Seasonal Recreation

AUBURN, Me. (AP)—"Falconry isn't for everyone. It isn't something you hang up on the wall until hunting season rolls around."

That's the advice Henry Davenport of Auburn, owner of a magnificent western red-tailed hawk, gives to anyone who has ideas of starting out in the unique and fascinating sport. He has had remarkable success in flying his bird, named Red, although this species is one of the least familiar to falconers, or sustringers, as the hawk enthusiasts are known.

It takes a tremendous amount of time and dedication to work with the big birds, but Davenport's efforts have paid off in a great deal of self-satisfaction. He can release Red from his arm, fly him to a perch in a tree or a rooftop, and then lure him back in a graceful low swooping flight across the field to his leather-gloved arm.

"You don't really train the bird; he trains you," Davenport said. It's only through gaining his trust and confidence that a man can work with a bird, and experience the thrill of coming so close to nature and its law of survival for the fittest.

Davenport doesn't hunt with Red because Maine's hunting laws seem to prohibit it by omission, although he hopes to get a clarification of this soon. Meantime, Red's flights are in a lure.

The western red-tailed hawk is a rodent hawk and doesn't harm chickens. Furthermore, Maine birds of prey are protected unless actually attacking poultry. Davenport hopes that the public attitude is generally changing from the old feeling that hawks should be killed in recognition of their place in the balance of nature.

Red's disposition couldn't be sweeter, despite this fierce look. Mrs. Davenport and the two Davenport youngsters, Sherryl, 4, and Henry Jr., 5, all get along wonderfully with the bird.

'The Girl From U.N.C.L.E.' Has Amusing Incidents

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—NBC spokesmanly thinks that if one show about The Man from U.N.C.L.E. is good, two will be even better if the second stars a pretty girl.

The Girl from U.N.C.L.E. made its debut Tuesday night with Stephanie Powers in the starring role.

Miss Powers plays April Dancer, which sounds more like the name of a burlesque show girl than an intrepid agent. She is backstopped by Noel Harrison, Rex's son.

At one point our heroine bung upside down over a tank of deadly piranhas. James Bond's buddy in an early Ian Fleming novel had a similar encounter but failed to escape as did Miss Dancer.

The Girl from U.N.C.L.E. didn't act like a smart agent. She was assigned to deliver a dog and his vital fleas to a Greek health officer and in the process not only lost the dog but got herself and her colleague into mess after mess.

If you enjoy the adventures of the U.N.C.L.E. men, you'll probably find this one amusing, too. Occasional Wife, a half-hour comedy that followed on the network, was one of those thoroughly artificial situations that undoubtedly will produce its own dozens more predictable situations. It is about an ambitious young executive in a company that advances only its married men. So our bachelor makes a deal with a young art student to pose as his wife.

In the show's favor are a pair of attractive young performers. Michael Callan plays the bachelor and manages to extract more humor out of the script than it deserved. Patricia Harty as the pseudo wife is cute and a good comedienne.

Canadians Spend $1 Apiece For Insurance Against Effects of Nuclear War

By CARMAN CUMMING

OTTAWA (CP)—Each year Canadians, aside from their other insurance spending, put up an average $1 apiece for insurance against the effects of nuclear war.

Of that $1, about 20 cents goes to pay for the operation of the Emergency Measures Organization, the government agency set up nine years ago to plan what to do if the worst happens.

Since civil defence is hardly a burning issue now, the agency is concentrating much of its planning and work on peacetime disasters. But its main reason for existence still is the slight but real chance that Canada could be hit by nuclear lightning.

What are Canadians getting for their dollar a year?

One thing they are not getting is guaranteed protection. No one in EMO pretends that Canada has anything but the most basic plans for dealing with nuclear disaster.

There is nothing to compare, say, with the sophisticated shelter system in Sweden. At best estimates, not one Canadian in 1,000 has fallout protection facilities available.

FOUR-POINT PROGRAM

What Canadians do get is this:

—Some advice, if they want it, on how to prepare for nuclear attack and what to do if it comes.

—Plans and facilities to keep governments going in wartime.

—Aid to provinces, and through them to municipalities, to develop disaster services.

—Training for several thousand Canadians whose position would give them special responsibilities in wartime.

"Our purpose is to have a simple, basic but complete plan for dealing with a wartime situation," says C. R. (Pat) Paiterson, director-general of EMO.

J. F. Wallace, director of program implementation, says Canadian civil defence plans are "minimal, but reasonable in the total context of modern warfare."

In peacetime disasters, such as the Manitoba flood this spring and the Ottawa bridge collapse Aug. 10, EMO workers act as co - ordinators, providing trained advice and equipment as necessary.

AVOID DUPLICATION

They take care—as they put it in peacetime—not to double up on existing services or to "provide a police force in addition to a police force."

"We're not trying to overstep provincial or municipal organizations," says Mr. Patterson.

EMO has 375 staff members and operates on a annual budget of about $10,000,000—about half the total amount of public spending on emergency measures.

Most of the appropriation goes toward contributions to provincial and municipal facilities, fire pumpers to emergency field kitchens.

Some of the equipment is stored in case of it stored in the moment, for example, 200 emergency field hospitals are stockpiled, each capable of being set up in hours into a complete 200-bed hospital.

For provincial and municipal projects with little use except in wartime, Ottawa puts up 75 per cent of the cost. The federal contribution is less if the project has a peacetime use.

In the 1966-67 fiscal year, projects worth nearly $8,000,000 were approved and the federal government put up $5,000,000 of this.

On the training side, EMO maintains the Canadian Emergency Measures College at Arnprior, Ont., which offers more than 30 kinds of short courses each year.

The one- and two - week courses range widely from basic training to highly specialised work on radiation, and the trainees vary accordingly — from housewives to city fathers, and from policemen to scientists.

Principal Wallace E. Garber says trainees work in teams on problems resembling as closely as possible the kind of thing they might face in wartime.

"Even if we don't teach them anything—and I think we do—the exchanges between them are valuable."

Since its opening in 1964, the college has had some 37,000 enrolments. EMO could well the tab for the trainees' travel expenses to and from the college and for their food and board while on course. Some come back regularly.

Rev. 36-year-old Roman priest, Rev. Claude-Mary Cote of the Abbey of St. Benoit-du-lac in Brome County, is probably the most intensively trained volunteer worker in the country. He has taken 17 EMO courses at Arnprior, including everything from research and direction to ideological defence.

Tomorrow: Few Canadians have fallout shelters.

50TH ANNIVERSARY

Only the immediate family were present, Miss. Ruth Bristell and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bristell, Larry, Sylvia and Vincent. Many cards, telegrams, a plaque from the Province of Ontario and a beautiful flower arrangement of yellow roses and 'mums from the Carmel U.C.W. were received.

Oscar Derby Home Stretch Shaping Up as Lively Race

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The home stretch of the Oscar derby is shaping up as a lively race, one of the best in years if the autumn releases fulfil their promise.

The pace was set earlier this year by Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? which had the shock value and dramatic power to nominate itself immediately, and in all departments.

The film may well produce the oddity of having all four players nominated in the four acting categories: Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton as stars and Sandy Dennis and George Segal as support.

Little else that has been released seems to be in contention.

The blockbusters are yet to come, and they will be jamming Los Angeles theatres in December to make the deadline.

For has two big shots on the way. The Bible is likely to create a stir, both for its direction by John Huston and its various performances.

PUNCHES ENTRY

Robert Wise, a two-time winner with West Side Story and Sound of Music, is pushing the completion of his $11,000,000 The Sand Pebbles to make the deadline.

Julie Andrews, nominated twice in a row, could make it a third with the epic Hawaii. The United Artists film is a possibility for best picture honors, as well as for the acting of Max von Sydow. United Artists also has hopes for Zero Moste Is A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum and Walter Matthau in The Fortune Cookie.

Columbia has three big ones on the way: Richard Brooks' A Professional with Burt Lancaster, Lee Marvin; Fred Zinnemann's A Man for All Seasons with Paul Scofield and the Peter O'Toole-Omar Sharif film, Night of the Generals. Other studios appear to be placing their chances on single releases. Paramount has Is Paris Burning?

MGM is planning a late release of the racing adventure, Grand Prix. Universal's prestige item is Fahrenheit—451, Francois Truffaut's first film in English.

Farm Income Up 13 Per Cent During 1965

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian farmers earned an estimated realized net income of $1,385,800,000 from farming operations in 1965, an increase of 13.4 per cent over 1964, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said Tuesday.

While farm - operating expenses and depreciation charges rose by more than six per cent between 1964 and 1965, this was more than offset by increases in total receipts from the sale of farm products, supplementary payments and income in kind.

The figures do not include Newfoundland.

Total farm net income, calculated by adding the value of changes in inventory of field crops and livestock to realized farm net income, was estimated at $1,880,300,000, about 26 per cent above 1964 and 20 per cent above the 1960-1965 average.

Gore

THE GORE — School buses are again a familiar sight. New students for B.C.I. and V.S. from the Gore are Roger Townsend, Wayne Noyes and David Pulver. Gerald and Geraldine Pulver are beginners at public school.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt Dickenson and Seamus of Ottawa were Labor Day weekend guests of Mrs. Frank Townsend.

Mr. and Mrs. Winston Pulver, Howard and Beverly motored to Lindsay on Friday and visited their uncle, Mr. D. McKerla.

Mrs. Alfred Cairns and Mrs. Morris Pulver attended the school for 11 Homemakers' club leaders in Picton on Wednesday and Thursday.

Some from here attended the dinner on Wednesday evening at Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Vandell's new potato storage house. A Wellington orchestra furnished music and a pleasant time was enjoyed.

Sunday callers at Mr. and Mrs. Willis Fox's were Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr, Belleville, Dr. Dempsey, Redmersville, Mr. Burton Fox, Wellington and Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Fox, Toronto.

COMMUNITY PRESENTATION

A community gathering was held at Victoria Church on Friday evening when friends and neighbors met to honor Mr. and Mrs. David Sammuels (nee Olive Brown) on the occasion of their recent marriage. Following a short program an address was read by Mrs. Clifford Calnan and the bride and bridegroom were presented with a table by Mr. Peter Moran and David Calnan.

A second address was read by Mrs. Harmon Montgomery to Mrs. Helen Brown and she was presented with a swivel rocking chair in appreciation of her services to the community over the years. Mrs. Brown left on Monday for Kingston where she is taking a nurses' aide course in the General Hospital there. All join in wishing Helen every success in her new undertaking.

Monsarrat Leaving

Says Conversation in Canada Limited to Football, TV, Sex

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP)—It's easy to talk to Canadians, as long as you talk about football, TV and sex, says novelist Nicholas Monsarrat.

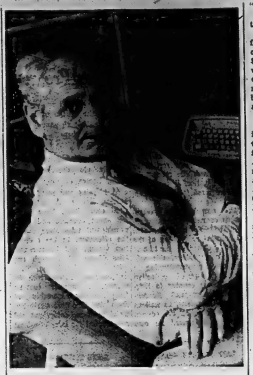
The 56-year-old author of The Cruel Sea will end his 23-year sojourn in Canada within the next year, but he's not pulling up stakes because of this country's frontier conversation.

"This is the longest I've ever spent in one place," said the former diplomat and naval officer. "I don't like growing roots. One gets sort of stale."

Interviewed in his comfortable eighth-floor apartment, the shirt-sleeved author relaxed with a glass of beer and a cigar. A tall distinguished-looking man with blue eyes and thinning black hair, he has a mildly cynical expression and turn of phrase.

His pretty English wife Anne, 28, a tall brown-haired woman with a warm peaches-and-cream appeal, retired to the kitchen on the housekeeping side of the double apartment. The couple have been married for five years, obviously happy despite the 27-year age difference.

WRITERS IGNORED



The couple's friends here have included diplomats, politicians and senior civil servants. The city at large has ignored them.

"It's a good place to write because there are no distractions at all, and I can happily creep around like a mouse completely unnoticed.

"No one pays any attention at all to writers in Canada. It's like being in quarantine."

Among Canadian writers he admires Morley Callaghan, Hugh MacLennan and Pierre Berton.

"But Berton has been led astray from his true metier. A writer should only write.

AUTHOR IS LEAVING — Nicholas Monsarrat, the British author who has lived in Canada for the past 13 years, says a writer should only write. Other aspects are a waste of time. He's moving within the next year to live in England, Switzerland or the Caribbean because one gets stale living too long in one place. (CP Photo)

He shouldn't be on TV or write a column. That's waste of time."

Mr. Monsarrat writes 500 words a day in his big green-carpeted office overlooking the Rideau River. The process may involve four or five revisions before the final draft is typed on his red portable typewriter.

The Chippendale chair reserved for guests is never occupied while he works.

"You have to get used to being alone if you're going to be a writer.

HATED SCHOOL

He started writing at 24 after a stint at Winchester school, which he hated, and law studies at Cambridge, "the happiest time of my life.

"I did hardly any work and there were all those girls.

A few months in a law office put him off a legal career, and he moved to a £3-a week room in London where he eked out an existence writing for a yachting magazine. His first two books "contained all I knew about love at 24.

"My mother loved them."

Later he was a naval officer in the Second World War and when joined the British Information Service in South Africa. He wrote 10 more novels before The Cruel Sea, a story of the Battle of the Atlantic which has 7,000,000 copies and has been translated into 18 languages.

"That's a message of hope for struggling young writers. I very nearly gave up, but then I thought I'd give it just one more try.

He came to Ottawa as director of the British Information Service in 1953, but left that post three years later to write full-time.

"Writing best-selling novels is not the best way to get ahead in the civil service. My superiors kept sending my memos in a way my publishers would never dare to. MUSIC IS STIMULANT

The books he's planned up to 1972 are all different. "I can't just write one of the Cruel Sea.

He's correcting the proofs on an autobiography of his early years, Life is a Four Letter Word, to be published Nov. 17. Then comes a sequel to The Tribe that Lost its Head—"what happens to a country after it achieves independence. Next, another autobiographical work and then a book on what happens to prisoners when they come out of jail.

Also since 1957 he has been working on an extremely long novel about the sea, from the Spanish armada to the opening of the St. Lawrence seaway.

When he is writing, he likes background music.

I'm fond of Mozart, the piano concertos and the clarinet quintet. But no one later than Richard Strauss.

Even so, he admits a certain affection for the Beatles, who he notes come from Liverpool, as he does.

"Even if they do make silly remarks in public, they are clean and their music is a lot better than some of the other trash. They look as if they're enjoying themselves, and that's very infectious.

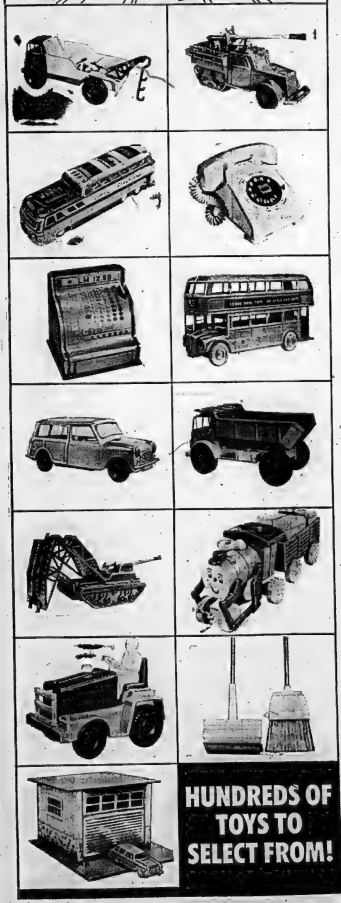
The Monsarrats have sold their island in the St. Lawrence and their boat and car, a $5,000 Bentley.

"We're looking around the world for somewhere to live, and we've narrowed it down to England, Switzerland or the Caribbean, he said.

After they have moved, he'll probably buy a Rolls Royce. "I take the two cars in turn. I like big fast cars and the Rolls is the best in the world.

Sailing is another passion. "There's nothing like it.

He used to race a dragon class yacht at Montreal, but his next boat will probably be a three- or four-ton cruiser.



Future plans include a book on Canada, probably about the Far North as the new frontier. He has crossed the country east to west twice, once by car and once "on one of those horrible speaking tours and he isn't worried about writing about Canada when he's somewhere else.

"After all, I wrote The Cruel Sea about as far from it as you can get, 6,000 feet above sea level in Johannesburg.

"And I wrote the book about South Africa while I was living near Hull, Que.

Quebec Requests More Tax Revenues Over Five Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson served notice on the federal government Tuesday night that Quebec wants more tax revenues over the next five years to take over such responsibilities as family allowances and old age pensions which now are in federal hands.

Quebec's proposal, contained in a brief presented to the federal - provincial tax structure committee, is that the province should get all the revenue from its personal income tax, succession duties and corporation tax paid by companies developing natural resources.

Quebec also wanted most of the tax revenue—"at least 58 per cent"—from other corporations.

Quebec now receives 47 per cent of income tax, 75 per cent of succession duties and 23 per cent of corporate income taxes paid by all corporations in the province.

In addition to asking for these new powers of taxation, the Quebec brief asks that the province continue to receive equalization payments.

WANTS EQUALIZATION

Equalization payments, in which tax revenues are shared out among all provinces according to their relative wealth, gave Quebec some $210,000,000 during the last fiscal year and it was disclosed recently that these will be increased in 1966-67 by some $30,000,000.

Quebec's financial stand came in the form of two major requests, the first of which was that the provinces be given the means to "close the gap which now exists between their sources of revenue and their present constitutional responsibilities."

The second request is that Quebec be given full control of all federal projects which the constitution says should be under provincial jurisdiction.

The brief gave Quebec's reasons for the requests as follows:

"We believe that there is in Canada, in a sociological sense, a nation of French speech, whose home is Quebec. This nation has every intention of continuing its self-assertion by obtaining, with due respect for order and justice, all the instruments required for its development."

"The new Quebec government is committed to the fundamental task of obtaining legal and political recognition of the French - Canadian nation; among other things, this will require a new constitution to guarantee equal collective rights in our country to English - speaking and French-speaking Canadians, as well as to give Quebec all the powers needed to safeguard its own identity."

LIST RIGHTS GOALS

OTTAWA (CP) — A tentative list of 16 Canadian goals for International Human Rights Year in 1968 has been written by a National conference called by the Canadian Citizenship Council at the request of State Secretary Judy LaMarsh. Paving on the Northport road is now completed around Green Point and under the new Quinte Skyway Bridge, road officials reported.

Ken Knox, summer assistant with the Ontario Department of Agriculture in Picton leaves on Thursday, September 15th to return to the Kemptville Agricultural School for his second year. We have appreciated Ken's assistance this summer and wish him every success with his studies and school activities.

Miss N. McDonald, for several years dietician at the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital at Picton, here enjoys a coffee break with three of her new associates, P. Lorenso, C. Flores and R. Delacrui, all from the Philippines.

Nurses of Many Nationalities Employed at County Hospital

PICTON (Staff) — The town of Picton and particularly the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital is beginning to take on the air of a cosmopolitan centre, with nurses of many nationalities, who have been arriving over the past year.

Among with staff nurses from Australia, New Zealand and Jamaica, the local hospital now boasts 17 Filipino young ladies, 12 of whom are registered nurses. The other is a dietician.

Although there is no critical shortage of nurses at the county hospital the institution is still not fully staffed. The Filipino nurses, sharp, quick and well trained are certainly easing the burden previously borne by the local staff.

The nurses, all of them under twenty years of age, were all trained in Manila and the first to arrive were a group of four, in September of last year. Since that time the others have arrived individually at intervals until May of this year.

ALL GRADUATES

The new nurses at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital are all graduate nurses of approved schools in the Philippines and are registered with the board of examiners there. They are also screened in that country by Canadian representatives in Manila before coming to Canada. Upon their arrival they receive two months of concentrated orientation to acquaint them with local methods of nursing.

Since 1955, many Philipine nurses have been coming to Ontario, and following the success of a recruiting program in the Republic of the Philippines, hospitals here are looking to the islands as a source of graduate nurses to prevent a nursing shortage in Canada.

Miss Gladys Lehigh, director of nursing at the hospital, speaks well of the new nurses' capabilities.

"They are working out just fine" she said, "patients like them and they are proving their abilities"

The girls have been present at many local functions given in their honor. Kiwanis Club have already had one of the girls, Estrocina Yu, speak to the club, and seven other girls also attended. The Rotary Club of Picton also intends to invite them to a similar dinner meeting a the near future. The girls have also appeared at many of the women's organizations and occasionally wear the colorful dress of their country on these occasions.

The girls all seem to enjoy their jobs and the area. One of the girls liked everything about the Quinte area except the Canadian winters.

In the pediatric ward of the new wing of the Picton Hospital Kathy Loney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Loney, R. R. 3, Picton, is shown receiving a drink from Miss C. Flores, Reg. N., one of thirteen Filipinos, twelve of them nurses, employed at the hospital.

S. Ejercito, one of a dozen Filipino nurses at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital at Picton, here attends to Henry Dick of Wellington in the hospital's new wing. Mr. Dick has high praise for the care given him by the attractive Filipino girls.

Police Busy

PICTON — During the past week the local detachment of the OPP laid seven charges, five under the Highway Traffic Act and two under the Criminal Code of Canada. There were 10 warnings issued under the Highway Traffic Act.

There were six man hours spent in court by members of Picton detachment in connection with four convictions under The Criminal Code of Canada, five convictions under the Liquor Control Act and three convictions under the Highway Traffic Act.

On the authority of a warrant to arrest, one man was arrested on a charge of abduction. Three motor accidents were investigated.

Bronze Plaque Presented to Archbishop

WINNIPEG (CP) — A bronze plaque was presented to Most Rev. Arthur Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury, when he arrived Tuesday to start the western portion of a month-long Canadian tour.

The archbishop was also made an honorary citizen of Winnipeg by Mayor Stephen Juba.

"This is a privilege and honor I will treasure all my life," the spiritual head of the 44,000,000-member Anglican communion said.

"When I come to Winnipeg again, which is perfectly possible because as you will see I am still a youngster, I will feel I am coming as one who belongs."

Dr. Ramsey is 61.

WELCOMED BY PRIMATE

The archbishop arrived by air from Sault Ste. Marie and was welcomed by Most Rev. H. H. Clark, Anglican Primate of all Canada, and Rt. Rev. J. O. Anderson, Suffragan Bishop of Rupert's Land diocese.

Dr. Ramsey said at a press conference that unity between churches works not only towards bringing together people of different churches but to bring new people into the church.

The archbishop also said he has been delighted to see in Canada many examples of modern architecture in Anglican churches.

Dr. Ramsey preached as an later - denominational worship service in the civic auditorium Tuesday night.

The archbishop was to leave Thursday for Regina aboard a Saskatchewan government executive aircraft.

There are many

Good Reasons

for shopping at Dominion

is one of them!

Keeping house at Dominion is a big costly job! It takes a lot of people. Eager People. Alert people... like the people at your Dominion Store. Day after day, there are hundreds of big windows to wash and shine... aisle after aisle of floors to brighten up ... shelving galore to dust... meat cases to scrub up every night. It's a constant endless task... but, a satisfying one. And you should see our laundry bill! Fresh white coats and white jackets and white uniforms and white aprons go on and off daily to keep them neat and clean... the way both you (and we) like to see them. Dominion managers are proud of their housekeeping! If you shop elsewhere... look around! Then, if you want the standards you set in your own home... check Dominion, where you'll find a little more "elbow grease" in our housekeeping —and a whole lot more eagerness to make you feel "at home". Yes — "keeping house' at Dominion is an around-the-clock affair for people like you, who expect and appreciate the cleanliness they find at Dominion, at the snack bar... the meat counter... the produce counter... the dairy case... the check-out stand... everywhere! Quite clearly you can see the difference at Dominion!

Arrive At Rhodesian Compromise

No Hope of Fast Solutions of Tax Philosophy

By DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP) The provinces will talk taxes with the federal government in October, November and perhaps throughout 1967.

They see no hope of fast solutions to bridge immense differences in tax philosophy between the two levels of government.

The three prairie premiers told the federal-provincial tax structure committee Wednesday it should abandon its attempt to negotiate five-year agreements to replace existing agreements when they expire next April 1.

Prince Edward Island and Ontario also expressed interest in a suggested two-year interim arrangement on shared taxes with Ottawa.

Finance Minister Sharp, however, said the first hours of committee sessions Wednesday showed that some provinces want to go ahead as soon as possible with a new system.

OTTAWA DECISIONS

In any case, he pointedly added, tax agreements in Canada never have been decisions by federal-provincial conferences. They have been announced by the federal government.

After trying as far as possible to lessen differences, "governments make decisions," Premier Mr. Sharp placed before the committee Wednesday would, record federal-provincial arrangements for tax-sharing, equalization payments and shared-cost programs during the years 1967-72.

Counter - proposals delivered by the provinces—with a high-power representation of seven premiers — attacked federal thinking on all three counts.

Only three premiers were missing from the gathering, which is normally a meeting of finance ministers. All the absentees were from Atlantic provinces, a rich fare well under new arrangements for redistribution of tax revenues through equalization payments.

Prince Edward Island's Alex Campbell did come, with the complaint his province's hopes had been "shattered" by the new equalization formula. The island stands to gain only about $200,000 a year.

ADDS WIT TO MEETING

Premier Campbell also brought wit along to his first federal-provincial meeting as premier of Quebec, and Wednesday's session got about as far as singing O Canada.

Today, he will go into the details of demands for $725,000,000 from new revenue sources over the next five years.

Premier John Robarts of Ontario was serving his first inquiry that Ontario will use its considerable bargaining power, he said the federal government's stance is not as adamant as it looks.

Manitoba Premier Duff Roblin and Alberta Premier E. C. Manning gave a measured expression to their common thrust: freedom to establish priorities for their own programs.

Company Closes Plants

SUDBURY (CP) — International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. plants here and a refinery at Port Colborne, Ont., were closed down today as officials of the United Steelworkers of American prepare for a secret ballot on a new contract agreement with the company.

About 1,300 members of the union's local in Port Colborne, miles south of Welland, were to vote today on the proposed three - year agreement. A vote by the 16,000 - member Sudbury local is set for Friday.

Inco's 34 plants in the Sudbury area and the refinery at Port Colborne were shut Wednesday and a company statement indicated operations will not be resumed until after the voting.

Union and company negotiators agreed on the new contract terms in Toronto Sunday night, a half - hour before a midnight strike deadline. But at a union meeting here Tuesday night the members indicated they weren't satisfied with the new agreement.

WORTH —¾ CENTS

The proposed agreement, retroactive to July 16, is estimated by the union to be worth an average of 68 cents an hour in wage and fringe benefits.

It provides pay increases for $3.75 an hour from $2.87 for first class tradesmen, $3.21 from $2.39 for mine drillers, and $2.67 from $2.23½ for laborers.

The contract would also give every employee five weeks vacation in addition to the regular vacation every five years. The five - week vacation would be taken any time during the five - year period, separately or with regular holidays.

After July, 1968, employees with 30 years' service or more would be entitled to retire at 62 with full pension benefits previously available only to those retiring at 65.

"I'm wrong you, Smith, give up or I'll let you have it!"

Beer Taps Drying Up In Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Company and union negotiators are to meet today in attempts to settle a strike that has dried up some beer taps in Toronto and threatens to spread to at least 30 other Ontario communities.

The strike, involving Brewers' Warehousing Ltd. and the International Union of Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers, is in its fourth day.

Employees of the Toronto local walked out after charging that the company is discriminating against older employees.

Supplies of draft beer in many hotel beverage rooms in cosmopolitan Toronto dried up Wednesday night and others are expected to run out today.

Negotiators for the company and union met Wednesday night, but adjourned early in the evening.

Centre of the union demand is a claim that the company refused to upgrade a 44-year-old temporary employee to the permanent staff in Toronto. A company spokesman said Wednesday no position is available for the man.

Meanwhile, a sympathy walkout has affected Brewers' Warehousing stores from Cookville, on the western outskirts of Toronto, north to Huntsville and

Is Only One Known Survivor When German Submarine Sinks

THE HAGUE (Reuters)—The small West German submarine Hai (Shark), scuttled during the Second World War and then rebuilt in peacetime, sprung a leak in the North Sea Wednesday night and sank again.

One survivor was picked up by a British trawler early today.

The trawler St. Martin radioed that four other men also were sighted in the water, but there were no further details. The fate of the 16 other men of the 282-ton Hai's 21 - member crew was not immediately known.

The radio report said the survivor, a boatswain named Silbernagel, said the submarine sprang a leak in the engine room and sank about 5 p.m. GMT (12 p.m. EDT).

A West German defence ministry spokesman in Bonn said the Hai sank during a heavy west-by-southwest gale, but it could not be determined whether this was the exact cause of the disaster. He added that a recovery vessel was sent out to lift the submarine.

Silbernagel said he believed he was the only survivor. Eight members of the crew were on deck when the submarine sank near the Dogger Bank. Its position at the time was about 200 miles east of the northeast England port of Tynemouth.

In Copenhagen, the Danish Air Command reported that the bodies of two West German seamen were picked up today in the area of the North Sea where the Hai sank.

The command said the bodies were put aboard a West German ship after they were sighted by a Danish helicopter. The Helicopter also sighted an extensive oil slick and a patch of rising air bubbles. Other search vessels were directed to examine the oil patch.

This was the second sinking of the Hai in 21 years. It had been scuttled on the last day of the Second World War, May 8, 1945, in the Kattegat, but was raised in 1956.

A huge sea and air search was launched for survivors.

The St. Martin radioed that the survivor Silbernagel was suffering from exposure after being in the water for about 18 hours since the sinking—but was unhurt and comfortable.

The trawler headed back in the eastern England port of Lowestoft but, because of a strong wind, was not expected to reach port until the early hours Friday.

In London, a defence ministry spokesman said the Hai, stationed at Neustadt on the Baltic, was part of a training group of three submarines, an escort vessel and a tug, all heading for Aberdeen, Scotland.

The two other submarines were the 350-ton Hecht (Pike) and a U-type submarine of 450 tons. The escort vessel was the 2,270-ton Loch and the tug was the 400-ton Passat.

It was not immediately clear whether the Hai sank while in convoy or whether it was away from the main group.

China's Red Guards Told To End Revolutionary Drive

TOKYO (AP)—China's leaders today told the Red Guards to end their revolutionary drive which has brought turmoil to the country and criticism from abroad.

The instructions, in an editorial in the official Peking People's Daily, reflected concern that the Red Guard activities might be disrupting agricultural and industrial production.

The editorial warned that "under no circumstances must production be allowed to slow down. During the busy fall harvesting season, you may cease your revolutionary activities."

Whether the Red Guards will be allowed to resume their activities after the harvest is not certain.

After the Red Guards first erupted in August, they were given repeated official warnings to move with caution and without force. Despite these warnings there continued to be reports of clashes between Red Guards and groups of workers and farmers.

The editorial said there was no need for the Red Guards to try to "instill their revolutionary zeal in factories" or to "bother farmers. It asked that workers and farmers "are magnificently carrying out revolutionary activities of their own."

The New China news agency reported peasants were "working with revolutionary determination to fight against drought and other natural troubles that have occurred in some areas."

The Red Guards emerged about Aug. 18 in Peking. By the thousands they swept through the city changing names of streets, shops, theatres and restaurants they considered revisionist, capitalist or imperialist in title.

The movement swept to other cities. There were reports of clashes involving tens of thousands, with some fatalities.

It seemed the youths were taking seriously the communique issued by a plenary session of the central committee of the Chinese Communist party last August. The communique referred to the current "great cultural revolution" and told the people:

"Don't be afraid of disorder."

Give Credit To Pearson For Accord

By CARMAN CUMMING

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson, a diplomat among politicians, emerged with his record as a peacemaker intact from what he called a "very difficult, very emotional, very rugged" Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

The talks were not due to end until tonight, but it was clear that the conference climax had passed as a reluctant compromise was reached over Rhodesia Wednesday night.

* * *

The agreement was in many ways a joint statement setting out disagreements. But it dissipated fears of walkouts or of a complete split that threatened the conference since it started Sept. 8.

The probable effects of the communique, and Pearson's contribution in achieving it, were still matters of conjecture.

But there was no doubt that all efforts to mediate the sometimes-bitter row between Britain and the "Afro-Asian caucus" had revolved around the Canadian leader.

It was Pearson who was charged with marrying the conflicting positions of the British and the Afro-Asians. And it was Pearson who chaired a seven-hour session between Britain and the Afro-Asians that helped shaped the draft Canadian communique into a form acceptable to all.

CAUSED SURPRISE

Two days earlier, Pearson caused some surprise when he predicted confidently that a "good" communique would be worked out.

Wednesday night, he said he had always expected a solution.

"I've been in this business so long now that I'm not cynical," he said.

He told a press conference that since he entered diplomacy in 1928, "I think I have never faced a more emotional or difficult situation."

The crisis centred on Afro-Asian fears that Britain was "selling out" the Negro majority in Rhodesia in the failure to turn out the white - minority regime that seized power last November.

The communique went some distance toward meeting demands by African countries, notably Zambia, for tougher action against the white Rhodesian government and for guarantees that Britain would not grant independence until the majority rule in power.

Pearson's mediation role flowed naturally from his decision since 1964 to align himself with Britain, Australia and New Zealand at the opposite extreme from the African militants.

FREED ESTABLISHMENT

One fear present throughout the conference was that the industrialized "old white" Commonwealth would be set apart from the newer, poorer and mainly non-white countries.

Pearson has stressed at every opportunity that the future of the Commonwealth as a multi-racial association is at stake in

Wilson Fixes Deadline

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Wilson has warned Rhodesian Ian Smith that he either end his year-old rebellion or face the beginning of economic sanctions by noon G.M.T. in United Nations before Dec. 21.

The three - month ultimatum, delivered out of London under threat of Commonwealth collapse, is likely to be ignored by the minority white regime in Salisbury, bringing on the wrath of the UN and the possibility of trade wrangling between Britain and South Africa which strongly supports the Rhodesian whites.

But the Commonwealth leaders' communique, issued Wednesday night, has a number of loopholes which Wilson could use to wriggle out of his commitments.

If Ian Smith fails to heed the warning and return to constitutional rule, the sanctions which Britain would demand from the UN would be based only on the complete Commonwealth support of British proposals.

There are indications British ministers may be ready to complete trade ban on the purchase of Rhodesian chrome, asbestos, copper and pig iron, but informants indicated it is reluctant to ask for a complete ban on the shipment of oil to Rhodesia.

COULD IMPOSE VETO

Oil is the mainstay of Rhodesia's industrial life. Some oil has been moving in from South Africa which has defied the UN embargo on trade with Rhodesia. If any Commonwealth member declines to back British priorities in asking for selective UN sanctions, then Britain could withdraw her pledge to support such sanctions and even impose a Security Council veto on such demands from other countries.

This the Commonwealth, threatened with disintegration over the Rhodesia issue, will be watching Britain's moves cravenly, Prime Minister Pearson, whose mediating skill helped restore Commonwealth unity, has said an oil ban is included in the sanctions. He was sure

Gemini 11 Astronauts in Pinpoint Landing-Bring Home 7 Records

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP). —Bringing home seven space records, the Gemini 11 astronauts rode to a safe pinpoint landing in the Atlantic ocean today to climax a sensational three - day mission.

Charles (Pete) Conrad Jr. and space-walker Richard F. Gordon Jr. ended one of man's most significant space adventures when they splashed into the sea within view of television cameras aboard the U.S. aircraft carrier Guam. They were shocked to safety by helicopter and taken to the carrier.

"This old world looks pretty good from the deck of the carrier," Gordon told the cheering crew of the carrier.

"But I'll tell you something else, it looks great from 850 miles up."

The smiling, heavily-bearded astronaut was talking about Gemini 11's record - breaking trip to the "top of the world" Wednesday.

The astronauts splashed down about two miles off the port bow of the Guam.

This was closer than any other American manned spaceship has come to its main recovery ship. It beat by a few previous mark, 3½ miles.

Gemini 9, however, still holds the record for closest to the aiming point—an area in the centre of the landing zone. It missed by only 300 yards, while Gemini 11 was more than a mile off that mark.

However, officials considered Gemini 11's shooting good for a first try at the automatic re-entry system, which relied on the spacecraft computer and guidance system.

Gemini 11 dropped into the sea at 10 a.m. EDT while sailors packed the deck of the carrier to cheer the two fellow navy men. Conrad is a commander and Gordon a lieutenant-commander.

They are to stay on the Guam overnight, flying to Cape Kennedy Friday to begin several days of debriefings with experts.

For the third straight time, a Gemini capsule landed close enough to the recovery carrier so that television cameras could pick up the descent and splashdown.

Thus, once again, millions of viewers, seeing the picture relayed through the Early Bird satellite, had a ringside seat to one of man's most spectacular flights.

"You're on TV," Mission Control Centre told the astronauts as they dropped toward the sea.

"Roger," Conrad replied.

The television screen showed the spacecraft floating slowly down on its 85-foot chute. Drifting down nearby was a nose section, which had jettisoned so the parachute could be released.

The carrier, in radio contact with the spacecraft, reported the astronauts were in good shape.

The splashdown was closer than any other U.S. manned spacecraft has come to its main recovery ship. Gemini 9 held the previous mark, 3½ miles.

Helicopters dispatched from the carrier were over the bobbing capsule within minutes and frogmen leaped into the water to attach a flotation collar.

It was a successful end to a flight in which Conrad and Gordon pushed man's exploration of space to new horizons.

They set record after record as they circled the globe 44 times, travelling nearly 1,300,000 miles in 71 hours, 17 minutes.

Among their many feats, they flew higher and faster than anyone else, scored man's first rendezvous and docking with a target satellite and demonstrated that two space vehicles can fly formation in space while tied together by a line.

The record-setting continued right up to the final minutes, when the astronauts set their automatic pilot and flew a "hands off" re-entry—the first ever attempted. The purpose was to evaluate whether man can perform more effectively as a controller or an observer during this critical phase.

Conrad and Gordon fed instructions to their computer and guidance system and then let these two electronic devices do the work after the retro-rockets fired with a jolt 100 miles above the Pacific near the international dateline.

Needs of Retarded Children Discussed at Local Meeting

How best to serve the needs of retarded children in the Belleville area was under discussion Wednesday at a meeting held at the Administration Building of the Belleville Public School Board.

Attending the meeting were a number of educationists who on Tuesday attended the district meeting on larger units of school administration held at the Sun Valley Motel.

Lorel Anderson represents-tives drew attention to difficulties which might arise from transportation, distance, build-costs and the lack of interest in communities that would make use of services centred in Belleville.

MANY PRESENT

The meeting was chaired by D. W. Maiden, inspector of special education. Others present were F. Sedgwick and R. Reynolds from the retarded children's inspection and ad-ministration branch of the Department of Education, Inspectors H. L. Knight, Picton, Paul Anderson, Napanee, Lorne Mc-Crimmon, Tweed, R. A. Dunn-more and Fred Allore of Belleville, Mrs. Mills, Bellefield, and P. H. Torrance, assistant to arts superintendent R. W. Frosts.

Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Ferren and Mrs. Ferren, from the provincial association for retarded chil-dren, were also present.

During the day Mr. R. Sher-bourn and J. L. Anderson from the Bellefield Hospital, Glen-dowen's Education Authority-age Mrs. T. Sowell, president of the Kingston Association for Retarded Children, joined in the discussions.

Mr. Blackbourn said the local Authority, at their next meet-ing on September 30th would give thought to some of the inquiries made at the meeting.

E. Brockhurst Fractures Both Knees in Fall

Eric "Brock" Brockhurst of 31 Earl Street was taken to the Belleville General Hospital yes-terday suffering from injuries sustained in a fall from a lad-der. Mr. Brockhurst was pain-ing from the ladder at the top of his two-storey house when the rung on which he was standing gave way causing him to fall and fracture both knee-caps.

Operated on last night, Mr. Brockhurst is expected to be in hospital for some time.

Rosh Hashanah Services Held At Synagogue

Late yesterday afternoon members of the Jewish com-munity began sundown Rosh Hashanah services to celebrate the beginning of the Jewish New Year—5727. The Shofar — ram's horn — will signal a call to repentance and prayer today and again Friday. The Jewish New Year is a seven-day occasion while ends with Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, Friday.

Jews kneel in prayer only once a year— during the Yom Kippur service. It is done to confirm their complete rapport with God rather than as an indication of inferiority. Some remain in the synagogue until the services conclude the fol-lowing day. However, most Can-adian Jews return to their homes overnight, and return the next day for the four separate, but continuous services.

Reform Jews observe Rosh Hashanah for only one day but Orthodox and Conservative Jews still observe the occasion for the traditional two days of services.

Man Fined $25 For Failure to Report Accident

Failing to report to police the fact that his car struck a small boy cost a Belleville man a fine of $25 and costs in County magistrate's court this morning.

Alton Richardson, 36, of 5 First Street in the city pleaded guilty to a charge of failure to report an accident to police in-volving damages in excess of $100.

The charge rose out of an accident July 30 when a resident of the community of Bayside, some five miles west of Belle-ville on Highway 2, told the Belleville O.P.P. that his mail-box had been struck by a pas-sing motor vehicle the day pre-vious.

A car similar to the one re-ported to have hit the mailbox was located by police, who subsequently charged Richard-son with failing to report the incident.

The accused told police that he didn't see the necessity of reporting the accident because he felt there hadn't been "900 to 70 dollars" in damage to his automobile. Police sett-mated the damages to Richard-son's car at $225.

Ten dollars in damage to the mail box was paid for by Richardson.

Astronauts Spot Russia's Huge Satellite

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) The "wiggly star" astronaut Charles Conrad spotted from the Gemini 11 spacecraft Tues-day turned out to be Russia's unmanned huge Proton III sat-ellite.

The satellite was identified by the North American Defence Com-mand after it studied track-ing records kept on all orbiting objects.

"We had a wingman flying wing on us here, off to my left, tumbling about one revolution per second," Conrad said when he reported the object. "We got some pictures of it."

At first, Conrad and astro-naut Richard Gordon felt the object might have been part of Gordon's docked space vehicle which had been thrown out of the capsule a short time ear-lier.

NORAD reported that the 12-ton Proton III was 270 miles away from Gemini 11 when it was spotted as Conrad and Gor-don passed 180 miles above the Indian Ocean.

Some Western experts have speculated the Soviet Proton se-ries might be the forerunner of a Russian manned space sta-tion.

ILO Trying to Smooth Labor Conflicts in Latin America

By KEN CLARK

OTTAWA (CP)—The Interna-tional Labor Organization is helping to cope with a poten-tially explosive situation in Latin America, David Morse, ILO director-general, said Wed-nesday.

"The forces under all these societies are getting more and more explosive," he told an in-terviewer. "Something will have to be done about it."

He said the ILO is right in the middle of efforts to solve Latin American problems.

The U.S.-born official talked to reporters on the third day of a conference of 25 North and South American member, coun-tries of the ILO. The regional conference is talking over ways to solve manpower and social security problems.

Mr. Morse said his chief con-cern about Latin America is to "maximize our effort to assist in the process" of economic growth."

TRIED ADMINISTRATORS

ILO help includes the just established centre in Lima, Peru, to train administrators.

With a long way still to go, the real problem in Latin America is to make the coming changes will be peaceful or otherwise, he said. The ILO aim is to make the changes peaceful.

"If these countries attack their problem energetically, this peaceful transition will take place."

The trend, at least, in Latin America "is in the right direc-tion."

As changes occur, political leaders are being forced to adapt, he said. "The world in country starts to change for the better, the leaders will get into trouble if they don't introduce reforms."

Some of the Latin American ferment and aspirations are sprung to the surface in the words of delegates.

MANPOWER HEAD

Alvaro Ramirez Pinilla, a workers' delegate on the Colom-bian delegation, told the press committee meeting "the econ-omy must serve man; man must not be a servant to the economy."

In some countries, he said, the workers have the right to organize into unions. The workers are nothing but cogs in the economy, servants of the civilian and military regimes.

Mr. Pinilla joined other union representatives who have at conference calls for greater worker participation in eco-nomic planning. Automated changes should not be unilater-ally imposed, he said.

Morris Paladino of Washing-ton, director of the American Federation of Labor Develop-ment, echoed this theme.

Mr. Paladino, a member of the AFL-CIO, said union lead-ers must participate in the eco-nomic planning of their coun-tries. Only a few countries fol-low this practice.

"We're mining the boat," he said.

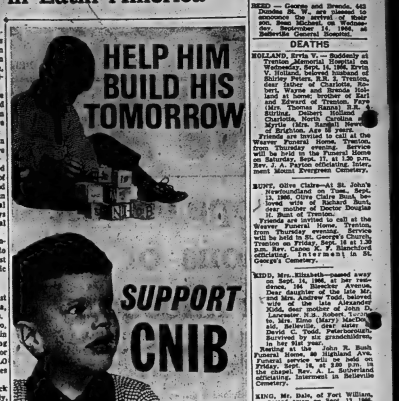
He said the repeated claim that the labor movement lacks the skills of the cadres needed to participate in high-level plan-ing is generally untrue.

Capital Gains Tax Forecast By Geo. Hees

VICTORIA (CP)—Canadians will soon be paying a federal capital gains tax that will be one of the greatest mistakes this government has made," George Hees, Progressive Con-servative MP for Eastern Northumberland riding, said Wednesday.

"Canada needs more Cana-dians who are willing to put their savings into our industry," he told the Victoria Young Pro-gressive Conservative Associa-tion.

"This investment will help in-crease productivity and relieve the pressure of inflation."



The former trade and trans-port minister said he based his prediction on his recent visit to Iawa which revealed the depart-ment of finance has been study-ing the matter for some time.

Instead of a capital gains tax, he suggested the government should increase the percentage of common stock dividends which are deductible from in-come tax from 20 to 50 per cent.

"Without such an additional incentive our development will continue to be owned and con-trolled to a large extent from outside Canada."

Institute For Blind Opens Annual Drive For Funds

The Hastings County Advisory Board to The Canadian National Institute for the Blind, with a committee in all of the towns and villages of the County, as well as in Belleville and Trenton, is once again appealing to the people of Hastings County in sup-port of work for the blind a-nd the prevention of blindness throughout the County. Were it not for this assistance on the part of the sighted people of this area the CNIB could not provide the needed services to assist those without the blessings of good sight to make the difficult adjustment necessary to carry on a useful and meaningful life.

These services include visita-tion, instruction from the blind Home Teacher, adjustment and employment training, library ser-vices of books in Braille and on tapes, guidance for the par-ents of blind children and real-dential care.

In addition to a broad field of service for the blind, there is a very active prevention of blindness program being carried on for those unable to provide eye examinations, glasses or treatment for themselves. The board co-operates with public health nurses and school nurses in discovering children and ad-ults needing this assistance.

The 1966 campaign for funds is being planned for the period September 19th to 30th but there may be some variation in these dates to suit local communities. Members of the advisory board in Deseronto, Shannonville, Fox-boro, Frankford, Madoc, Mar-mora, Tweed and Bancroft are responsible for the appeal in their own districts. They will be assisted by many volunteer can-vassers, including groups such as the Tweed Kinette Club, church groups, I.O.D.E. members, Wo-men's Institute branches, etc. Literally, there will be hundreds of workers visiting the homes of the County. In Trenton the ap-peal will be conducted from Sep-tember 20th to October 5th. In Belleville the CNIB is a member agency of the United Appeal.

Largest Building in Mill Complex at Sulphide Burns

TWEED (Special) — Fire of still undetermined origin des-troyed a large unused building at Sulphide northeast of Tweed.

The burned structure, known as the contact building, was the largest structure in the mill complex and was shortly to be sold.

Tweed Volunteer Firemen were called to the scene about 7.45 but could not do nothing to save the structure and con-centrated their efforts on pro-tecting other structures in the area. There was no estimate of the loss.

The Nichols Chemical build-ings at Sulphide had been out of use since the mill operations closed down several months ago. A Montreal firm is now engaged in removal of mill equipment from the structures prior to their being sold.

It now appears that the project may be substantially completed by early January, according to a spokesman for the man who credits the cooperation of the Picton PUC and municipal officials in helping minimizing problems in the early-going. Original plans called for completion in January — prior of the site until April — this resumption of the work in time for completion in June.

Fast Rise in Labor Force Brings Increase in Jobless

OTTAWA (CP) — A strong surge of non-farm jobs, particularly in manufacturing, reduced unemployment in Canada to 228,000 in August from 244,000 in July. But it didn't get down to the mark of 221,000 reached in August of last year.

A joint report today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the immigration department estimated the August unemployment rate at 2.9 per cent, down from 3.1 per cent in July. Last year's August rate was 2.8 per cent.

The continued decline in farm jobs, of 6,000 in the month to 649,000 and 85,000 lower on the year, offset much of the gain made in other industries.

Growth of the labor force continued at an unprecedented clip.

LABOR FORCE HITS RECORD

During the last five years the labor force has shown an average drop of 21,000 between July and August. But this year it grew by 18,000 to a record 7,866,000. That was 315,000 higher than in August, 1968.

The job picture in brief (estimates in thousands):

	Aug.	July	Aug.
	1969	1968	1968
Labor force	7,866	7,787	7,460
Employed	7,638	7,543	7,275
Unemployed	228	244	211

Another 40,000 non-farm jobs jobs showed up in the month although there normally is a dip at this time of year. "More than half of the additional jobs were in manufacturing," the report said.

The year-to-year gain was 385,000, more than enough to match the increase in the labor force if farm employment hadn't taken such a dive.

Moira Alters Student Council

More efficiency in smaller numbers!

That is the approach taken this year at Moira Secondary School where the size of the student parliament has been drastically reduced. Even the name has been streamlined to a shorter "students' council."

In previous years there have been more than 60 students involved in the school's student parliament organization and according to Principal Linton D. Read the number was getting "a bit out of hand."

Yesterday the new council four member executive and seven councillors representing each school grade and program were elected.

The new student council president is Harold Pascoe with Paul Loder as vice-president. Linda Jones is treasurer and Penny Weymark secretary.

Two Accused Blame Roberts For Shootings

LONDON (Reuters) — Brillain's most wanted man, Harry Roberts, was accused in his absence Wednesday of shooting two unarmed policemen in a triple killing that shook the nation and attracted worldwide attention.

Police told a London magistrate's court that two men accused of the murders blamed Roberts, 26, for starting the shooting, in which three detectives were gunned down near a West London prison a month ago.

The allegation came at the start of a hearing of triple murder charges against John Duddy, 37, and John Edward Witney, 36.

Duddy was alleged to have fired the shots that killed the third policeman. Britain's police are never armed, except under unusual circumstances.

Prosecuting counsel quoted Duddy as telling police: "It was Roberts who started the shooting. He shot the two who got out of the car and shouted to me to shoot. I just grabbed a gun and ran to the police car and shot the driver through the window.

"I must have been mad. I wish you could hang me now."

Roberts is still at large, despite the most intensive manhunt ever mounted in Britain. Duddy and Witney were ordered held in custody until Sept. 23.

City Golfing Aldermen Beat Peterborough

Score for Belleville's best ball was 70 strokes while Peterborough tallied 88. The victors were eight holes up with seven to go.

Broadcasters, Technicians to Take Strike Vote

TORONTO (CP) — Timothy O'Sullivan, Canadian director of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians, said Wednesday the union negotiating committee has rejected a conciliation board's report in a dispute with the CBC.

A strike vote among the 1,800 members will be held next week.

The report recommended three wage increases considerably smaller than one agreed to by union nominee Ferdinand Daoust.

Mr. O'Sullivan also accused Judge R. W. Reville of Brantford, conciliation board chairman, of abusing his position by changing the wage recommendation without consulting the union's nominee.

A spokesman for the technicians' union said they were originally asking for a 35-per-cent increase, but this was lowered to a "firm" 30 per cent during negotiations with the board.

He said CBC has not yet made an official offer, but the conciliation board recommended a 23½ per-cent increase over a 2½-year period, which was revised to 25½ per cent.

Meanwhile, three other CBC unions are waiting for conciliation boards to be set up after failing to reach agreement in direct negotiations for new contracts.

They are the Canadian Wire Service Guild, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists.

Equipment Sold To Workshop

The old addressograph equipment which for years has printed taxpayers' notices in the assessment department at city hall is going to be put to use in the Sheltered Workshop at the Kiwanis Centre.

The equipment will be turned over to workshop for the nominal sum of $1 on the understanding that on request it be made available to the city.

The work formerly done by the Addressograph system is now being done by a data processing firm and the equipment had been offered for sale — but with no takers.

This week city council was told that the Sheltered Workshop which employs local handicapped persons could use the equipment and accordingly it was turned over for their use.

The Sheltered Workshop does contract work for local industrial firms. Use of the old city hall equipment will mean two additional handicapped persons can be employed.

Area School Officials Study Integration and Larger Units

Further discussion on the integration of school classes from kindergarten to Grade XIII and on larger units of school administration was held in the city Tuesday when about 70 school inspectors, Ontario Department of Education and municipal school board employees met for a full day at the Sun Valley Motor Hotel.

The meeting was held primarily for Area 9 of the Department of Education, with headquarters at Kingston but staff inspectors were present from Ottawa and program heads from Toronto were also present.

Tuesday's meeting was the second in a series arranged by Area 9 superintendent: R. W. Frosts. The first took place in three parts, with smaller groups, at Peterborough, Belleville and Kingston.

Purpose of the initial meeting was to bring to school inspectors new emphasis and direction for education planned by the Department of Education Minister.

The planning of this week's meeting in Belleville was in the hands of: J. A. Snetsinger, formerly with the secondary schools here. Meeting chairman was W. F. Thom, staff inspector at Peterborough.

Belleville and the immediate area was represented by inspectors F. D. Allen, J. M. Cousins, R. A. Dunsmore, R. D. Horwood, L. A. Kells, superintendent of Belleville Public Schools, and E. A. Orr, superintendent of secondary schools.

EXPLAINS PLANS

Loree M. Johnston, program director for the Department of Education, spoke for more than an hour covering the new directions of education in the province and developing the achievements to be expected from integration and larger educational areas.

He covered such items as Grade XIII, television in education, the larger unit to be desired, school plant approval procedures and the changing programs for education.

Also covered were the diversification to be expected from curriculum outlining, programs for the emotionally disturbed, research developments, revision of training courses for certification, new publications and thoughts on mutual activities of consolidative committees with the better day-to-day education.

Mr. Johnston said advantages would be dependent on how local authorities proceed and the permissive measures available to them.

SPECIAL PROGRAMS

Mr. L. D. Maiden, special education inspector from Area 10 in the Ottawa Valley, led discussion on the special education programs in schools. He spoke of the increasing flexibility of approach and of probable new services to be developed and made available through co-operation with other government departments.

Particular reference was made to improve and enrich all services to be expected with the formation of larger educational areas.

School Inspectors M. Appleton, Alec Watts, Don Hynes, Colin McLeod and Bernard Hoy, dealt with the work of the secondary school staff inspector, the provincially employed elementary school inspector, the urban school certification, new publications and thoughts on mutual activities of consolidative committees with the better day-to-day education.

Mr. Johnston said advantages would be dependent on how local authorities proceed and the permissive measures available to them.

Water Hassle

The letters NAWAPA, meaning North American Water and Power Alliance, are ones Canadians should bear in mind, for they represent what appears to be slow but definite encroachment on Canadian national sovereignty and natural resources by United States interests.

Although Washington is aware that Canada has no plans for diverting water to the United States to alleviate a shortage there, a U.S. Senate subcommittee is reported to have taken a preliminary look at a privately-proposed project to divert huge quantities of water from northern and western Canada and Alaska to the western United States and Mexico.

It does lie a large element of gall attached to this attempt by the Americans to muscle in on a prime Canadian resource, it should nevertheless spur Ottawa to swifter action in determining as near as possible the extent of Canada's resources.

This "inventory" will require several years to complete, but it is only in recent months that there has been any mention of it being undertaken, in fact only since NAWAPA and other rumblings from the United States regarding water supplies.

The entire question of water supplies on this continent is one of vital importance. There is a good case for regarding it on a continental basis, but this has been handled in ineptfashion by the governments of both countries.

If Canada had made such an inventory of its water resources years ago it might now be in a position to offer supplies to the United States. But it is not, and it is all the more aggravating to have the American ambassador advise a contract to milk this country of its water had already been signed, sealed and delivered.

Another recent slap in the face for Canada was the short notice extended to Ottawa to have papers made available for President Johnson's big conference on water. It does go to show, however, that more foresight on the part of Ottawa could have avoided the rather embarrassing situation in which it now finds itself over this important issue.

Worked on Reserve

Koko Hayakawa, a 22-year-old Japanese girl who spent last week directing a work camp at the Parry Island Indian Reserve found her racial background a big advantage in working with the Indians.

"The Indians were so delighted when they thought I was an Indian come to work with them," she told a Globe and Mail representative. "I think this shows how much better it would be if there were enough trained Indians to work among their own people."

The five other campers included a boy from India, and Miss Hayakawa said the group's mixed origins showed the Indians that people from different backgrounds could co-operate effectively.

Significantly, Miss Hayakawa's group seemed to make a good impression with the children, although acceptance of the campers by the adult Indians was slower. The visitors helped the youngsters perfect their swimming strokes and instructed them in water safety.

"They all wanted to make things and once supplied with a minimum of materials were extremely creative and artistic," said the University of Toronto student.

The group's contact with the Parry Sound Indians appears to have been a happy one. Not only was it able to assist the Indians to upgrade their skills, but its members benefited in turn.

"We learned a lot that day and we have had two trained Indian recreation workers," said Miss Hayakawa. "They kept us from making bad social blunders. We learned that the way to draw out the adult population was by inviting them to events like square dances rather than approaching them directly in their homes."

Adventure Unlimited

As if he had not had enough adventure to last a lifetime, British pioneer flyer and solo yachtsman Francis Chichester is planning one more venture into the unknown.

In his book, The Lonely Sea and the Sky, Chichester tells of his early flights across the Tasman, from New Zealand to Australia, and around the Orient and the continent of Europe, in the early thirties. Some 30 years later, in 1960 and again in 1962 he crossed the Atlantic single-handed in a sailboat.

Now Chichester, who runs a map-making business in London, is planning to race around the world in his new Gipsy Moth IV. Once again he will be alone (on one of his previous Atlantic voyages he took his wife and son with him). His aims to sail the route the clippers took — round the Cape of Good Hope, through the roaring forties to Australia — in fewer than 100 days. Then, after a rest there, he plans to sail home round the treacherous Cape Horn.

Chichester is going to attempt the latter voyage, despite the fact that six of eight yachts to try the passage round the cape have been wrecked.

Today in History

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sept. 15, 1966 . . .

Tanks were first used in modern warfare 50 years ago today—Sept. 15—at the battle of Flers-Courcelette, the last successful attack of the British Somme campaign. The British 4th Army and 2nd Canadian Division advanced 1½ miles on a 4-mile front in the first day. There were 7,250 Canadian casualties in the first week and about 17,000 in a series of later assaults on Regina Trench by 48 four Canadian divisions. But the Canadian success established the Canadian Corps as one of the war's finest attack forces and led to the order to take Vimy Ridge the following year.

1821—The Spanish colony of Guatemala declared independence.

1920—An anarchist bomb exploded in Wall Street, New York, killing 38 people.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1916 — British troops of the High Wood and Ovillers and 2nd Canadian Division took Courcelette on the Somme in the first tank battle; Serbs repulsed a Bulgarian sortie in Macedonia.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1941 — British captured 10 German tanks and repelled two reconnaissance columns in Libya; U.S. Navy Secretary Knox said the U.S. Navy would protect lease-lend shipping as far as Iceland; the RAF lost 18 bombers in raids on several North Sea ports.

To Your Good Health

Child's Feet Turn In, Let Doctor Be Judge

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My 21-months-old daughter's feet turn in. I have put her shoes on the wrong feet to correct this. What else should I do? Her feet turned in before she was six months old. — Mrs. D. D.

I can't tell whether you have a real problem or an imaginary one, but I most certainly advise you to consult an expert.

At six months, children's feet sometimes turn in or out a good deal without it meaning anything. When they later walk, they often waddle like ducks or like Charlie Chaplin, but as the muscles strengthen the feet straighten, provided nothing is basically wrong.

Take this baby to your family doctor. If he suggests going to a specialist, do so. A little expense to get the right advice now can prevent much greater cost later if any serious problem exists.

And if there isn't anything wrong, your mind will be at rest and the child won't have to contend with wearing shoes on the wrong feet.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do you consider peanut butter a safe food? I read something to the effect that flavorings and coloring might cause cancer. I have always considered peanut butter healthful and nourishing. Now I hesitate to eat it — Mrs. O. H.

I remember scarier scares about cranberries and other foods — but know of no harm that came to anyone. In the case of cranberries it was also a cancer scare, but it died down when cooler heads figured out how many freight cars full of cranberries a person would have to eat before the chemical involved could have any effect.

It's all right with me to know that suspicious researchers keep testing everything in sight, because it all adds up to safety for the rest of us. But we have to remember that their tests often involve giving thousands of times any reasonable amount, to see whether it bothers animals. Often it takes thousands of times as much as a person could absorb in a lifetime.

Personally, I'm going to keep on eating peanut butter.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have severe atherosclerosis in the legs but the doctors do not want to operate yet. They told me to quit smoking, or they could not help me at all. Will quitting smoking help the condition or only slow it down? — C. M.

Giving up smoking won't cure your atherosclerosis clogging by accumulation of fatty material in the lining of the arteries). However, smoking causes the arteries to constrict and hence the circulation, already impaired, is worse than ever.

Dear Dr. Molner: What are the cause and treatment of toxic labyrinthitis? — C. J. G.

This is an inflammation of the semi-circular canals of the ear and it results in loss of balance. It can be from infection, injury or toxicity, meaning some sort of poisoning, such as from alcohol. The treatment for toxic labyrinthitis is thus based on the cause, which is quite variable.

Note to Mrs. J. H.: No, aspirin won't reduce the size of the clot and to the extent that it does it will help you lose weight.

Economics of Education

Montreal Gazette

Much is being said these days and quite rightly too, about the economic value of education. It not only raises a person to a higher income bracket; it raises the national income also. A recent survey concluded that in a important reason why Canadians earn less on the average than their counterparts in the United States may be the widening educational gap between the two countries.

But while all this appreciation of the economic value of education is a good thing in its way, it also has its danger. It may tend to make education a means to an end, not an end in itself.

All this may have its effect upon the Arts faculties, the traditional heart of any university. In future the Arts degree may be sought for its social distinction, or as an asset or requirement in certain professions, or in business.

But it is well to heed the words once used by Dr. Sydney Smith, while he was President of the University of Toronto:

"The important distinction to bear in mind is that studies are intrinsically valuable. If it

News that Alberta's liquor laws do not prohibit the serving of liquor on airline flights leaving, entering or flying over the province is not likely to cause more than a ripple of comment. The serving of liquor on flights beginning and terminating in the province is still prohibited. For one thing most passengers on crowded aircraft who want a cocktail find that it takes an uncomfortable time to get it, because the stewardess in charge is usually busy warming baby bottles, serving meals or otherwise attending to the passengers.

Since there are more people in the world with good characters than with good minds, the world makes a lopsided judgment of its leaders.

We are perfectly aware of the danger in a man with a vicious mind and a small character; but we are not aware of equal, if different, dangers in a man with a lofty character and a small mind.

The brilliance of an Iago or a Richard III cannot conceal their inherent deficiencies of character; but if we study history, instead of literature, we shall find that many troubles in a nation were visited upon humanity by the well-meaning, upright man with a deplorable deficiency of mind.

For every war that has been started by an unscrupulous genius, a dozen have been started by honorable men whose narrow and rigid mentality made it impossible for them to see beyond the ends of their noses.

The tragic mistakes of the British Empire in the 18th and 19th centuries were not the result of intellectual cunning, but the stupidity of men who were not broad enough to foresee the evil consequences of colonialism and imperialism.

Indeed, in Germany, the men who paved the way for Hitler were honorable, patriotic dullards like Hindenburg, whose moral rectitude covered an abyss of ignorance and befuddlement.

We appreciate good character because we know that it means well toward us; and we suspect brilliance of mind because we know that, unless checked by a high ethical sense, it can be fatally used against us. We feel more comfortable with amiable simplicity than we do with the complex personality of a first-rate mind.

This is only natural, but it should be prudent for us to be as aware of the perils on the one side as on the other. The ideal answer, of course, is a man who has both character and brains; but a Lincoln or a Lee arises with pathetic rareness in the history of mankind.

Socrates and the Buddhists there are only three sins: ill-will, sensuality, and stupidity. We may not look upon stupidity as a sin, for it is not a voluntary act — but the consequences of a limited mind can be as damaging as the consequences of ill-will or unbridled appetites.

But as long as the world lives in fear, we shall respond to people who appeal to our irrationality. The man of character soothes our fears and gives us the faith that somehow he shall muddle through together.

In the highly organized, not to say explosive, society of the 20th century, this is scarcely a sensible or farsighted attitude to have.

Knowledge without character is wicked, and character without knowledge is weak. But we have always suffered more from the well-meaning, upright man with a deplorable deficiency of mind.

For every war that has been started by an unscrupulous genius, a dozen have been started by honorable men whose narrow and rigid mentality made it impossible for them to see beyond the ends of their noses.

Ottawa Offbeat

NDP Man Is Acid Witness Of Pearson-Dief. Vendetta

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — What Parliament Hill, with respect and perhaps even fear, knows as "The Cuttingest Tongue in the House," was slicing Prime Minister Pearson — and carving as close to the bone of truth as anybody, in or out of the Commons, has ever come.

Colin Cameron, 68-year-old New Democratic MP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, whose tongue has been honed to a deadly razor's edge through nine years on the opposition Backbenches, was dissecting the Prime Minister for what he diagnosed as "the fatal Pearson flaw."

When he laid it bare, it was this:

"The Prime Minister is constitutionally incapable of being an SOB.

Here it is from Page 7905 of Hansard:

". . . the sad part of it all is that many of the difficulties of our Prime Minister stem from his amiable, human qualities — human qualities that unfortunately in the leader of a country cannot afford.

"Putting it in short, rude terms, a Prime Minister has to be capable on occasion of being a bastard. It is unfortunate that our Prime Minister is unable to be that particular sort of person . . ."

AWARE AND BEWARE

It was a sad situation, and Mr. Cameron expressed sadness that Prime Minister in his continuing confrontation with crisis on crisis — "It's difficult to be sad when speaking directly to the Prime Minister as if they were having a private conversation [in front of Parliament and the country, too, wasn't hearing, "difficult to make decisions that are going to create antagonisms.

"It is difficult because all of us want to put off decisions and all of us hope that somehow our troubles will go away. Of course they don't, and it doesn't matter.

"But it matters tragically if the troubles of a Prime Minister do not go away because they come back to haunt him and the unhappy people of this land.

Then as a snapper to his the-Prime - Minister - can't - be-a-bastard crack, Mr. Cameron left fly with:

"I might say that the Right Honorable Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Diefenbaker) doesn't suffer from the same disability."

The New Democratic Socialist boss has been an acid observer of the Pearson-Diefenbaker feud.

The blows first became severe and beware of what he terms his "flair for insult" the first day the rivals clashed.

Diefenbaker had just become Prime Minister and Pearson, on his first day in the Commons as Liberal Leader had moved that the two Parties simply trade places so the Liberals could go back to governing without the bother of an election.

Dief demolished him with classic savagery.

PM AND PM

It was a shocking spectacle, bewailed Colin Cameron, to see Diefenbaker the butcher "rushing with such relish into the abattoir to slaughter a sitting duck already suffering from a self-inflicted wound."

Then there was the day when, after Dief had accused the NDP of propping up the Pearson government simply for the sake of "hanging desperately" onto their MP's personal pay cheques, Cameron castigated him as "that preposterous mountebank."

Now there's a fine contemptuous phrase for you — preposterous mountebank — but the Conservative Leader let it sneer by, possibly out of sheer admiration for its venom.

But if Mr. Diefenbaker didn't appear to notice the insult, he was about the only one.

For it was just a short time later that Mrs. A. C. Mackenzie, wife of Conservative Back-bencher Ian Mackenzie, was a guest at 24 Sussex Drive, the Prime Minister's official residence, and in the parlor said her "Thank you's," was about to leave when Mrs. Pearson stopped her and led her into the portico door.

"Mrs. Mackenzie," she smiled, "but aren't you the PM's daughter?"

"The PM's daughter?" responded Mrs. Mackenzie, mystified.

"Yes, of course," laughed Mrs. Pearson, "you know, PM, short form for your father's satisfyingly wonderful 'Preposterous Mountebank.'"

How does it feel to be "The Cuttingest Tongue in the House?"

"Distressing," confesses "The Tongue," "for I am a man of compassion as myself."

Paper Dress In Fashion

Kingston Whig-Standard

For years now they have been talking about paper dresses. It was bound to happen sooner or later, of course. They have been developed and, as one might have gathered from a recent film story on the process, they have become fashionable in certain parts of the world.

It is pointless to talk about this first fashion flop. The paper dress is not designed to last. It may take one or two washings, but the most it can expect is to be in the nearest wastepaper basket. Naturally the first question which occurs is: are they fire-proof? Apparently it is, so there is no need to fret on that score. However, inasmuch as it is, it might have cause to worry on another: The dresses we saw mocked on TV certainly will for as much as $200. Imagine — spending that much for anything destined in a crumpled heap into the nearest dust bin.

For the women who already have everything, obviously, the paper dress will be the answer to her prayers. Why, she arrives at a social function where some other woman is wearing identical style and for whatever it's called in this new era) she can quickly dash out, tear off the dress, toss it away and don a new model — especially if she happens to favor the cheaper lines.

Of course, one must always consider the old gaw about the early bird and the worm. Dry cleaners, for example, would find themselves bankrupt. And think of what it would do to their business if somebody came along with paper shirts for men.

He Does Fine On $18,000

Brantford Expositor

Separatist Gilles Gregoire is franker than most MPs about his parliamentary pay. "I find the $18,000 salary hopelessly inadequate," the secretary the government pays, the train pass and the free mailing privileges are all good things help," he told an interviewer.

Since Mr. Gregoire, as leader of the independence party, the Rallement National, is committed to killing Canada's federation, some might question whether this political laborer is worthy of his hire. However, with an MP's salary and fringe benefits may seem like giving comfort to the enemy. However, constitutionally, there is no way to prevent his having a foot in both camps.

Perhaps, Mr. Gregoire will find it less difficult to separate himself from the attractions of a bird-in-the-hand $18,000 a year plus and play the leader away from Ottawa. His prospects seem remote of achieving his ambition to head an independent government with evelual sovereignty over Quebec, northern New Brunswick and part of Ontario, much of Labrador and the islands off the coast of northern Quebec in Hudson Bay.

Moral Courage

Cape Breton Post

It appears that no Canadian political party has the courage and moral stamina of the Wilson Government which, with impeccable logic, proposes to impose a freeze on wages and prices in Britain. It takes international fortitude to submit to the like of that. We may wonder if Canadians have what it takes.

Butter's Last Bastion Melts, Wisconsin May Get Margarine

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Butter's last bastion was melting today after the election defeat of Wisconsin's 74-year-old arch opponent of colored oleomargarine.

Age, reapportionment and fellow politicians retired dairy farmer Earl Leverich, crusty chairman of the state Senate's agriculture committee. In Tuesday's primary election to pick candidates for the Nov. 8 general election, a legislator dedicated today repeal of the sole surviving ban in the United States on the sale of the colored butter substitute might come quickly now.

"I know that they would have quite a job to pass it if I were there," said Leverich, who has had his political career by leading a farmers' march on the state capitol during the depression to back taxes on the colored oleomargarine.

Today, however, Wisconsin is no longer the dairyland domain that it once was. Population growth and changes in the state's legislative reapportionment that zapped rural power.

Leverich, running for renomination for the first time in a realigned district, was beaten in the Republican primary by Raymond C. Johnson, a 29-year-old lawyer from urban Eau Claire.

Wisconsin's butter - margarine battle, which erupted in the late nineteenth and never has abated, has an economic ancestry. Farmers contend they can't afford to compete with the colored spread. For the consumer, there is another side to the coin.

Butter sold at 87 cents a pound Wednesday at a supermarket in a Madison shopping centre. At another supermarket within a mile, Brookfield, Ill., colored oleomargarine was priced at 26 cents a pound.

Gas stations along the Illinois-Wisconsin state line abound with signs shouting, "last stop for gas" bootlegging. So does the ban is a standing joke.

"It's sort of ridiculous to be the only state in the country that forbids the sale of colored oleo," said Assemblyman Harold Froehlich.

Froehlich, a Republican leader in the legislature's lower sport, promised a renewed effort at repeal in the 1967 session of the legislature. He predicted "I think we've got the votes to pass the bill"

Colored oleo has been banned in the state since 1895.

Civil Rights Housing Bill Meets Rebuff

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's open housing civil rights bill received its apparent death blow Wednesday when the Senate refused to invoke closure and shut off debate on the controversial measure.

Foes of the bill easily rallied the votes to block Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield's effort to end debate on a motion to put the measure before the Senate. The vote for the closure was 54 to 42, or 10 short of the two-thirds needed to invoke the Senate's debate-stopping rule and limit each member to one more hour of talk on the motion which had been before the Senate for a week.

A final plea from the president for Senator Everett Dirksen (Rep. Ill.), to support the bill was spurned by the Republican leader. Dirksen had been a key figure in passage of John son's earlier civil rights bills.

When the roll call was over, Mansfield told reporters a second debate - ending move remains a possibility. But he indicated that prospects for success in a new debate - halting bid would be dim.

Five Killed As Car Mows Down Walkers

DOMODOSSOLA, Italy (AP) — An automobile today mowed down a line of Roman Catholic students walking along a mountain road on a night pilgrimage to a nearby shrine. Five were killed and seven were injured.

Thirty - eight students were walking in single file when their column was struck by the automobile shortly after midnight.

The seminarians, ranging in age from 15 to 23, were all Italian.

Police said they were hit by an automobile coming from the opposite direction which ran into the line of marchers head-on. Reason for the accident was not immediately known.

Police said the 24-year-old driver of the car was in hospital. He was not injured but was described under shock.

Will Ask Steel Company To Justify Price Increases

OTTAWA (CP) — The Joint Commons-Senate study of rising living costs got into action Wednesday by demanding that the Steel Co. of Canada justify its proposed price increases or roll them back.

Senator David Croll (L — Ontario), joint chairman of the committee with Liberal MP Ran Basford (Vancouver-Burrard), said the corporation will be called possibly in October to demonstrate why the increases should go into effect.

He made it plain the committee's steering body took the action at Finance Minister Sharp's request. The finance minister Tuesday called on Stelco to roll back the increases.

Mr. Basford said the committee will open hearings Sept. 28 and initially dig into the food price changes and the reasons for them.

MAY CALL CHAINS

Senator Croll said he expects that in that part of the inquiry the committee will want to hear from the presidents of large food chains such as Dominion Stores, Loblaws and Steinbergs and then from the chains' suppliers.

The first series of hearings here will have as witnesses Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada; J. J. Deutsch, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, which has been doing a study of living costs, and Robert Bryce, federal Deputy finance minister.

At some point, said Mr. Basford, the committee will want to examine the effects of price fixing, advertising and excessive competition or lack of competition. Another area of study would be clothing, shelter, housing and rents.

Three Trapped By Mine Fire

ST. CLAIR'S VILLE, Ohio (AP) — Veteran miners said three men missing had a "one in a million" chance of survival in the hell fire of a burning coal mine, but rescue crews pressed every effort to get to them.

In Logy's pre - dawn hours workers ran a foam - making fire-fighting machine into an entrance of the slope mine where the men were presumed trapped since a snapped power cable touched off the fire Wednesday morning.

Odds were that miners Tom Terretti, 43, William Adams, 30, and Keith Spicer, 26, had been dead soon after the fire began in the Morgan Mining Co. works, 15 miles southwest of here.

Hi! The extension cord to my electric frying pan is a bit of a nuisance. You know, flopping about in the cupboard and all that. A really good show of a ladder is a frozen juicecan. Pop out both ends, stuff in the folded cord, plunk it out of harms way right inside the pan itself, sitting there on the shelf!

The jet turned back to Shannon Airport. The baby was delivered by Nick Muller, 40, steward on the Pan American Airways charter plane.

Canadian Girls Enjoy Work as UN Tour Guides

By DAVE PIKE

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — "Well, good heavens," said the awed woman with the shopping bag, camera and three kids.

"I just never would have believed that those Russian astronauts were so fat."

She and a dozen other tourists were standing in the visitors' lobby of the United Nations, staring up at a small satellite the Soviet Union had donated to the UN.

Judith Mann, 23 - year - old Torontonian who was their UN tour guide, smiled warmly and with a few well - chosen words put the situation right.

"This was serious," Miss Mann said recently as she talked in the delegates' lounge about her job. "A lot of visitors to the UN don't know what is going on in the world around them. That's one reason why we guides are sort of diplomats here, too."

Miss Mann is one of two Canadian girls among the 70 tour guides who spring visitors about the UN, explaining its functions.

The other Canadian is Anita Flaw, a black-haired, brown-eyed beauty from Kingston, Ont.

Hundreds of girls are interviewed each year for the job. Virtually all of them just happen to be in New York as tourists, and most of them stay after having taken a tour of the UN.

MUST BE BILINGUAL

To qualify, they must be bilingual, have a university degree or equivalent, be aged 20 to 30 — and they must be pretty.

Miss Mann, who speaks French, graduated in 1964 from the University f Toronto, where she was a philosophy major. Miss Flaw, who can get by in French and Russian, also graduated in 1964, from McGill University in Montreal where she majored in political science.

The guides are limited to two one-year contracts.

They work an eight-hour shift five days a week, taking up to five tours a day. Each morning, they receive a 45-minute lecture on current affairs.

The pay isn't much. Miss Mann, for example, earns only $330 a month, which in New York calls for tight budgeting.

To make ends meet, most of the girls share apartments, and there's no dearth of handsome young men at the UN to buy them the occasional dinner and a night on the town.

Miss Mann shares a apartment with two former guides, a Norwegia and an American. Miss Flaw lives with a friend from the "outside world," Jo-Girth Marcos, a girlhood friend from Kingston.

AT DROP OF HAT

"The guides will hold a party at the drop of a hat," says Miss Mann, who often writes material for revues they put on at the gatherings. "We try to take advantage of as much of what New York has to offer"

Most of the guides' social world is made up of friends from the UN or the New York international community.

Miss Mann, a vivacious, blue-eyed redhead who loves theatre and opera, "would like one day to take a slight sabre for myself as a writer. I've written lots of short stories and light verse and I've my fair share of rejection slips."

Her tour of duty is up next June. If she doesn't land a job, perhaps as a VIP hostess at the Montreal world's fair, she might zip off to London and teach.

A career? "If, by the time I'm 25, I must, I'll take on a career to support myself."

One former guide was currently playing on Broadway in a revival of Show Boat.

One of the highlights of Miss Mann's UN career occurred earlier this year when she took the new Canadian ambassador to the UN, George Ignatieff, on an hour-long personal tour, then did a repeat with his two sons.

"It's terribly exciting to work here," says Miss Mann. "It's like being at the centre of the world."

MET MAY GO

NEW YORK (AP)—A judge declared unconstitutional Wednesday a New York state law that has prevented demolition of the old Metropolitan Opera house. Justice Arthur Klein of the State Supreme Court said designating the 57-year-old theatre as an official landmark would have provided a constitutional basis for forbidding its demolition. But since the city landmarks commission refused to so designate it, the law amounted to taking private property without just compensation, Klein said. Klein ordered the city to issue a demolition permit, but temporarily stayed an order to permit appeal of his ruling.

Ann Landers

Teachers Inherit Many Unwanted Duties

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When will the public educators learn that their function is to educate. Period. Character building and social adjustment should be handled in the home. Parents know their children better than the teacher knows them — especially when there are 30 to 35 students in the class.

What gives these egg-heads the right to take over our children as substitutes for the children they never had?

Teachers tell our children about sex, Freud, politics and morals. Our children are confused enough without having two sets of authorities to guide them — one at home and one at school.

Please advise teachers to stick to their jobs — teaching and grading students, and to lay off the psychiatry and so-called "character moulding." — TIME FOR A CHANGE.

DEAR TIME: You sound like a parent who is having trouble with her children — and I'm not surprised. The size of that chip on your shoulder indicates there must be some wood higher up.

You are right when you say teachers have enough to do without doubling as wailing walls, leaning posts and substitute parents — and the fact is they don't go looking for these added responsibilities. They inherit them by default, my friend.

Many children who can't communicate with their parents find a sympathetic ear at school. And thank heaven for it, Mother. You should be grateful.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am male, under 30, with a three-year-old motherless son. My wife died last year. Her folks took the boy with the understanding that I would take him back when and if I remarried.

Several months ago I became interested in a woman I will call Constance. I told her all about the boy and she said she would love to raise him. Two weeks ago we became engaged.

Last night Constance told me she has decided she would never be comfortable with another woman's child. I love my son and want him with me. I also love this woman. Do you think I could be happy with her under these conditions? — MICHIGANDER.

DEAR GANDER: No — and it's too bad you picked such a goose. But consider yourself fortunate that she was honest. If you marry the woman, you'd surely grow to resent her because she refused to make a home for your son. I say keep looking, fella. There's somebody out there who wants you both.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why did you try to deceive that wife into believing that those unexplained lipstick stains on her husband's shirt collar might have been made by a woman who accidentally fell against him in an elevator? I've been riding office elevators for over 30 years and I've never seen it happen — even once.

My husband carried on an affair with a woman for over seven years. She used to plant lipstick stains on the back of his collar and other places where I'd be sure to see them but he wouldn't. She slipped combs and hairpins into his pockets.

I never once mentioned my "discoveries" and finally my husband broke off with her. He is dead now and I am thankful I stayed with him. He told me many times how grateful he was that I had the good sense he lacked. — NO REGRETS.

DEAR NO: What you did required more than good sense. It also called for courage and discipline. Those three graces are a winning combination.

Woman Forces Former Speaker Into Retirement

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Mrs. Margaret Heckler, 53, a mother of three young children who forced former Speaker Joseph W. Martin (Rep.) Mass. of the U.S. House of Representatives into retirement, says her husband is unbearably supporting her bid for Congress.

A lawyer now completing her second two-year term on the executive council that advises the governor of Massachusetts, Mrs. Heckler won an aggressive primary campaign to wrest the Republican nomination from Martin, 81, who has served 42 years in Congress.

Final returns from the 379 precincts in the 10th Massachusetts congressional district gave Mrs. Heckler 15,643 votes to 12,218 for Martin in voting to choose the district's Republican candidate in the November congressional election.

In November, Mrs. Heckler will oppose Patrick H. Harrington, a lawyer who won a three-way race for the. Democratic nomination.

MR. AND MRS. DENNIS F. LLOYD

Lloyd — Mousseau

Rev. Rufus Debono performed the ceremony at Holy Rosary Church, Belleville, on September 10, 1966, at 10:00 a.m. which united in marriage Therese Lucien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aime Mousseau, R. R. 1, Foxboro, and Dennis Francis Lloyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lloyd of Belleville. Mr. E. Reid played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full-length white satin organza over tulle net with bodice and illy point sleeves of Chantilly lace. The gown featured a scalloped square neckline cut to a V at the back and a full flared skirt caught up at the hemline with a large rosette. Attached to her headdress of Guipure lace, seed pearls and crystals was a lace mantilla veil flowing into a train effect. She carried a bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses.

Miss Susan Noel of Toronto was maid of honor. She wore a gown of yellow organza over taffeta with sheath skirt embroidered with yellow and white daisies. The bodice had a scoop neckline and cummerbund and the elbow length sleeves were bell-shaped. Her headpiece was a flat bow of matching organza attached to a shoulder length illusion veil. The gowns of the bridesmaids, Miss Betty Reid and Miss Vivian Lloyd, sister of the bride, were styled similarly to that of the maid of honor, but had plain skirts. All carried bouquets of yellow and white mums.

Miss Jennifer Lloyd, the bridegroom's niece, was flower girl. She was attired in a white dress with yellow cummerbund and yellow bow headpiece, and carried a basket of yellow and white mums.

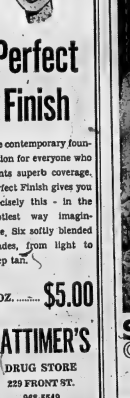
MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH GEORGE LEE

Lee — O'Shea

At Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church in Hastings recently, Kathleen Anne Michele O'Shea became the bride of Joseph George Lee. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. J. F. Coughlan of Peterborough, the bride's cousin. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. O'Shea of Hastings and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lee of Belleville.



Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of pure silk peau de soie, designed with Empire lines, rounded neckline and elbow-length Puritan sleeves. Wide bands of imported Guipure lace enhanced the bodice and sleeves and bordered her chapel length train. Her headdress of Alencon lace petals accented with pearls and Bavarian crystals held her embroidered three-tier cathedral length veil of pure silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet centred with ivory cymbidium orchids, surrounded by feathered carnations, stephanotis, lily of the valley and English ivy.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Gerri O'Shea as maid of honor; Miss Elizabeth Lee of Belleville, the bridegroom's sister and Miss Gail Milliken of Kingston, as bridesmaids. The flower girl was Virginia Lawless of Cobourg, the bride's niece. They wore identical gowns of aqua satin peau, designed with Empire bodice, rounded neckline and softly-ruffled elbow-length sleeves. The bodice and sleeves were finished with narrow bands of lace, and the maid of honor and the bridesmaids had long matching panels extending from bolero fly bows at the back of the neckline. They wore matching headdresses of velvet petals and satipeau and carried nosegays of aqua and white baby mums.

The bridegroom was attended by Lawrence Soden of Trenton. His brother-in-law, George Flynn of Belleville, and the bride's brother-in-law, Gerald Lawless of Cobourg, were ushers.

At the wedding dinner at Hotel Havelock, the guests were received by the bride's mother wearing a dress and jacket of teal blue silk brocade, with matching feathered pillbox hat, black patent accessories and orchid corsage. A MOBILE is fun to watch and fun to make. Cut simple shapes from heavy leaves, fish, hands, — out of light cardboard. Cover with decorative scraps of old wrapping paper or wallpaper. Punch holes and hang on different length of black button thread. Attach threads to crossed wood on dowels or even to a wire coat-hanger. Place your mobile by a window and the movement is delightful. Energetic, Youthful-Looking Grandmother Heads Canada's Delegation to UN Assembly

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — If you want to get a job done, the saying goes, give it to a busy man. Or woman.

Such a person is Margaret Fullerton, 63 energetic, youthful - looking grandmother, who has been named by Prime Minister Pearson to Canada's 10-member delegation at the United Nations General Assembly session starting Sept. 30.

Mrs. Fullerton is a member of London's board of control with special responsibility for the city's centennial project, a concert-convention hall. Last November she ran unsuccessfully for the Liberals in the federal election.

She is active in United Church affairs, the University of Western Ontario Women's Club and the London Council of Women. And she has been involved with UN seminars held annually at the university.

In her spare time, what she has of it, she likes to play tennis with daughter Jean and son-in-law Eugene Dorey, enjoys evenings going to football games and playing bridge.

During the UN session in New York, expected to last about two months, she will represent Canada on one or another of the committees. Her preference is for the economic committee — "I'm particularly interested in projects and finances of all kinds."

TOPPED THE POLL

The wife of a retired public school principal, Edwin Fullerton, she regularly heads the list in municipal polls at election time. Since 1954, when the former Latin teacher tried her hand at politics, she hasn't suffered a defeat in a civic election.

Although she first ran for office because the London Council of Women thought there should be a woman in city council, Mrs. Fullerton isn't convinced that more women in government would necessarily mean better government.

"I don't like to generalize. It would all depend on the women. You don't elect anyone to office simply because she's a woman."

Conversely, Mrs. Fullerton takes issue with those who feel certain types of positions should remain closed to women.

The daughter of a United Church minister, she was brought up to think "I could do anything I wanted to do."

"There was never a hint that because I was a girl there were limits to my capabilities."

The family attitude, she thinks, may be partly attributed to the fact that her maternal forbears were Quakers, women who were used to leadership and responsibilities.

Various Shades of Purple, Green Dominate Show

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP) — Various shades of purple and green dominated the boutique collection for fall and winter shown Wednesday by Jacqueline Fauvillant in an arty garret apartment in Old Montreal.

And despite any predictions from her native land, the young French - born designer kept skirts a short throughout the showing, the second since she opened Boutique Bonsecours in the city's old section last year.

Some ensembles were from Mme. Fauvillant's new boutique for the younger set—Boutique Jeunesse—which opened in the downtown shopping district last month.

The show opened with a short wool coat in amethyst, with snaps and high collar that gave it a Russian look. It was worn with a simple pink and green diagonally - patterned wool dress, white net stockings and apaced, low-heeled shoes in the matching purple shade.

ZIPPERS AT BACK

Mme. Fauvillant's grape mohair coat also had a high turtle-neck collar and fastened with a full-length zipper. It was worn with an eggplant dress with matching lilac and prune plaid trim.

Another amethyst coat was trimmed with bright pink pockets and collar, accompanied by a dress of purple and pink squares.

The popular military look showed up in a white dress of satin and vinyl, trimmed with authentic Canadian Army brass buttons.

A dark green wool suit had diagonal lines indicating a barely-inserted zipper. Another suit in violet, pink and olive had a free-floating front panel that were shown with knee - high boots.

The versatile satin and vinyl fabric was used by the designer for most of her evening wear.

MATERIALS MYSTIFY

A full-length evening coat in gold satin and vinyl unzippered to make a short evening coat, worn with a matching rocket dress of a mauve, blue and gold-striped metallic material.

The cocktail dress had short string straps and was several inches above the knee.

A full-length dress of blue-grey silk chiffon also had a halter neckline and was trimmed with horizontal and diagonal strips of brighter blue sequins.

A silk and wool one-piece pant suit of gold and black was trimmed with green ostrich feathers and described by the designer as a theatre ensemble.

Other pant suits were also bell-bottom style and came in navy and prune and red and yellow with double - breasted suit jackets.

LEMON JELLY ROLL

LEMON JELLY ROLL:

4 large eggs — yolks and whites seperated.
¾ cup granulated sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
¾ cup sifted cake or all-purpose flour
1 tsp. single-acting (or ¾ tsp. double-acting) baking powder
¼ tsp. salt

In your large mixing bowl beat the egg yolks with the sugar until very thick and pale. Add vanilla and beat again. Sift together the sifted flour, baking powder and salt and stir in until smoothly blended. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in until smoothly incorporated. Butter generously a 15½ x 10½" teflon jelly roll pan. (If desired you may line it with buttered wax paper but I found it was not necessary.) If your pan is not teflon, line it on bottom with buttered wax paper. Pour in batter and smooth to. Bake at exactly 375 deg. Fahr. for exactly 14 min. Meanwhile have ready a clean tea towel generously sprinkled with sifted icing sugar. As soon as cake is taken from oven, loosen edges by gently running blunt-edged knife around sides. Turn out on icing-sugar sprinkled towel. Roll up, enclosing towel in roll, and let cool. Unroll and fill with Slimcrafted Lemon Filling: Mix together thoroughly in small saucepan one-half cup plus 1 tbsp. sugar, 2 tbsps. cornstarch and a pinch of salt. Stir in one-half cup hot water, 2 tbsps. lemon lemon juice and 1 or 2 tbsps. butter. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick. Remove from heat and cool. Spread on unrolled cake, thinly toward open end. Roll up cake, omitting towel this time, of course, and cool cake in towel to set. Serve on oblong cake plate.

A great accomplishment, especially for amateur bakers.

You see I want to simplify my jelly roll making for our timid young cooks. I like a cream filling in jelly roll so decided to simplify that.

So yesterday, with my four-year-old granddaughter Jennifer Ann (Mrs. Donnelly) I made a jelly roll in an oiled but buttered teflon pan and filled it with a simple lemon filling. It turned out of the pan satisfactorily, Arch critic Dale gave it his seuling approval.

Brief Garment Peels Down The Middle

LONDON (AP) — The designer of a way-out new suit for sunning and swimming offered some delicious evidence Wednesday in favor of the banana split, a brief little garment that peels down the middle.

The evidence consisted of a shapely model exposing lots of bare skin while wearing the banana split.

By us-zipping a zipper— which started at her bosom and ended six inches below her waist—the model generated such gasps from the audience viewing bathing suits for next summer, offered by a Swedish manufacturer.

Jean Rook, fashion expert for The Sun, says: "It could put the bikini out of business if only because no chap is going to settle for the horizontal bit of a girl exposed by a bikini when he could have a vertical bit of a girl like this."

Rest of Us Underestimate Ambition of Arctic Residents

By JANE BECKER

INUVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — "These people are more ambitious than we give them credit for" says George Nordstrom. "I doubt if people in the south with the same education would have done as well."

Mr. Nordstrom, one of two co - operative development officers with the department of northern affairs in the Mackenzie district of the Northwest Territories, was talking of the fur g a r m e n t co - operative formed three years ago among the Eskimos and Indians at Aklavik, on the Mackenzie River delta.

He could have been referring to all 22 northern co-operatives, stretching from Grise Fiord on the tip of Ellesmere Island to Fort Resolution, 60 miles north of the Alberta border.

Co-operatives, most less than a decade old, are one of the most encouraging signs t h a t northern natives, tumbled from their traditional life by southern infiltration, can be shown the route back to an economically productive life without dependence on a white employer.

Northern co-ops, some started by the Northern Affairs department, some by the Co-Operative Union of Canada and a few up by the natives themselves, now produce and market everything from handicrafts to lumber. To date they have sold $2,000,000 worth of goods, and there is no sign of a slackening pace.

The fur garment co-op, begun by the northern affairs department, now is being bought from the government by its members.

ANIMALS ABOUND

They make parkas, mukluks and other fur garments and small furry souvenirs from the muskrats, Arctic hares and wolverines that abound in the area.

This year the co-op, managed by Fred Greenland, a Loucheux Indian, paid out $10,000 in wages to its 30 workers and bought 11,000 muskrat pelts from trappers.

The co-op has been only one factor in Aklavik's revival from a forgotten town. In Fort Resolution, the territorial government and others are basking on co-ops as the answer to revive a listless settlement.

Once an active trading centre, Fort Resolution began to die when t r a n s p o r t activity moved east from the Slave River to the vast Mackenzie system. With no ready work and little incentive, Resolution's 700 residents, mostly Chipewyan Indians, ran up staggering welfare bills. Two years ago the territorial government hired an employee of the Co-Operative Union of Canada to look for a solution.

The result was a sawmill and lumber p r o d u c t s operation which now employs about 30 men. One side result has been a renewed building program in the settlement. A handicrafts co-op has also begun.

"We're still talking m o r e than we're doing," said Albert Vail, the co-op manager. "But you'd hardly recognize the old town."

PAYMENTS DROP

Welfare payments in Resolution dropped to about half what they were a year ago in January, and the decline has continued.

At Inuvik, a group of Eskimos started their own housing co-op because they were fed up with the federal government's housing arrangements.

One of the houses is occupied by Elija Menarik, manager of the Inuvik radio station, and his wife.

In this planned government community on the Mackenzie, 30 miles from the Arctic Ocean, only people hired from "outside" for government jobs are eligible to rent government houses which are provided with heat, water and sewer services through Inuvik's enormously expensive utilidor.

Everyone else must build his own house where he can, or rent a "512," nickname for the prefabricated 512-square-foot government dwelling for northerners in the unserviced section of the settlement.

"The 512s were wet in summer, iced up in winter and were so cold many children spent a lot of time in the hospital," said Charlie Smith, an Alaska Eskimo who started the housing co-op.

BUILD ON OUTSKIRTS

The co - op was originally formed to pool resources and buy lots near the utilidor. Told there was no such land available, members decided to build anyway on the unserviced hills side above the town.

Shopping for the best deal, they bought pre-cut houses from an Edmonton firm which incorporated several features to combat Inuvik's frigid climate: four-inch wall insulation, above-ground basements and a plastic film below the flooring to keep out ground cold.

Financing is done through the government's Eskimo loan fund, which provides loans up to $7,000, repayable over 15years.

Today the co-op's 20 houses are among the best-looking in Inuvik. Members still hope the utilidor will reach them some day.

Meanwhile co-ops continue to fill the long-range stated objective of keeping northerners in the North until the real economic boom arrives, so they will be around to share in it.

the search for a Nationalist solution.

The Canadian mediation effort emerged last Friday after three days of conflicting speeches.

Premier Hitler in his first compromise proposals at that point, warning in advance that he had approached a new subject in a Commonwealth discussion with more doubt about any ability to contribute anything of practical value to its clarification or solution."

Five days later, the Canadian proposals were battered out of shape, but some elements remained in the communique.

British papers paid little attention to the Canadian part, But The Times gave Pearson a personal accolade, saying the communique was "the work of the drafting skill and the diplomatic efforts of Mr. Lester Pearson. . . ."

Pearson himself said the fact that the communique had been agreed on was a hopeful sign, despite the failure to reach total agreement.

"But I don't want to be guilty of self-deception . . . this has been a very difficult conference for the Commonwealth."

He said he thought differences within the Commonwealth had been reduced by the meeting and a solution to the Rhodesian problem had been brought closer.

Marines Land Just South Of Buffer Zone

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. marines landed by sea and air today in an assault against North Vietnamese troops just below the demilitarized zone that separates North and South Vietnam.

First reports said the marines encountered no opposition.

The marines hit the beach three miles south of the once-neutral buffer zone at daybreak.

Their drive was against the reorganized 304th North Vietnamese army division, which had been badly mauled up by marines last July in Operation Hastings fought just south of the demilitarized zone.

The marines came ashore in landing craft from three ships while helicopters ferried other marines eight miles inland.

More than 1,200 marines were reported in the landing.

Maurice Strong's Pay Cut Of $173,000 No Sacrifice; Is Going Where Action Is

By ROSEMARY SPEERS

MONTREAL (CP)—"All my life I've gone where the action is," Maurice Strong says. Now he claims it's in Ottawa.

At the age of 37 he will take a pay cut to $27,500 from $200,000 this October when he gives up the presidency of Montreal's billion-dollar Power Corporation of Canada to become director of Canada's foreign aid program.

"I don't look on my move as a personal sacrifice," he said in an interview. "It's never a sacrifice to do what you want."

And what he has really wanted for the last few years, he says, is to take a responsible part in foreign affairs.

A two-year trip with his wife to trouble spots in 20 Asian and African countries during the early '30s convinced Mr. Strong the problems of the underdeveloped countries are fundamental to our times.

Returning to Canada he assigned to the foreign service and impulsively was turned down because he lacked a university degree. But through succeeding years of business success he never lost the hankering to go overseas aid.

"I was sick of being an onlooker. Some months broke. I wanted to be directly involved. I was one of those men whose main interest is his hobby."

QUICKLY EVOLVED

The "hobby" began inconspicuously on a business return from Africa when he asked the local YMCA worker if he had anything to do.

He shortly found himself president of the National Council of YMCAs, a member of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs and adviser to the Canadian Unesco delegation to Paris, and the Company of Young Canadians.

Meanwhile the way he developed international connections with the external affairs department by doing a government series for the natural gas potential in Nigeria.

All of this wasn't enough and when Mr. Strong joined Power Corporation in 1964—it has tripled in value since then—he told the directors he would not stay in business for more than another five years.

He gives up his control of the interlocking directorates of 26 companies in his October move to Ottawa to replace Herbert Moran, who will become Canada's ambassador to Japan.

With his small moustache and pin-stripe suits Mr. Strong, a father of three daughters and two sons, looks more like an unassuming clerk than a man who has large and restless ever ties.

STOWAWAY AT 12

But Mr. Strong has moved up in the business world with giant strides ever since he ran away from his Oak Lake, Man., family home at age 12 and he has never yet been satisfied. He has no illusions hope for his new job.

"For the first time the challenge is going to be big enough. I think I've finally found something I can devote my life to."

Sitting in his comfortable Place Ville Marie office high above Montreal's skyline, he can smile now at the impulses that made him leave home and stow away on the Canada Steamships Lines' Noronic.

"I couldn't take it. I was always just loved adventure too much. Of course, I was caught but by steadying up my five years I managed to talk myself into a job as a galley swab for the summer."

He returned to Oak Lake to finish high school and then was off again—this time to a job with the Hudson's Bay Co. in the Arctic.

After that it was a quick succession of steps from a junior job with the UN secretariat at New York to statistical work analyzing oil and mining securities to, at age 22, the vice-presidency of Argus Corporation Ltd.

"I've always been lucky," he said. "And I've worked hard."

WARY OF BUREAUCRACY

The skills he will bring to the foreign aid department are the administrative and organizational abilities that have made him a man whom economists look when they need a top hatchewan, a Liberal, spared the federal Liberal government little criticism, especially over the threatened loss of Saskatchewan's equalization grant.

No Hope

EXPECTS BACKDOWN

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia said in one breath that Ottawa will back down on its tax proposals, "just like medicare." But later in the day, he predicted that the federal government will receive the starting date of medicare to next July 1. This would reveal that Ottawa has never really intended to put it off at all, he said.

The federal themes on tax-sharing is to let the provinces have about 50 per cent of existing federal personal income tax. If they want more they must make their own levies and account for them to the taxpayer.

Quebec asked for 100 per cent of personal income tax, estate taxes and taxes of resource-based corporations. Ontario will bargain for more personal income tax, but isn't saying precisely how much.

The new equalization formula was under fire too.

Among the "have" provinces, British Columbia, Alberta and British Columbia—only Ontario refrained from criticizing Ottawa.

Among the rest, most of whom count on equalization for a major part of their revenue, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia professed themselves well pleased.

The formula would bring per-capita provincial revenues from a assortment of tax sources up to a national average.

PROVINCES TO MOVE IN

A fundamental change in the basis for hospital insurance and other health assistance for the elderly and unemployed would see federal payments based on 50 per cent of each provincial share of personal income tax. The provinces are offered full control over these special measures as a federal response the claim that Ottawa and should shortly breach the half billion mark if the Pearson government continues its unrestrained course.

Ottawa, Ontario, said it added up a general application for the "opting-out" formula developed to let the militant elements in Quebec.

Both Manitoba and Alberta complained that Ottawa imposed these programs in the first place and the provinces would be no more inclined in future than in the past to establish their own social and economic priorities.

One point of agreement that did emerge Wednesday was on the question of the future of committee itself, and that was a one-word prospect: Work.

Most observers felt it would its sitting—originally scheduled to end today—into Friday if necessary and another meeting will be held in October.

The provinces also indicated to wish to exchange Prime Minister Pearson for Mr. Sharp as a bargaining adversary in the forthcoming meeting, a better deal.

That would mean keeping all issues over until the full-scale federal-provincial conferences in November.

Successful Living

Books Sent to India Serve Many Needs

DEAR DORIS: How very good of you to take an interest in our needs here! I have been thinking more and more of the potential for a flow of literature from the West to the East. There are as many people who read English in India as in Canada.

DORIS CLARK

About books, I should say that paperbacks of almost any kind, but perhaps not who-done-its, are good. . . I am hesitant about other than paperbacks because of the high cost of mailing. However, really current works would be very good; also text books, of not too old vintage.

Magazines — particularly "Guideposts," "Faith at Work" and "Home Life." Oh yes, "Reals." If people are willing to part with them. Pictures — Christian pictures as on covers of calendars, etc. Greeting cards — always without cutting name out. When put into a box and laid around without all the corners together they come best, then box into a plastic bag before the brown paper covering. One box was recently wrapped in a little piece of cloth and came beautifully.

All this stuff should be sent printed matter rate and unregistered. We do not want church magazines such as "Observer" or Sunday School papers. They are too much geared to Western thinking.

The profits of all this go to help many people in many ways, hospital bills of the needy, etc; the people who do the work on fixing the cards for use here, and those who sell the goods. It is so good to have a way for extra earnings of very-low-incomed people — getting less than $20 per month for their-selves and their families; so much better than "hand outs." — FRANCES E. STEVENSON, United Church of Northern India, 14 Old Sehore Road, Indore, India.

DEAR MISS STEVENSON: We'll spread the word. Whenever we mention such a need, women right across Canada heave to and get some parcels off in the mail.

DEAR DORIS: I don't agree with M.Y.G. Because teen-agers have more freedom now than ever before. To me it's not the teen-agers that are trampled on, lowered and degraded but the parents.

We don't seem to understand that it's our parents who worry night and day about us, and although their ideas are seemingly "old-fashioned" we can do nothing but respect them. I think M.Y.G.'s father is correct in not letting her roam the streets, night or afternoon.

If you have some specified place to go by all means go, but to just walk the streets is a definite sign of "pick-up" to teen-age boys. I think, also, that M.Y.G. is lucky to have responsible parents who worry about her welfare. — FELLOW M.Y.G.

DEAR FELLOW MEMBER: How nice when a Member of the Younger Generation can see and appreciate another generation's point of view!

(It does seem as if a teen-ager who walks the streets is asking to be classed with street-walkers.)

DEAR DORIS: The season of weddings is in full swing, and with it the expensive gift-giving by relatives, friends and acquaintances of the happy couple. But the point I wish to make is that many of the brides who so eagerly accept their wedding gifts forget to thank the donors.

At least they forget until just before Christmas, when they hastily purchase a box of cheap cards and write "thank you for the wedding gift," sending same in an unsealed envelope. — AN ACQUAINTANCE.

* * *

DEAR ACQUAINTANCE: You've got to be kidding. A bride who doesn't take the time to write a personal note of appreciation doesn't deserve the fuss and thoughtfulness of a gift. In my book, an impersonal thank-you card is not good enough. As for a pre-Christmas catch-all — forget it!

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1966

Clarke T. Rollins Unanimous Choice As PC Candidate For Hastings Riding

Clarke T. Rollins, M.P.P. Hastings East, was unanimously nominated to contest the new Hastings Riding for the Progressive Conservatives in the next provincial election last night at the new riding's first convention attended by a capacity crowd of about 400 persons at the Madoc Armories.

The nomination of Mr. Rollins came as no surprise. He has been member for Hastings East since 1959. When Hastings P.C. president, Ken Smith, called for written nominations from the floor, 56 were received, all for Mr. Rollins.

The Honorable J. W. Spooner, Minister, Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs, guest speaker and reporters he doesn't expect Premier Robarts to call a Provincial general election until the fall of 1967.

The new riding of Hastings replaces Hastings East under the redistribution of provincial ridings. It includes all of Hastings County except Belleville, Trenton and Sidney Township.

Mr. Spooner told the convention delegates that we require more individual devotion to building a democratic world where men and women can live in peace and happiness.

"There is no advantage in change for the sake of change," he said. "The real need is for individual preparedness, followed by individual thinking, followed by co-operative action. That alone is the road to any measure of success."

CO-OPERATIVE EFFORT NEEDED

He said we hear talk about changes in forms of government and there will be changes, "but there is no evidence to show we can build a stronger nation except by the co-operative efforts of each and every municipality in this province."

Mr. Spooner said today's means of communication and transportation tend to make us much more aware of the world events, and, "perhaps also tend to remove some of the basic differences in people from different geographic areas.

"We have become a real part of a province-wide community, and it is not too much to say we are fast becoming members of a world-wide community whether we like it or not.

"All this speed has brought with it a great increase in personal responsibility. We can no longer be interested only in what happens in our own immediate community."

He said there is a great need for planning together, "planning for the type of community, the kind of society in which our children and grandchildren are to live."

Mr. Spooner was one of two Ontario cabinet ministers on hand. The other was Hon. John Richard Simonett; Minister of Energy and Resources Management.

Mr. Rollins thanked the delegates for his nomination and promised he would do his best to win the riding in the next election.

"I hope the people in Belleville and Trenton don't think of me now as the Hastings candidate. I am still your representative, and will continue to work for you in every way I can."

He said he had been criticized by some people he never knew as the member who made a speech in the House, but he pointed out he has made his views heard in the caucus, and on several committees. He was a member of six of the 11 committees in the last session.

He was described by Mr. Spooner as "one of the busiest members in the Government. Not only in the sessions, but on the committees and with his constituents."

Among those to congratulate Mr. Rollins was Lee Grills, MP Hastings South. He promised Clarke he would do whatever he could to help him and his riding in the future.

Mr. Grills drew the largest laugh of the night when he said, "I can't really say I bring news from Ottawa to you tonight, because actually there hasn't been any good news from there for a long time."

Hees Offers Suggestions On Procedure

VICTORIA (CP) — George Hees, Conservative MP for Northumberland, Wednesday night made several suggestions for making Parliament "more effective."

"In making these suggestions, I do not mean to infer that Parliament is not doing a good job," said Mr. Hees. "It is. But I believe there is nothing so good that it cannot be improved."

He told the annual meeting of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce that electing "the best people available" to the Commons is a first step in this direction.

He said that for this purpose the amount of money a candidate is allowed to spend in an election should be strictly limited to a figure based on "the number of electors in the constituency." A candidate's election would be nullified if his expenditures exceeded this amount, said Mr. Hees.

HE'D CUT SPEECHES

Speeches in Parliament might be limited to 20 minutes instead of the present 40, he said.

Mr. Hees expressed agreement with suggestions he said had been made recently "that the daily proceedings of Parliament should be televised and a permanent gallery each evening over the national network so that the people can be brought into closer touch with what is going on in Parliament."

He also said that "adequate research facilities should be made available to all members."

SEIZE ILLEGAL GOLD

BOMBAY (AP)—Customs officials said Wednesday they seized smuggled gold worth nearly $1,600,000 in a series of raids, many in fashionable apartments. Some arrests were made. Import of gold is banned in India.

3-Year Contract Accepted by Steel Workers

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—A general membership meeting of Local 2251, United Steelworkers of America, voted Wednesday to accept a three-year contract with Algoma Steel Corp.

Announcement of the acceptance by the 6,400-man local came after two days of voting. A strike deadline had been set for midnight Wednesday night.

The announcement said 3,141 voted in favor and 1,863 against accepting the contract which calls for wage increases from 31 to 37 cents hourly depending on job classification.

Lowest paid workers will receive $2.51 an hour by Aug. 1 1968 and the highest paid class will get $4.51.

All workers will receive a 12 cents-an-hour increase retroactive to Aug. 1 when the old contract expired. A life insurance policy offered to married workers will be increased to $10,000 from $7,000. Single workers will get $1,000 added for each dependent.

The three-year contract with Algoma Steel surpasses the agreement ratified by 11,000 Steel Company of Canada workers in Hamilton recently.

13 Members Support Leader In His Stand

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Andrew Thomson, Ontario Liberal leader, has an overwhelming majority of his provincial caucus members behind him in his stand against postponing the federal medical care program.

It says 13 of the 22 caucus members are solidly supporting their leader. Named as supporters were: Elmer Sopha, Sudbury; Jarry Worton, Wellington South; Edward Sargent, Grey North; Jack Spence, Kent East; Archer Wren, Essex North; Stanley Farquhar, Algoma-Manitoulin; Horace Racine, Ottawa East; Donald Paterson, Essex South; Leonard Braithwaite, Etobicoke; James Trotter, Parkdale; Farquhar Oliver, Grey South; Vernon Singer, Downsview and Ross Whicher, Perth.

Finance Minister Sharp announced last week that the medical care program has been postponed one year until July 1, 1968.

Controversy Widens Over How Thinly U.S. Can Spread Her Resources to Police World

WASHINGTON (CP) — From the time the United States began its major manpower expansion in Viet Nam early in 1965, there has been debate in the country on just how far its resources can be spread in global police work.

Reservations, although centred initially among the critics of the large-scale American intervention, now have spread to some of the voices most hawkish on Viet Nam.

One reason is that the end of the war, and of the American buildup, is not in sight despite U.S. battle deaths of nearly 5,000, a daily bill at this stage of about $22,000,000, and troop commitments surpassing the 300,000 mark.

Further, as State Secretary Dean Rusk told a congressional committee recently, the United States has some 40 defence treaty around the world. In any case, "no would-be aggressor should suppose that the absence of a defence treaty, congressional declaration or U.S. military presence grants immunity to aggression," Rusk declared.

Rusk, as a consequence, was recalled for further questioning, led by Democratic Senators Mike Mansfield and 12 colleagues presented a resolution proposing the United States to start hauling from Europe some of the 363,000 American troops still there.

President Johnson opposed Mansfield's suggestion on grounds that it would encourage Britain to start paring its army east of the Rhine at a faster-than-desired pace, deprive the West of disarmament - bargaining leverage with the Soviet Union, and inflame West German fears about being left in the lurch. Mansfield has delayed action accordingly.

But much more than the availability of American military manpower is involved. Rising inflation is a factor.

Symington, Stennis and others also are worried about the dollar drain, so magnified by the massive cost of the war. The United States has virtually written off its campaign to trim this outpouring.

The United States, in a psychologically vital stand promises to redeem every outstanding American dollar for its equivalent in gold. France, West Germany and others have been cashing in steadily.

The declining U.S. gold stocks of about $13,300,000,000 could be confronted, in theory, by short-term foreign holdings of American dollars totalling some $37,000,000,000.

Meanwhile, the U.S. trade surplus is shrinking because war-inspired prosperity at home is running up the bill for imported goods.

United Church Condemns Viet Nam War, Approves Force to Oust Smith Regime

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—The general council of the United Church of Canada Wednesday condemned the war in Viet Nam and also approved a motion to use force if necessary to topple the white - supremacist Smith regime in Rhodesia.

On Viet Nam, the council urged the Canadian government to make further statements opposing escalation of the war.

It asked that the three-country International Control Commission, which Canada is a member, be used to seek a Viet Nam peace conference based on recent proposals made by United Nations Secretary-General U Thant.

The council extended its sympathy to the people of Viet Nam and expressed anguish for the "atrocities" inflicted by the Viet Cong and by United States use of napalm bombs, crop destruction and defoliation.

A resolution expressed "deep moral anguish" at the use by both sides "of those tactics and weapons which cause indiscriminate mutilation, death and destruction."

HELP BOTH SIDES

The council agreed to send food and medical aid to both North and South Viet Nam through the World Council of Churches, the International Red Cross and the Canadian Friends (Quakers) Service Committee.

On Rhodesia, it called for extension of the United Nations charter to stop South Africa from undermining economic sanctions imposed against the Smith government.

"If all else fails, Canada would support the use of necessary police action under the United Nations," the resolution said.

At a press conference following Wednesday's sessions, Rev. J. R. Hord of Toronto, secretary of the international affairs committee, said there would be a great difference between using force in Rhodesia and the current war in Viet Nam.

"The war in Viet Nam is the dirtiest war in history," he said. "In Smith declared an illegal government in Rhodesia which especially irritates some of the black leaders there."

Rev. M. D. Boomer of Bella-coola, B.C., termed Saturday's general election in Viet Nam a "sham" and urged that both sides meet to settle the war.

Rev. B. G. Smillie of Saskatoon described U.S. allies in Viet Nam—Australia, New Zealand, South Korea, Formosa and the Philippines—"economic satellites of the U.S."

A resolution asking the Vatican to help United Church missionaries get into Angola was also approved by the council.

The Portuguese government, which controls the southeastern African country, does not allow missionaries to return to the country once they have left. The council hopes to overcome this obstacle by working with the Roman Catholic Church.

The council passed temperance resolutions reiterating the United Church stand opposing liquor advertising, calling for nationalization of the alcohol industry and urging provinces not to lower drinking ages.

Dominicans Kill Soldier

SANTO DOMINGO (Reuters) — Dominican rebels have shot dead and killed a United States soldier of the inter-American peace force here and gravely wounded another, a Dominican government spokesman said Wednesday night.

The spokesman said the wounded soldier was shot three times, once in the head, and was not expected to live.

The spokesman said the gunmen stopped the car near a laundry here as the Americans went to collect their washing. The killers called to them, and immediately opened fire.

Chou En-Lai Said Firmly Third in Chinese Hierarchy

PEKING (Reuters) — Premier Chou En-lai appeared firmly established Wednesday as No. 3 in the Chinese hierarchy, despite speculation to the contrary last week that his power in the Communist party has been sharply reduced.

This foreign speculation was based on a brief New China news agency report about Chou and another leader, Kang Sheng, meeting an Australian Communist Party delegation at Peking Airport.

The report failed to describe Chou En-lai as a party vice-chairman and instead referred to both men as members of the politburo's standing committee.

Foreign observers here generally think the wording of the report was intended to draw attention to the promotion of Kang Sheng. To do this, it had to stress his and Chou's politburo role and the politburo standing committee, everyone is referred to as just a member.

Nevertheless, recent changes —still not formally announced—in the ranking of some of the party's top leaders have left unclear who actually holds certain party posts.

No new official list of the central committee and its policy-making politburo was published after last month's plenary session of the central committee, the first in four years.

Since this session, Lin Piao, the defence minister, now comes next in rank to Chou after man Mao Tse-Tung, is the only leader to have been described by the party organ, the People's Daily, as a vice-chairman.

In the last official list, in 1958, Lin Piao was one of five vice-chairmen. The others were Head of State Liu Shao-chi, Premier Chou En-lai, Parliamentary Chairman Chu Teh, and Vice-President Chen Yun.

These five, with Mao and Secretary-General Teng Hsiao-ping, constituted the powerful standing committee of the politburo, the party's top inner cabinet.

Observers don't rule out the possibility that there is now only one vice-chairman of the central committee, Lin Piao.

But even if this is so, Chou's place in the party hierarchy remains the same, despite the loss of Mao. He has been given more publicity during the last month than anyone except Mao and Lin Piao.

Tao Chu, the party's new propaganda chief, has leaped from obscurity in rural communes and now is being placed fourth in press lists of the leadership. Observers said it is certain he has become a politburo member and is probably on the standing committee.

With the hitherto thunderous caterwauling of Hamilton Tiger-Cats buffs in the sanctum-sanctorum of the news room reduced to a pitiable mew-aw after their clobbering at the hands and feet of the Ottawa Rough Riders, Dodger fans in the typewriter neighborhood have taken heart, crawled out of the sports woodwork and are starting to give tongue again.

The lone Argonauts supporter, a solitary voice in the football wilderness, has changed a gridiron nightmare to "Step" dreams after the Hamsgeddon loosed its lone "Eagle" which falsooed its way to the wrist of the Double Blues' Bob Shaw.

Up to now the plaintive voices of baseball's Dodger fans have been as a soughing zephyr compared to the tornadic thunder of the Tiger-Cats tonsilar toreadors.

Of course this may only be temporary. The roar and chest-beatings of the Jungle Cats' Tarzans may resound in fresh paeans all depending o othe battle fortunes of the Cats and the Rough Riders.

However, as of now, the aficionados of the expatriates of Ebbet's Field who now cavort in the Pacific-whipped breezes of Chaves Ravine have come through their own and predict the former "Bums" will once more form the loyal opposition to the American League flag-bearers in the world series.

They point with pride to the surging exploits of the Dodger fighting spirit. Headed by the sensational Sandy Koufax whose record to date is published elsewhere, the Dodger regulars tossed a spectacular four shutouts in a row for a weekend sliad and shetled by a brilliant "fire brigade".

And if you turn back a memory page you'll see that the ex-Bums are trying to make history repeat itself..

Turning into the stretch a year ago, the Dodgers fighting spirit was a slam cincinnatied in prayer session. Winning 15 of their last 16 games, Koufax, Drysdale and company hurled eight shutouts and gave up but one run in four games.

And the bit department is coming through very nicely, thank you. The Dodger artillery is blasting the range with rookies pulling effective triggers.

Meanwhile the Giants have hit a real row, figuratively speaking, and now are a full three games behind the pace-setting gang from L.A. The Pirates who have slipped dangerously the last week or so trail by a pair. It looks from here that unless the Bucs and Giants resurge into late form, and the Dodgers maintain their brilliancy in all departments, it could very well be a world series between L.A. and the Baltimore Orioles.

And speaking of Baltimore while in New York recently a Times sportswriter told me the home of the Orioles even at that stage of the season was "series wacky".

"Hotel and motel accommodation for series time in seven new presidential suit of the opposition. Orioles fans can eat nothing but their favorites waiting through to the series pennant regardless of what the National League, sympathies may be", he said.

Had if the Dodgers go on to cross series swords with the Orioles, the Birds might find they have a battle series on their hands.

"With Koufax, Drysdale, Osteen and Sutton as four top regulars and Regan, Perranoski and Miller their pen-ace backer-uppers, the Dodgers have the best hurling staff in either league" the reporter said.

"It looks now as if it will be a 'Bums-Birds world series".

Giants Drop Three Games Off Pace

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Gaylord Perry, the first pitcher to join this year's 20-victory club, must have forgotten to pay his dues.

The San Francisco right-hander, who reached the charmed circle Aug. 20, failed for the sixth straight time to record his 21st victory when he was outdueled by Jim Bunning as Philadelphia Phillies blanked the Giants 2-0.

It was a costly defeat for the National League with first place Los Angeles and runner - up Pittsburgh both Mle, the defeat dropped the Giants a full three games off the Dodgers' pace and left them two behind the Pirates.

Richie Allen was the man who did the offensive job for the Phillies. He was at bat with two out in the first inning when Johnny Callison was thrown out stealing. Then Allen, leading off in the second, walloped Perry's second pitch over the right field fence for his 29th home run of the season. He also drove in the second run with a sacrifice fly in the sixth inning.

In the only other National League games Wednesday, Atlanta Braves routed Chicago Cubs 3-1 and St. Louis Cardinals downed Cincinnati Reds 6-2.

In the American League, Kansas City Athletics shutout Cleveland Indians 5-0, Boston Red Sox 2-1 and Detroit Tigers edged Minnesota Twins 3-2. California Angels at Baltimore Orioles and Washington Senators at New York Yankees were postponed by rain.

Bunning was in real trouble only once. That came in the first when a walk and an error put Giants at first and third with two out. But Jim Hart grounded to end the threat.

The Braves won their eighth straight, scoring two runs on one hit in the 10th inning. Felipe Alou and Ty Cline drove in the deciding runs, Alou on a Felder's choice.

Only 961 fans paid to watch the game played in a light rain at Wrigley Field. It was the smallest crowd in the majors this year.

Jim McCarver walloped two home runs and Curt Flood and Lou Brock added one each as the Cardinals ripped the Reds. Ray Washburn got the victory with a six-hitter.

Joe Foy's two - run homer in the fourth inning was the decisive blow for Boston. It was Foy's 15th homer of the season.

John (Blue Moon) Odom scattered five singles to top the Twins. Indians. Danny Cater's single, a walk, Joe Nossek's double and an infield out scored two second - inning runs that carried the Athletics to victory.

Jerry McLain retired the first 13 batters he faced and survived two home runs by Jimmie Hall to nip the Twins. McLain struck out nine batters in recording his 19th victory.

Defeat Cementmen 5-1

S. Warner Up 2 Games

Stewart Warner took a two - game lead in the Commercial Softball League championship series last night by scoring five late runs for a 5-1 victory over the Point Anne Cementmen.

The third game of the best-of-seven set will be played at the Alemlia Monday night. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

The winners scored twice in the fifth to erase a 1-0 deficit and sewed it up with a trio in the sixth.

Veteran Junior Day hurled steady ball over the distance to get the victory. He allowed six hits, struck out six and walked a pair.

Ron Maracle was the victim of errors and passed balls in taking the loss. He gave up five hits, struck out 11 and did not walk a man.

The Cementmen scored in the third. Whalen doubled and rode home on D. Maber's base hit following a passed ball.

Stewart Warner came to life in the fifth. Wannamaker led off with a single and Rowbotham doubled home the tying marker. Coegan drove home the winning run with a base knock after two were out.

In the sixth, Turner opened with a base hit and advanced on a sacrifice, Carr was hit by a pitch and Rowbotham's single loaded the sacks. Turner scored on a passed ball. Gladney fanned but raced for first on the missed third strike and the throw hit the runner. Two runs scored while the twin errors were being committed.

The losers threatened in the seventh when B. Whalen plunked a single and Horwood's hit pot two on. A pinch-runner was picked off second and a pop-up ended it.

Chuck Rowbotham paced the winners with a double and single. Lyle Wannamaker, Rod Turner and Fiorl Coegan bagged the others.

Glen Maracle had a double and single in defeat and Vern Whalen had a double. D. Whalen, Denny Maher and Jim Horwood hit singles.

Watson - Schmidt Headline Starry Card

What shapes up as likely the best wrestling card to be held here in years has been arranged for Memorial Arena Friday night.

Headlining the show will be the ever-popular Whipper Billy Watson.

And as usual, the promoters have lined up a top villain to test the Whipper's skill.

Hans Schmidt will provide the opposition for Watson. It should be a classic. This pair has tangled on numerous occasions and always give the fans their money's worth.

This, of course, will be the main event with two-of-three main falls.

Several special attractions are also on tap. One of them will be a battle of the fast and acrobatic midgets, listed on the card as "TV Stars".

Another bout also deserves a main-event credit. The dashing colored star from The Village, Sweet Daddy Siki, tackles Billy "Red" Lyons.

And last but far from least will be "Terrible Ted", the wrestling bear. "Ted" is booked to take on all comers and it is expected one or more of the pro grapplers will try to handle the furry giant.

The show gets under way at 8:00 p.m. and by far the largest crowd of the season is expected.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — All We Hope, owned by Bill Beasley won the $52,250 Shady Well Stakes at Woodbine race track Wednesday before 7,197 fans.

Ridden by Avelino Gomez, the two-year-old filly completed the six furlongs in the time of 1:09 2-5, returning $16.10 $7.30 and $4.80.

Jockey Ramon Hernandez was shaken up when his mount, Toga Sea, clipped a horse's heels, stumbled and threw him.

The exactor of Ocean Pearl and Wally Wallace was worth $102.10. The daily double of Grand Manitou and Dark Sin paid $14.00.

Mann Cuppers Refuse Boards Play

Petes Lead 2-1

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Both coach Bob Allan of Peterborough and Bob Marsh of Vancouver say they will not play another game in the Canadian senior lacrosse final on the wooden floor at the Peterborough Memorial Centre.

The third game in the best-of-seven series for the Mann Cup was played Wednesday night on ¾ - inch thick plywood boards which covered the centre's ice surface.

Peterborough scored three goals in the final quarter to nip the western team 5-4 and take a 2-1 lead in the series. The fourth game will be played here Saturday.

In the dressing room after the game, Allan said: "We won't play on the boards anymore, it's too dangerous."

BOARDS WERE SLIPPERY

Peterborough's rookie forward, John David, agreed: "Before the game we thought it was going to be all right but even before the end of the pre-game workout the floor started sweating."

The plywood sheets cover ice laid earlier this week for today's opening of the Toronto Maple Leafs' hockey training camp.

"That floor was dangerously slippery," Marsh said. "We definitely will not play another game with that wooden floor.

"The players on both teams were running into the end boards after a hard rush or a breakaway. They just couldn't stop or slow down in time. We were lucky there were no serious injuries."

SLOWED THE GAME

Marsh also said the slippery footing slowed the pace of the game and shortened tempers. He said the referees, Jerry Ravery of Toronto and Jim McMahon of St. Catharines, were the poorest of the series.

Both officials were inconsistent in their calls, he said, and did not take the condition of the floor into account.

No decision was made immediately on shifting the remaining games to another Peterborough rink which seats fewer fans.

Cy Coombs sparked the Peterborough attack with three goals and Bill Armour got two. Brian Keegan, Ken Rattan and Don Arthurs scored the others.

SCORES TWO GOALS

Bill Robinson paced Vancouver with two goals and Gord Fredrickson, Peter Black, Paul Parnell and Bob Babcock each scored one.

Nip Richmond 7-6

Leafs Grab 3-0 Lead

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Jim Russin's second homer of the game in the sixth inning propelled Toronto Maple Leafs to a 7-6 victory over Richmond Braves Wednesday night.

The Maple Leafs took a commanding 3-0 lead in their best-of-seven final for the International League's Governor's Cup.

Russin earlier initiated a three-run second inning by the Maple Leafs with his first home run, but the Braves battled back to take a 5-3 lead and overcome a 6-5 deficit before his second homer.

A walk, a sacrifice, a wild pitch, Billy Rohr's single and Stan Johnson's double followed Russin's first homer in the Toronto second.

The Braves finally ended a 22-inning scoreless string with a run in the third on Sandy Alomar's double and Felix Mills's single. Vince Ferguson's triple and John Hernstein's homer brought Richmond even in the fourth and the Braves went in front with two runs in the fifth.

Toronto scored three more runs in the sixth. The Braves tied it in the bottom of the sixth, and the game stood 6-6 until Russin comected again in the ninth.

The teams play the fourth game tonight in Richmond.

Davis Cup Tennis Blasts US Subsidies

NEW YORK (AP) — A committeeman for the Lawn Tennis Association charged today that the American Davis Cup team is being subsidized as an experiment toward getting rid of amateur tennis.

"The world is watching," said Joseph P. McLaren of Kansas City, a member of the association's nominating committee. "A fantastic sum - nobody knows exactly how much — is being spent on the Davis Cup team.

"The players are being kept on a per diem allowance of $25 the year round. This amounts to something like $7,300 to $9,000 a man, not counting transportation.

"This doesn't bother me so much, bad as it is. What I am really concerned about is that we have men in the association working toward elimination of the term 'amateur' in tennis. They want to make the tournament player simply a 'player,' not bound by amateur rules.

"The idea will be submitted to the International Lawn Tennis Federation in July, 1937, with the U.S. Davis Cup experiment serving as the guinea pig."

Martin Tressel of Pittsburgh, president of the USLTA, denied the allegation although he admitted open payments to the U.S. Davis Cup players, a fact that hasn't been covered up, and said the USLTA was making a broad survey into all facets of amateur tennis.

"We formed a Davis Cup squad on a more or less permanent basis a year ago under captain George McCall and sent them to Australia on a very profitable campaign," Tressel said.

"We give the boys a $25 per diem in the United States and $20 when out of the country."

Canadian Horse Nips Kerry Way

HAZEL PARK, Mich. (AP)—Hambletonian winner Kerry Way was upset Wednesday night at Hazel Park Raceway as Governor Armbro, owned by the Armstrong brothers of Brampton, took the lead in the stretch to win the $11,025 Vic Fleming Trot for three-year-olds.

The heavy favorite with no show betting, Kerry Way led most of the way and was challenged at the half-mile mark in the mile race by Governor Armbro, went on to win in a time of 2:04.1.

Governor Armbro, a chestnut colt, paid $3.80 in winning the race, the third event of Grand Circuit Week at the track.

'Replacing Feudalism' Says Minister Of Attitude Towards Fishing Clubs

By CLAUDE HENAULT

QUEBEC (CP) — "It's the democratic system replacing that of feudalism."

Gabriel Loubier, Quebec's minister of tourism, fish and game, was explaining his new policy of forcing some private fishing and hunting clubs to revert to the public domain.

"It is perhaps exclusism in the large sense," he said in reply to a question, "but it is more like the elimination of a state of feudalism, elimination of the system of the fief.

"At present in many of these clubs only the rich are able to frequent the area, but it is the average man, who pays for it. There is no reason why the sport of hunting and fishing should be reserved for the well-to-do. After all, these resources belong to everyone, like air and water."

Mr. Loubier says one aim is to open easily accessible private clubs to the people of the area in which they are located, whether a large urban population or a moderate rural one.

Another is to oust clubs that have not lived up to their contracted obligation of protecting the land granted them.

On the long-range level, both these measures are intended to be incorporated into a master plan for recreation and sports fishing and hunting in Quebec.

EXPECTS OPPOSITION

A study to determine needs and available resources has been started and its results, expected to be available in October or November, will be used as a guide for further expropriations. Until then, no new leases will be granted.

Mr. Loubier admits the plan will be opposed by those who now benefit from the natural resources and who eats bring a great deal of pressure to bear "because of their economic and political status."

There would be objections, too, because the new policy would control granting of new leases.

"The old system had absolutely no coherent policy. A request for a lease was submitted to the minister or the deputy minister. If it was approved by the member of the legislature for the region, or if the applicant was a financial bigwig, the minister jumped."

Mr. Loubier says the possibility of being influenced in this way will be eliminated under the new policy.

"I have given orders to the deputy ministers that I not be informed of the names of the persons or persons making the request."

The same anonymity would apply in dealing with dossiers on sportsmen's clubs which civil servants decide should have its lease lifted.

"All the names have been struck off before it comes to me, so I can't play favorites even if tempted."

MUST HAVE WATCHMAN

The department has already cancelled 108 club leases, of ther because the clubs didn't take care of their land or because the presence of a substantial population in the area made it desirable to throw the clubs open to the public. Before the cancellation there were 2,582 leases covering a total area of 35,000 square miles.

Most of the 108 lost their leases because they didn't live up to Clause 5 for the contract which stipulates that a watchman must be provided.

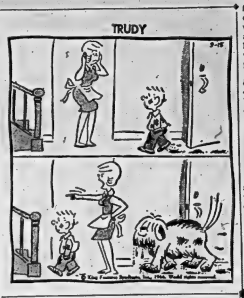
"The clubs without watchmen were a stage for carnage and an open field for poachers who came like vandals. It was pure and simple sabotage of our natural resources. . . . Also there was no control over possible forest fires in these clubs."

Some well-run clubs were expropriated because they were so close to centres of population that it wasn't necessary to wait for results of a survey.

One such club was the Gatineau Fish and Game Club at 35-Mile Lake which has several municipalities around it and is within easy driving distance of Ottawa.

Mr. Loubier says a clause in the contract permits the government to cancel such lease on 30 days' notice if it's in the public interest.

MANY COMPLAIN



Complaints, some from senators, other politicians, industrialists and financiers, are flooding in by telephone and letter to his office but the 108 cancellations will stand, the minister says.

A spokesman in his department says another 250 leases will be cancelled before the end of the year.

Asked what happens to clubs that have invested money in improvements and construction of lodges, Mr. Loubier says merely "they will lose money."

"If they have built on the property the government will expropriate it but will not pay back what it cost to build. If, for instance, a club built a lodge which," because it was flown in to a remote region, cost $50,000, the government won't pay them the same amount. It will pay what the lodge would be worth if it were built in a city—less depreciation, of course."

When the issuing of leases is resumed, he says, private clubs will again be authorized but in remote areas which can be reached by air. "So the rich will continue to have their clubs but they will have to pay for them."

Plastic Bags Deliver Trout To Streams

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—Plastic bags are being used to deliver hatchery brook trout to angling spots quickly and cheaply.

Pioneered at the Ontario department of lands and forests trout-rearing station here, the method cuts stocking costs by two-thirds.

Yearling trout are placed in 22-by-36-inch plastic bags with a calculated amount of pre-chilled water. The bag is squeezed to remove air and then reinflated with pure oxygen.

The bags are then sealed, placed in separate boxes and put aboard an aircraft. When the plane nears the planting zone the required number of bags are emptied into a large funnel at the rear of the plane. A plunger is pulled and the fish are dumped into the lake.

The method was tried on a large scale for the first time in the spring. More than 100,000 "bagged" trout were planted. The entire operation took five air hours at a cost of $6.70 per thousand fish.

Using trays and metal tanks in 1955, the department planted 145,000 trout in 85 flying hours at a cost of $19.10 per thousand.

With the old method only 7,200 trout were carried per planeload, says W. A. Cooper, department fish culturist. This compares with 20,000 in plastic bags.

The only problem is that you might have to buy two other economy cars to get them all.
For example.
The biggest-selling economy car will give you independent rear suspension for better traction.

But it won't give you 71 hp.
The biggest-selling economy car will sell you whitewalls.
But it won't do 90 mph.
The biggest-selling economy car will give you a few tools.
But it won't give you back-up lights.
The biggest-selling economy car will give you a 4-speed shift.
But it won't give you 4 headlights.
So unless you feel like buying a couple of other economy cars to get all these standard, no-cost features, take a look at Isuzu Bellett, the one economy car that has them all.

"Rocky" Plans Orphans' Home In Padua

PADUA, Italy (AP)—Former world heavyweight boxing champion Rocky Marciano visited a Roman Catholic home for orphans in this city Wednesday and announced he was planning the construction here "of the greatest orphan children's centre in the world."

He said the centre would receive children of all races and creeds from all over the world.

He will appeal for funds for the orphanage "mainly from the 25,000,000 Americans of Italian descent," he said.

The 43 - year - old undefeated fighter, who quit the ring 10 years ago, said the friars of the Saint Anthony Order would run the centre.

Canadiens Sign Three

MONTREAL (CP)—Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, announced Wednesday that three members of last year's team have signed contracts for the coming season.

The players are defencemen Ted Harris, right-winger Claude Provost and left - winger John Ferguson.

In making the announcement, Pollock said he had talked with Toronto Maple Leafs general manager Punch Imlach but "no serious negotiations" had taken place.

No players had been mentioned in any deals, but Imlach had indicated there were no "untouchables" on his club.

Pollock said he presumed such stars as forwards Frank Mahovlich, Bob Pulford and defencemen Bob Baun could be included in any deal.

Cars, Girls Costly to Three Swiss

BERN (Reuters)—Three Swiss soccer players have been banned from playing in international matches again because of an unauthorized, late-night car-ride through Sheffield with two English girls during the World Cup tournament in July.

The Swiss Soccer Association imposed the ban during a meeting at which the three players' behavior was described as "irresponsible . . . uncomradely . . . unsporting . . . and undisciplined."

All three players have said they don't intend to appeal the ban. They are goalkeeper Leo Eichmann, 29, halfback Werner Leimgruber, 32, and inside forward Kuno Kuh, 28.

THE ARNOLD Palmer method

—7 GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

KEEP WRISTS 'ALERT' AT ADDRESS

One pretty good tip-off to a player's ability is the position of his wrists when he addresses the ball. The low handicap player usually has his wrists high (see illustration). His hands are alert and ready for action. The duffer's wrists sag at address (see inset).

How high should the wrists be at address? High enough so that no wrinkles show on the tops of the wrists.

The major function of any full swing is to return the clubface squarely to the ball — to return it to the same position it was in at address. Conversely, a player's address position, should closely approximate the position he will be in at impact. Since the wrists must be high at impact, it stands to reason that you will be better off if they are high at address.

More People Drowned Boating Than While They Are Bathing

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—More people drowned in pleasure-boating accidents than in swimming in Canada last year. The toll exceeded 300. This year it could reach 400.

Many are concerned about the situation but one of the few doing something about it is Ronald R. Macgillivray, director of marine regulations in the federal transport department.

"Unless we toughen up our boating laws this (accident) trend is sure to continue," he says.

What he is doing is preparing some radical proposals for a federal - provincial conference here in October on improved regulations for small-boat operation. It may set the stage for provincial involvement in this field, now a federal concern.

Mr. Macgillivray, a tall, rangy, Winnipeg-born lawyer who took over the regulations branch less than a year ago, says the steady rise in boating fatalities is causing great concern among provincial transport, tourist and recreation agencies as well as in federal circles.

"Let's face it, we've got probably 300,000 small boats on our waters now and we're adding about 20,000 a year," he told a reporter. "This problem can get a lot worse if we don't act soon."

WANTS STIFFER LAWS

He believes that the laws governing small-boat operation should be broadened to penalize overloading and overpowering, two of the major causes of accidents. Most new craft now bear small plates listing the suggested maximum load and motor size. But there is nothing to prevent operators from exceeding these specifications.

Licensing of boat operators also is under study, although Mr. Macgillivray frankly admits that it would present awesome problems in administration for the department.

"The provinces are in the best position to handle a licensing program and I think they may be interested. There could be a fee to cover costs and we'd at least be assured that persons running boats know the basic rules of the water and safety standards."

The program would start with a written exam and perhaps expand eventually to a driving test, although "that's probably a long way off."

A federal law introduced in 1953 requires all boats using motors of 10 horsepower or more to bear a licence number. The licences are issued free at customs offices but there is a maximum $100 fine for operating without one.

WOULD LOWER LIMIT

Mr. Macgillivray believes the time has come to lower the 10-horsepower limit and require licences on all but the smallest motorboats. The main purpose is identification in case of accidents.

More statistics on boat accidents are also needed and his branch is working on a regulation that would require detailed reports on all accidents involving fatalities, serious injury or damage above $100.

Mr. Macgillivray doesn't share the popular idea that young people are a major cause of accidents. A survey by the U.S. Coast Guard last year reported that in 2,618 boating accidents attributed to careless operating only 300 drivers were under the age of 18 and only 22 of these were under 12.

"That's amazing when you consider the percentage of young people in the population."

That leads to the question of whether there should be a minimum age for boat operators' licences. It would be hard to justify one on the available information."

FORMERLY A LAWYER

Mr. Macgillivray, 50, graduated from the University of Saskatchewan law school in 1940 and went immediately into the army, serving in Italy and Northwest Europe with the Saskatoon Light Infantry. He wound up as a captain.

After the war he was a lawyer in Saskatoon for two years before joining the federal service in 1947 with the veterans' affairs department office there. He came to Ottawa in 1950 as assistant counsel in the transport department law branch and handled transport matters in the Justice department from 1959 until his present appointment.

Now he administers a staff of 500 involved in everything from ship inspections and pilotage to mariners' certificates and the disposal of wrecks.

Although he has never owned a boat himself, Mr. Macgillivray does have a touch of salt air in his background. His parents were born in Nova Scotia and as a youth he spent many of his summers on the shores around Antigonish where two of his three children now attend university.

Argos Seek Full-Time Player Scout

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference are seeking a full-time player scout, the first to be employed by a Canadian Football League team.

The club's managing director, Lew Hayman, said Wednesday he has interviewed several candidates for the job.

Two imports, Wally Gabler and Bill Van Burkleo, are the only players left who were recruited for this season's play.

The Argonauts have lost five games and won one.

"Obviously our recruiting in recent years has been unsatisfactory," Hayman said. "I take full responsibility for that failing.

"We are trying this new method with the co-operation of the coaching staff and I think we can improve on the type of player we bring up here."

BUSINESS TEMPERATURES RISE — Canada's gross corporate profits will climb to a projected reading of 156.5 by the end of this year, based on the index equalling 100 in 1961 when the current business boom started. Indexes showing industrial productivity, wages and salaries, and the cost of living have also risen but not as swiftly. The industrial productivity index rose to 145.7 after the first three months of 1966, initially outdistancing wages and salaries. However, the wages index has almost overtaken productivity in the past two years and at the end of the same period stood at 145.6. The wage index may be accelerated as new labor contracts show up in actual figures. The cost of living index will rise to a projected 114 by the end of 1966. (CP Newsmap)

Designed with a bold and sporty flair, the hardtop Delta 88 Custom Holiday coupe (above) and hardtop Delta 88 Custom Holiday sedan are new additions to the Oldsmobile line for 1967. Powered by the 425 cu. in., 300-hp, Super Rocket V-8, the Delta 88 Custom can be equipped with either a 3-speed fully synchronized manual transmission or the Turbo Hydra-Matic transmission. Strato-bucket seats are standard on both models and a new sports console is standard on the coupe. New bodies, with longer hood and shorter rear deck, give Delta 88 Custom's, Delta 88's, Delmont 88's and Ninety-Eight's Toronado-like proportions. An even more comfortable ride, many new conveniences, and many new safety features are highlights of the 1967 Oldsmobile line. New optional equipment includes disc brakes for power brake-equipped models (except 98's) which reduce "fade," after repeated stops, and provide consistent pedal feel. Depending on model, engines range from a 155 hp six to a 385 hp V 8.

Fatalistic Attitude Adopted By Many About Nuclear War

By CARMAN CUMMING

OTTAWA (CP)—Two years ago, the last time the Commons defence committee studied civil defence, someone asked whether fallout shelter might be built into churches.

Industry Minister Drury told the government would be glad to give technical advice to any group that wanted to build a shelter. His comment brought this reaction from NDP member Andrew Brewin:

"Might not they be better upstairs on their knees, rather than bothering to get down into the basement?"

The question is typical of the approach of many Canadians to civil defence: A fatalistic attitude that if nuclear war does come, there won't be enough left to worry about anyway.

At times of high international tension, of course, more people take alarm and start thinking about fallout shelters or evacuation plans. In times of relatively low tension, as now, civil defence talk is greeted with a long yawn.

"People are simply not so frightened by the H-bomb now," says J. F. Wallace, director of program implementation for the Emergency Measures Organization.

"You learn to live with danger and become a little more tolerant of it."

AVOID PRESSURE

In that case—since nuclear war is still a possibility—are Canadians taking a realistic view of civil defence planning?

"I don't know whether it's realistic or not, but it's human," says Mr. Wallace.

He explains that EMO, the government agency in charge of civil emergency planning, is not trying to scare people into building fallout shelters on anything else.

Instead, it is "trying to ensure that all the key people have the information available should the public want it—now or the day prior to an emergency."

"We're not going to go out and knock on your door and sell it to you."

At the same time, he says, "we would hope that every responsible person in Canada would have his own personal survival plan. I don't think that's asking too much."

By "personal survival plan," EMO officials mean the individual householder at least should figure out what he can do in his own home in an emergency.

SOME PLAN SHELTERS

That might mean looking over the basement to determine the best corner for an improvised fallout shelter; planning how it could quickly be protected with mattresses, trunks, books and other objects, and laying aside perhaps 14 days emergency supplies.

Civil defence planners say many Canadians have either worked out such a survival plan, or have built shelters.

No firm figure is available on the number of private shelters in the country. The estimate is about 3,000 to 4,000, but the planners say some who have built shelters don't want to publicize the fact for fear they might sooner or later have to turn away a friend or neighbor.

"You'd be surprised at the number of people I've encountered who have personal emergency programs and thought-out protection," says EMO Director-General C. R. Patterson.

"The individual has to make up his own mind on the final analysis. There is the information for those who want it."

While the information is available, there is evidence that the public hasn't made much effort to absorb it.

FALSE ALARM

Civil defence officials in Ottawa were red-faced a couple of years ago, when their alarm system went off accidentally after a hunter shooting at a bird accidentally cut through a power line.

Some observers said the public didn't appear to know what the alarm was all about. The sirens sounded for half an hour, and an opposition MP complained that "nobody could be reached to turn them off, and for a considerable period of time nobody could be reached to find out what was going on."

No public warning exercise has been carried out in Canada since 1961. A national exercise is planned for this fall involving government officials and EMO planners, but no public participation is scheduled.

While they're not running a scare campaign, EMO officials point out that a fallout shelter would probably have great value for most Canadians in a nuclear war.

A proper shelter can stop penetration of 90 per cent of deliable radiation. And within two hours of a nuclear explosion, the strength of the fallout declines by 97 per cent.

Those within a few miles of the blast—15 miles in the case of a five - megaton bomb—would need stronger and more expensive blast shelters. Those within about three miles of the explosion would have no chance of survival.

Since private shelters just aren't being built, emphasis in EMO thinking has shifted towards public shelters.

Designs of a number of dual-purpose structures have been prepared, including a bowling alley, curling rink, parking garage, community centre and underground primary school. None has yet been built.

A survey of fallout protection in federal government buildings was made in 1961. Since then some new structures have had shelter capabilities built into them, such as underground garages, but none has been stocked.

In 1964 a pilot study was made of all non-residential buildings in Alberta. Owners were advised of the potential shelter available and what could be done with it, but so far no EMO officials know, none of the buildings have been altered.

Mr. Wallace says EMO has not asked for changes, on the ground that it wouldn't be fair to ask private owners to build shelters that would be used by the general public.

In the wake of the Alberta study, EMO has undertaken a similar survey of the rest of the country. It is expected to be completed in about three years.

At that time, Mr. Wallace says, the agency will be in a position to recommend to the government whether public shelters should be provided.

Interest in public shelters in the large cities apparently is at about ground zero.

When subways were built in Toronto and Montreal, for example, the federal government tried to interest the cities in building in shelter facilities. The cities refused to go along — because Ottawa wasn't prepared to put up the money.

Sudanese Quarrel

Bridge Between Arab, Negro Proves Too Rickety to Use

When Sudan became independent in 1956 it was expected to become a link between the black Africans and the Middle Eastern Arab. The problems that made the bridge a precarious one are explored in this story by a Canadian Press reporter.

By CARL MOLLINS

KHARTOUM (CP) — Sudanese leaders are fond of describing their country as a bridge between the Arab Middle East and Negro Africa. But the bridge is too rickety to use because the builders have been quarrelling among themselves.

The size of Sudan as a bridge is based on geography, race and hope.

Territorially, the million-square-mile country (bigger than Quebec and Ontario combined) reaches from the Arab world's Sahara and the Red Sea to the hills and rain forests of equatorial Africa.

Raciarly, the Sudanese are a mixture ranging from nomadic, camel-breeding Arabs to cattle-tamoying Nilotic Negroes. More than a dozen distinctive peoples live between. But basically the northern three - quarters of Sudan is Arab and Moslem, the southern quarter is Negro and pagan, with perhaps 200,000 Christians.

Hopefully, independence in 1956 was to make Sudan a nation that would stand as an example of racial harmony in Africa and possibly reach out to become an arbiter and link between the emergent nations of black Africa and the Arab world.

SOUTH REBELLED

Old suspicions and new fears intervened to spoil the hope. Even before independence day Jan. 1, 1956, southern elements in the army mutinied and Negro political leaders agitated against domination by the north. The secessionist rebellion in the three southern provinces still causes suffering, provokes political bitterness, drains the economy and sours relations with Sudan's neighbors.

The blame is spread around liberally, although the hopeful sign is that some leaders on both sides now spend more time talking about a settlement than in exchanging epithets.

History may be the main culprit. For hundreds of years, until the British took charge at the end of the last century, Arab slavers harassed the southern tribes and left a legacy of hatred.

The British get some blame for insulating the south from the north. The idea originally was to protect the southern Negroes from their ancient enemies. The result was to halt the southward spread of Islam, substitute Christian missionaries and intensify the differences within the country. The separation of north and south persisted for 30 years. A Khartoum merchant recalls that when 18 years ago it took him three months to get permission for a commercial trip to a southern city.

CHARGED BETRAYAL

The southern leaders—themselves now divided into factions—say they were betrayed at independence by the imposition of a northern-dominated administration under a unitary system of government after it had been agreed the south would have a measure of self-determination.

Northerners respond that the southern mission schools had failed to produce enough trained southerners to run the region so Moslems had to take over when the British departed. Rebellion forestalled peaceful debate on a permanent constitution.

Further, the argument against a loose federation is strong. The secessionist malady is catching: Northern tribes such as the Nuba and Beja have been agitating for more autonomy. A European diplomat with long experience in Khartoum says Sudan "must have a strong central government if it is not to fly apart like a series of tribal states."

But the evidence is powerful that the Khartoum government has shown highhandedness at least, brutality at most, in dealing with the south, especially under the military regime that governed from 1958 till 1964. Even since the return of civilian government—notably in the summer of 1965—the army, with or without government approval, is admitted by both sides to have massacred southerners in Juba, Wau and Warajuok.

THOUSANDS KILLED

Travel in the south is restricted because of war. Estimates of numbers killed range from hundreds to thousands to tens of thousands.

The clash of Islam and Christianity has been a major factor. Some southern Christians point to Khartoum's expulsion of Western missionaries after independence as evidence that northern Sudanese—the most fervent Moslems outside Saudi Arabia—were eager for spiritual as well as physical domination.

Northerners such as Social Affairs Minister Abdul Latif respond that foreign missionaries were an alien influence inconsistent with the program of "Sudanization." Others link the missionaries with Western imperialism or, at least, with encouraging southern separatism.

But Northern leaders still let slip revealing and — to some of their colleagues — embarrassing comments like one recently by Hadi al Mahdi, uncle of the present prime minister. "Sudan constitutes the Islamic Arab spearhead in Africa, and the peaceful invading vanguard is the unexplored area of Africa."

Such public comment by the head of the powerful Mahdi family and leader of the influential Ansar sect underlines the claim of such leaders as Sudanese President Ismail el Azhari that "Sudan constitutes a junction of the Arab and African civilizations."

Lately, younger leaders such as Sadiik el Mahdi, 30, the new prime minister, and Clement Mboro, 46, head of Southern Front party, have shown signs of wanting a peaceful settlement.

Extremists on both sides oppose them. The Moslem Brotherhood, with its talk of an Islamic crusade in the south, would have the Sudanese bridge as an all Moslem structure. Embittered exiles campaigning for a separate southern state of Azania would have no bridge at all.

But young moderates on both sides may yet have their way, though it is likely to be a long time before any settlement wipes out the legacy of suspicion left by the failures of the last decade.

Tomorrow: Sudan's version of the Montagnes and Capuelais.

SUDANESE LEADER — Clement Mboro, 46, educated at a mission school in the Sudan run by Canadian Brothers of the Sacred Heart, is one of the 3,000,000 Negroes from the three southern Sudan provinces which have been devastated by 10 years of civil strife. Mboro is for self-determination, by which he means any system of government approved by southerners. (CP Photo)

BEAUTIFUL CITY SHAKEN — This picture of Tashkent's theatre district was taken before earth tremors began shaking the central Asian city earlier this year. Now possibly as many as half of the city's 1,000,000 inhabitants are homeless. However, Soviet authorities seem determined that the world will know as little about it as possible. (CP Photo)

600 Quakes Shake Tashkent, Pride of Soviet Central Asia

By JOHN BEST
MOSCOW (CP)—The ordeal of Tashkent seems without any ending.

Since April 26, more than 600 earth tremors, some severe, have shaken the once-bustling city, pride of Soviet central Asia.

By this time the 1,000,000 inhabitants of Tashkent — mostly Uzbeks, an ancient people whose civilization goes back to at least the 5th century BC—must find it hard to remember a period when there weren't any earthquakes.

What's happening there appears to be one of the great natural calamities of recent decades but Soviet authorities have been determined that the world will know as little about it as possible.

No foreign correspondents were allowed into the stricken city for more than three months after the earth shocks began but eventually at least one Western reporter was permitted to fly to Tashkent from Moscow.

Only occasional snippets of information have been carried by Soviet news media on conditions there.

These have emphasized the courage of Tashkent's people while failing, for the most part, to convey any sense of the horror of living in a place where the earth never seems to stop dancing.

MANY HOMELESS

"There has been no satisfactory estimate of the death toll, though from published reports it appears that this wasn't great in comparison with material damage.

What does seem clear is that well over one-quarter of the population — possibly closer to half—has been rendered homeless.

An account in the Tashkent newspaper Pravda Vostoka (Pravda of the East) said 2,000,000 square metres of housing were destroyed in only the first two nights of earth shocks.

In urban centres of the Soviet Union, the living space norm is seven square metres per person. Using that as a guide, the first earthquakes robbed 285,000 people of housing accommodation.

However, in many cities—probably including Tashkent —the norm hasn't been achieved; that is, most people enjoy less than seven square metres of space. So the number rendered homeless may actually be much higher.

Thousands of families are living under tents. Whole streets have been closed to traffic and turned over to outdoor living. Still, factories and offices function as usual, the Pravda Vostoka account said.

Among elderly people, the number of heart cases had "drastically increased" because of the rough living conditions.

TENSION PREVAILS

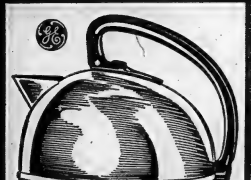
The unidentified writer of the account captured a little of the flavor of a city that lives in a prolonged night of horror. He told of sitting writing one day when his desk suddenly "swooshed upwards."

"There was a terrific shudder, the walls quivered and the ceiling began to vibrate. Everybody jumped up rushing instinctively to the door."

The jolt didn't cause much destruction. "But that sense of alarm does not go away . . . that constant inner tension of people who keep expecting something all the time."

Soviet authorities have said Tashkent will be rebuilt, and Pravda Vostoka reported "10,000 students are storming the ruins."

Unofficially, overseas, there have been reports of a possible evacuation, in view of the obvious instability of the earth's crust.



Reluctance to take such a decision is perhaps understable. The Soviet government had plowed huge resources into Tashkent, intending to make it a showplace for all of central Asia.

It was an attractive city, although many outside visitors got the impression that too much of the ancient Uzbek had been sacrificed to Soviet influence in its planning and architecture.

In any event the rebuilding, if there is one, will be a monumental task.

Herd of 10,000 Grazes Near Reindeer Station

By JANE BECKER

REINDEER STATION, N.W.T. (CP)—Santa Claus never decided to move from the North Pole he couldn't do better than put up at Reindeer Station.

It has everything he'd need: 9,000 reindeer grazing within a few miles; eight herders to round them up; women to sew parkas and other suitable clothing, and a Hudson's Bay clerk in the to trading post from which to ship his sack.

There's even a harness for hitching reindeer to a sled—one of the last of its type—hanging on the wall in the one-room schoolhouse.

Reindeer Station is on the Mackenzie River 25 miles south of where the mighty waterway empties into the Arctic Ocean. You can reach it by arranging a drop-off from an air flight from Inuvik in Tuktoyaktuk or by motor boat from either place.

Old northern hands say it is one of the few places where the old Arctic still lingers, barely touched by the encroaching digital welfare, liquor or the civil service.

Reindeer Station actually is one of the first attempts at a federal project in the North. It was founded on the recommendation of the explorer Vilhjalmur Stefansson, who said Canadian Eskimos should be trained as reindeer herders, as a means of continuing livelihood.

It didn't work out as Stefansson predicted.

SIX-YEAR TREK

It took six years to bring the reindeer from Alaska to the Mackenzie. Arriving in 1935, the herd had been reduced to about 2,300 animals from the original 3,000.

The government then built Reindeer Station, a collection of white frame buildings connected by electric power and linked by wooden sidewalks, at the foot of a cluster of spruce - covered hills.

From then until 1962 about $1,000,000 was spent on the project. The reindeer survived, but there was trouble recruiting herders. In the early '50s the government tried giving individual herds to Eskimos. That didn't work well, either.

"The Eskimo found it too much work for too little income," says Sven Johansson, a 41 - year - old Swede who took charge of the project four years ago. "Herding methods were out of date and the reindeer overgrazed."

Now the herd is back with the government. Herders, with a salary of $250 a month and a tent, sick pay, free housing for their families and even life insurance, are signed up with Eskimos in Canada.

The project still costs about $80,000 a year, but Mr. Johansson says it should be self-supporting in five years.

"We want to build the herd to about 30,000. This would produce 800 tons of meat a year, enough to help support the North. We could even export it."

Reindeer meat, which tastes rather like extremely lean beef, is already a staple in the diet of most residents of the region.

Today the reindeer graze over 7,000 square miles, from Reindeer Station to the Anderson River 100 miles east, and from Inuvik 30 miles north to the Arctic shore.

Each spring the herders move the deer up gradually from the forests, where they feast on lichens during the winter, to Atkinson Point, on the Arctic. Here, after they have summered, about 300 are systematically slaughtered.

Then the herders, using dogs, begin the slow, 50-mile trek south to the barrens, arriving at Reindeer Station just before Christmas. Another 300 deer are slaughtered near Inuvik to provide winter meat.

"It's a good life," says Billy Klengak, a herder for 13 of his 41 years. "I like it when I'm with the deer in the fall. We may travel with nothing to eat all day. Then, before evening, we shoot a few ptarmigan or ducks for supper. Afterwards we roll up by the campfire and sleep.

"If a reindeer gets off the range you just kick him. I really like working with reindeer. And my wife and kids can live at the Station while I'm away."

Only one thing is missing in the herders' new, planned life. Mr. Johansson has ruled out the old reindeer harness, with which the herders used to hitch the deer to sleds and travel like the wind.

"It's unpractical," Mr. Johansson told them. "Reindeer have to stop and feed every two or three hours. And once you've unhitched them it takes hours to catch them again. Dogs are much better."

But Santa Claus will probably be the only person ever to pick the harness off the schoolroom wall.

Author Plans To Give Zoo Famous Otters

LONDON (CP) — A pair of famous otters, Edal and Teko, are being given as a boon by their owner, Gavin Maxwell, author of Ring of Bright Water.

Maxwell, 52, says he is giving them up to save expenses at his isolated home on Sandaig, the island near Skye off the west coast of Scotland which he called Camusfearne in his book about the otters.

He said Edal and Teko will go to the new Aberdeen zoo in late fall or early winter.

Maxwell says he pays only a nominal rent for his island home which is still, as described in Ring of Bright Water, furnished mostly with what he has built himself from driftwood and salvage crates.

But the home costs him about $2,000 a year to run. The only electricity costs him $2,400 a year and every telephone call he makes is long distance. But everything we need, including food for the otters, has to be brought a long way."

Maxwell, a bachelor who has two peers for grandfathers, went to the Hebrides in 1956 to start a shark fishery after being invalided out of the army. The project failed, but led to his staying in the islands, adopting Edal and Teko and publishing his book about them in 1960.

Eighty Montreal Teen-agers Show Talents Painting Fence

MONTREAL (CP) — There was an imaginative piece on Montreal's busy St. Catherine Street when 80 teen-agers with Rembrandt in paint went to work on the wooden fence surrounding Place des Arts concert hall.

The exterior decorators came from Montreal parks department recreation centres across the island one day in August, lured by the invitation to "paint anywhere" the prospect of all the paint they could splash and the promise they could depart anything at all as long as it improved the fence.

The idea for the paint-the-fence contest originated with Du Pont of Canada, which also supplied the colors plus black and white in water-washable paint.

This type of paint was used because it could be washed out of hair, clothes and fingernails of the youngsters. However, it can't be washed off the fence and the masterpieces will remain there until November.

The reason for the plywood fence surrounding Place des Arts is that landscaping has not yet been completed.

Professional artists have painted fences in other cities, "but teenagers are easier to handle," a Du Pont spokesman said.

The teen-age angle caught the imagination of the Place des Arts management which gave full approval for the experiment, of the parks department which runs regular playground and canoe excursions for teen-age girls, of the city which closed off a side street for part of the day, and of hundreds of tourists and passersby.

PRIZES FOR SIX

The contest began in the morning with the allocation of plastic buckets, paints and fence panel. It ended in mid-afternoon when three parks department officials chose six winners of portable record players.

The winners were Lucie Boutin, 13; Huguette Nolin, 15; Michelle Bellemare, 12; Louise Jacques, 12; Louise Aubin, 14; and Robert Ferrage, 15.

Gertrude Berg, Long a Star In Radio, Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Gertrude Berg, 66, long a star in radio, television and on Broadway, died in hospital Wednesday.

A hospital spokesman said Miss Berg succumbed to heart failure. She had been in the hospital since Sept. 9 for treatment of a heart condition.

Among her recent appearances was the Broadway comedy Dear Me, The Sky Is Falling.

One of her best-known roles was in A Majority Of One, which she played on Broadway, endearing herself to audiences as a middle-aged Jewish lady who visits Tokyo and has a romance with a Japanese businessman.

Instructions were few, said Monique Fortier, head of the parks department painting and sculpture classes.

The object was to cover the four-by-eight-foot panels — a size which might well paralyse some would-be painters. Some youngsters planned their paintings all week and came equipped with sketches while others depended on the inspiration of the moment.

The imagination with one corner was captured, by the St. Jean Baptiste Day Fete dans l'Ile Festivities on the Island. The painting shows the city skyline, Mount Royal with its cross and the St. Helen's Island party, all linked in a flow of artificial light.

When it was all over, the city opened a fire hydrant for washing-up operations and the parks department supplied a truck which carted away debris. The sponsoring company sent in sandwiches and soft drinks for the young artists.

"We never expected it to be this good," said Miss Fortier as she gazed over the scene.

Sleepwalking Is Male Disorder

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Sleepwalking is predominantly a male disorder. . . Apparently women, even in their sleep, would just rather not go—if they can't go by car or cab.

Only about one in every three paper clips is used to clip papers together. . . The rest are lost, twisted and thrown away, or used as makeshift screwdrivers or to clean fingernails, typewriters or pipes. (In less sedate offices, of course, they are also fired with rubber bands at passing stenographers.)

The foods you choose may show how smart you are—but people with a high I.Q. are reported to have a fondness for grapefruit, celery and olives. . . But if they take their olives only in martinis, they're not so smart.

Here's a statistic that may surprise you: In about half of all fatal traffic accidents only a single vehicle is involved.

BUILD HOTHEAD

No wonder it is hard to keep a cool head . . . scientists have figured that to duplicate the human brain they'd have to build a machine as big as a football field and 60 storeys high. . . And to keep this mechanical noggin from becoming overheated, they'd require water equal to the ambient that flows over Niagara Falls. . .

Quotable notables: "Every man past 30 who has never owned a Rolls-Royce . . . owes it to himself to buy one."—John O'Hara.

Small consolation: Baldness affects up to 80 per cent of men, and, if you are among the nine out of 10 victims in whom it is hereditary, there isn't much hope of replacing your hair. . . But at least you can pin the blame on your ancestors.

No sweat: It is sometimes said that if you are afraid of dogs they are more likely to bite you. . . This is absolutely true of mosquitoes. . . Fear makes you perspire and perspiration increases your "attractivity index" to mosquitoes.

James Clavell Sells Rights For Best Seller for $500,000

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—In 1961, when the screen writers went on strike, a few rash souls predicted a boons for American literature. "At last those highpaid writers will get around to that novel they've always talking about," they said.

But the only writer who appears to have done it is James Clavell, who used the idle time to begin a novel based on his experiences as a prisoner of the Japanese during the Second World War. The book was published in 1963 as King Rat and was filmed by Columbia last year. Columbia paid Clavell $150,000.

Clavell's second novel, Tai Pan, lingers close to the top of the best-seller lists with 350,000 copies in print. And the sequel rights were sold to Martin Ransohoff for $500,000 plus five per cent of the gross receipts.

Clavell has just returned from England where he produced and directed his own screen play of Tai Pan, With Love starring Shelley Poltier.

Clavell turned to screen writing after the war and has produced and directed two minor but creditable features that reflected his experience in the Orient: Five Gates to Hell and Walk Like a Dragon.

Then came the strike.

MONTREAL (CP)—The Executive of the New Democratic Party of Quebec Wednesday described as unthinkable a suggestion by Liberal MP Augustin Choquette that a fusion of the Liberal and New Democratic parties should be studied. The differences between the parties are too great to allow such a merger, argument, said Charles Taylor, president of the Quebec NDP executive, in a statement.

ABC's Heralded Weekly Series Off to Rousing Start

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Stage 67, ABC's much - heralded weekly series of original productions, got off to a rousing start Wednesday night with Murry Schisgal's Love Song Of Barney Kempinski.

It was all crazy comedy from the moment Barney, an unInhibited East Side New Yorker, emerged from his basement, announced it was his wedding day and promptly stole a taxicab.

His first passenger was a drunken tycoon—played by Sir John Gielgud—who in the course of a weeding jag manages to snatch our hero with his umbrella.

Barney, exuberantly played by Alan Arkin, then stole an ice cream vendor's cart, encountered a fellow on love with wristwatches that he had a drawer full of them, and then joined up as an uninvited soloist with a group of strolling musicians.

Then he took over a guided tour of Chinatown, stole a meat truck and tried to sell a mouribund piglet to a millionaire—Alan King — who was in the middle of a vicious fight with his wife.

There was much more — a quick trip around Lincoln Center and the United Nations, a meeting with an Indian guru in mid-trance and a mad solo on the bandstand, the painting shows the city skyline, Mount Royal with its cross and the St. Helen's Island party, all linked in a flow of artificial light.

When it was all over, the city opened a fire hydrant for washing-up operations and the parks department supplied a truck which carted away debris. The sponsoring company sent in sandwiches and soft drinks for the young artists.

"We never expected it to be this good," said Miss Fortier as she gazed over the scene.

Thought Doomed 10 Years Ago, Aklavik Planning Renovation

By JANE BECKER

AKLAVIK, N.W.T. (CP)—In Aklavik, a thriving hunting and trapping community 36 miles south of the Arctic Ocean, people tell the story of the teenager who left for high school in Calgary last year. She read with surprise, in her social studies text, that Aklavik no longer existed.

"It does so," she told her disbelieving teacher. "I come from there."

The story not only shows the danger of believing everything in school texts, but illustrates the will of a group of people to keep their community alive despite official insistence on its death.

Ten years ago the federal government decided that Aklavik, built on the silt of the Mackenzie River delta, was sinking irretrievably into the permafrost. Today, Aklavik is still here and the government is planning a major rebuilding program in the settlement.

Old-timers recall that in the 1930s and '20s Aklavik was the metropolis of the Arctic. It had two missions, two hospitals, RCMP and Signal Corps stations, a Hudson's Bay Co. post and, by 1932, about 400 people. The terminal for most Mackenzie River traffic, it was also the centre of the area's lucrative Muskrat pelts brought $2.25 apiece and some years 250,000 pelts were taken. Also the Arctic air mail arrived in 1929 it became a northern air base as well.

KIDS STILL PLAY — Children still play in Aklavik, N.W.T., even though 10 years ago the federal government decided the community was sinking into the silt of the Mackenzie River delta and would have to be moved. A new community was built 140 miles away at Inuvik, but Aklavik refused to die and its population, after falling off initially now is climbing again. (CP Photo)

REFUSED TO DIE

Then in the late 1950s the federal government decided to move the population of Aklavik to a new site at Inuvik, a $34,000,000 community 35 miles to the east.

Two hospitals and a search and rescue station at Aklavik were abandoned. The radio station moved to Inuvik and the Aklavik population, now about 700, dipped to 300, all but about 100 Indian, Eskimo or Metis.

But Aklavik is situated in some of the richest muskrat land in Canada. Gradually more people began drifting in. Children continued to go to the run-down school, which the government had not got around to abandoning. The Hudson's Bay did a booming business and travellers still stayed at the old wooden hotel. The population inched back up to 700.

"But like an ostrich, the government put its head in the sand and refused to acknowledge Aklavik's existence," Sid Hacon, regional administrator for the northern affairs department at Inuvik, said.

Many Aklavik buildings began to rot and the community looked increasingly like a shack town. Some say it's still there. The question that finally pulled the ostrich from the sand. Last year Mrs. Sarah Gardiner, who has two children at the school, noticed its rotting timbers. She circulated a petition to close the building. Both teachers and parents signed it.

BUILDING A BOOM ON

Faced with the alternative of rebuilding or forcing Aklavik children to school at Inuvik, the government decided to rebuild.

As a result, Aklavik children next term will have school in six temporary classrooms, due to arrive by barge in September. A new 14-room school and two small residential buildings are to be ready by September, 1967.

This summer Aklavik is throbbing with construction.

The federal government is building an apartment and five houses for its employees, two warehouses and a group of how, cost, three-bedroom houses for native northerners, first of this type. Total investment during the next year is estimated at $500,000.

The Hudson's Bay Co. has started a new store, more than twice as large as the old wooden one. The RCMP is planning a new office and staff quarters. Lyle Trimble, a native and the Northwest Territories council and one of Aklavik's most persistent boosters, hopes to finish his hotel this fall. The old one burned down in September, 1965.

SIZE COULD DOUBLE

Dave Melstead, northern affairs area administrator at Aklavik, says he thinks the community can be put on a firm base, literally, by dredging the silt-filled Peel channel which forms one side of the triangular townsite to provide fill for building in the settlement's swampy areas.

"There could be 1,500 people here," he says. This would bring Aklavik almost to the size of Inuvik, which has 1,800.

Mr. Trimble says he thinks that if the heavy spruce stands around Aklavik were properly developed the area could provide housing for the entire North, rather than having high-priced southern lumber at a cost lumber shipped from the south. This would give it a sound economic base.

There are indications that even now Aklavik may not owe its life entirely to government. Talking to a territorial government worker a few weeks ago, one Aklavik Eskimo admitted it would be almost as easy to go trapping from Inuvik. He stayed at Aklavik, he said, because his people had always been there. He simply didn't want to move.

Hope Sensitive TV in Helicopters May Rob Viet Cong of Shelter of Darkness

SAIGON (AP)—Night brings blessings to the Viet Cong, but U.S. scientists are threatening to change that.

Their idea is to turn darkness into light.

If "Batman helicopters" and "black spoil" work out—mainly ing U.S. troops to see at night—the scientists' threat may become a reality.

Night - fighting techniques have been indelicate in stopping guerrillas who know the terrain intimately.

Heart of the Batman system is an intensely sensitive television camera that can pick up images at night.

The camera is mounted on the front of a helicopter gunship and as the aircraft swirls along the camera scans the ground, photographing by the light of stars and the moon. The crew inside the ship watch an eight-inch television screen.

The instant clandestine movement is spotted, the helicopter swoops down, guns blazing.

The air forces is combat-testing what it calls "black spot."

This also uses the night-seeing television camera. It is mounted on a C-123 cargo plane which carries flares, infra-red and radar detectors plus an arsenal of machine-guns, cannon and a bomb that bursts in air to spray hundreds of cut-inch long metal darts—splattering a target like a shotgun.

But enemy forces with the proper equipment—as the North Vietnamese are reported to have—are able to detect such night vision devices as radar and infra-red because they radiate electromagnetic energy.

Therefore, passive night vision devices that do not emit energy are of top importance. They detect and amplify energy as the television camera intensifies starlight, moonlight.

The same principle applies to telescopes and binoculars. The army uses in Viet Nam a handheld scope known as "starlight" which enables men on the ground to see enemy troops in the dark. The effect is like seeing through water.

Truscott Will Give Evidence

OTTAWA (CP)—After serving seven years of a life term for a murder he says he did not commit, Steven Truscott is seeking to tell his story to the Supreme Court of Canada.

In a notice of motion to be heard Tuesday, defence lawyers Arthur Martin and E. B. Jolliffe of Toronto listed Truscott among the 39 witnesses they wish to call when the High Court begins its hearings into Steven's conviction of the strangling of 12-year-old Lynne Harper at Clinton, Ont., in 1959.

Steven did not appear in the witness box during his trial, but has said since in interviews that he is innocent.

The court has been asked by cabinet to determine whether there was a miscarriage of justice when Steven, then 14, was found guilty of the slaying.

In a separate notice of motion the Crown asks permission to call as many as 34 witnesses depending on the nature of evidence the court wishes to hear.

CASE GETS PRIORITY

The court, in its last summer vacation, resumes sittings Sept. 26 and the Truscott case will be heard as soon as lawyers are ready to proceed.

The court amended its rules last week to permit new evidence to be taken in the Truscott appeal. Until then, the court was confined to reviewing evidence already given in lower courts.

Both defence and Crown want to call witnesses on the manner used at the trial by the Crown to determine the time of death of Lynne Harper.

A Crown doctor, basing his evidence on the contents of the girl's stomach and other matters, placed time of death between 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. on June 9, 1959. The Crown introduced evidence to show that Truscott and the girl left a schoolyard together at 7 p.m. and that Truscott returned alone at about 8 p.m.

The defence will argue that many experienced pathologists do not regard stomach contents as reliable means for such a precise determination.

LONDON (CP)—The British cabinet met at 10 Downing Street today to discuss developments in the Rhodesian situation as Commonwealth ministers and heads of delegations from 31 Commonwealth countries began dispersing around the globe.

Commonwealth Secretary Herbert Bowden was in frequent communication with Sir Humphrey Gibbs, governor of Rhodesia, to discuss reaction in the rebel colony to British proposals for settling the dispute with the Ian Smith regime in Salisbury and ending the rebellion.

Cabinet decisions on Rhodesia will depend in part on Sir Humphrey's reports.

Prime Minister Pearson and the Canadian delegation, which acted throughout the Commonwealth conference as mediators between Britain and the majority of Afro - Asian members, were to leave late today by air and be in Ottawa tonight.

The 10-day conference ended late Thursday on schedule, but only after delegates whisked through the last questions dealing with world affairs and gave rapid approval to a dozen measures covering international events.

CONCERN CONTINUES

Coming after nine days of almost non-stop debate and wrangling over Rhodesia, the final communique showed little stir and tended to be submerged in the continuing concern over the Rhodesian problem.

Pearson told a press conference he thought the Smith regime would give a "strong, decisive, contemptuous" reply to British proposals, but the alternative to trying to bring down the rebel government would have been a break-up of the Commonwealth.

Both Pearson and Prime Minister Wilson felt the conference, which had produced a unity among Britain and its former colonies, convinced successfully despite considerable strains on the loyalty of its members.

The Commonwealth "has been tested in the heat of the flames" during this conference, Wilson told reporters. "I think we are quite the same again. It may well be stronger."

The next few weeks also will contain dangers for the Commonwealth, the British prime minister said.

There still remains the possibility that Zambia—and perhaps others—may decide to quit the Commonwealth in protest against Britain's main attempt to settle the Rhodesian problem.

Beer Strike Settled

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Brewers Warehousing Co. said today union members have ratified an agreement and are returning to work after a strike which cut off the flow of beer in Toronto and points between Gananoque on the east and Hamtsville on the north.

He said all 79 Toronto outlets will be opened again today and others will follow.

Deliveries of draught beer to hotels will get under way Saturday.

Trucks have already been sent to retail outlets where stocks were low.

Details of the agreement were not disclosed.

The union involved is the International Union of Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers of America.

The dispute between the warehousing company, owned by the Ontario, breweries, and local 326 started Monday night when 160 drivers, helpers and warehousemen walked off the job at the company's main Toronto warehouse.

A union spokesman said the walkout was ordered to protest the company's hiring regulations, including its age limit of 40, for new temporary employees to the permanent staff.

Specifically, the union complained about the case of a 44-year-old employee who had been on temporary staff since the beginning of this year.

If the strike had continued, officials of four of the five major breweries in southern Ontario said operations would have been curtailed by tonight. O'Keefe Brewing Co. would have been the only one in full operation, a spokesman said.

"EQUALITY OR INDEPENDENCE" — Quebec Premier Johnson (right) and Finance Minister Dozois are engrossed in French - language newspaper whose front page headlines read "equality or Independence," as the two men prepare for one of the federal - provincial fiscal conferences at Ottawa. Provinces Far Apart On Tax Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces and Ottawa wrapped up their fiscal conference Thursday with agreement to keep talking about the politically thorny question of taxes.

This was the main point to emerge from the sessions, which opened with the federal and provincial governments far apart on what measures ought to be contained in a new five-year tax agreement. It coincided with Bills apparent closing of the gap.

But there was agreement that officials of the two levels of government would continue meeting on technical aspects of various proposals and that another meeting of finance ministers would be held, probably in mid-October.

This meeting 'would hammer out reports to go before a federal - provincial conference of premiers with Prime Minister Pearson.

The two - day conference remounted mainly to a sparring match, with delegates feeling out the positions of the federal government and the other provincials.

Federal Finance Minister Sharp expressed satisfaction with the results at a wind-up news conference. There had been sharp differences of opinion, he said, but they were "in the right areas."

Mr. Sharp placed before the provinces a proposal to revamp drastically the old Rowell-Sirois which Ottawa and the provinces have divided up the taxpayers' money and shouldered responsibilities for various social services. His key points:

—The federal government will stop trimming back its share of such levies as income tax which allowed the provinces room to increase theirs.

—The provinces would be free to raise more income tax money as long as they levy the tax themselves.

—Equalization grants paid poorer provinces to bring their social services to par with the richer ones would be determined by a new "prosperity index" formula.

—Ottawa intends to end most of its cost-sharing plans in shared-cost programs, turning over to the provinces a slice of income tax revenues to replace the current federal payments.

Mr. Sharp proposed that Ottawa retain roughly half of the per cent of corporation income tax it now collects. These were needed to give the central government the power to influences the national economy.

But premiers Daniel Johnson of Quebec and others voiced strong objections.

Ottawa must give up almost 20 per cent of these direct tax fields to Quebec, Johnson

Thousand British Bobbies Want to Take Ontario Jobs

LONDON (Reuters) — While Britain's health minister assailed hundreds of young doctors for looking across the Atlantic for more lucrative jobs, a London newspaper said today more than 1,000 of the country's policemen want to pull out and settle in Canada.

Britain's perennial "brain drain" problem hit the headlines again when it was disclosed that many doctors took examinations in London, Birmingham and Edinburgh, England to qualify for work in the United States.

Today, the London Daily Mail said an advertisement run by the Ontario agent-general's offices for police recruits had produced 1,300 replies from bobbies throughout the British Isles interested in working in Canada.

"We are astounded," The Mail quoted Rod Monette, an immigration official for the Ontario office, as saying. "We have applications from members of the Metropolitan (London) Police Force, nearly every county force, in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, and even the military police in Germany and Cyprus.

"I have had to telephone Ontario for emergency instructions on how to answer the applications," Monette said.

The advertisement here followed a national campaign in Canada to fill 200 vacancies in the Toronto metropolitan police.

Meanwhile, in Birmingham, Health Minister Kenneth Robinson Thursday night bitterly attacked the young doctors who took the American examinations Wednesday.

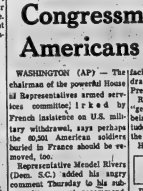
In a speech at a special meeting of doctors, Robinson told an audience mostly made up of men and women of the physicians employed in Britain's national health service that they accept a fine medical education in Britain with the deliberate intention of selling it elsewhere . . . It is my view a cynical and selfish act.

"Britain simply cannot afford to train doctors for the purpose of swelling the membership of the American Medical Association," Robinson said. "It is emphatically not a burden that the hard - pressed British taxpayer should be called on to bear."

The doctors who took the examinations complained at long and poor pay under the National Health Service.

PSI Benefits Are Increased After Nov. 1

TORONTO (CP) — Increased benefits without any rise in PSI premiums were announced Thursday by Physicians Services Inc. under a new subscribers' agreement effective Nov. 1.



In the new plan, a dependent child will be defined as any unmarried child under 21 who resides with the subscriber and who qualifies under the Income Tax Act.

Previously, the subscribers' agreement only covered a natural child, a stepchild or a legally adopted child.

After Nov. 1, the eight-month waiting period for obstetrical benefits will be removed and these benefits will also become available for dependents under family agreements.

PSI also announced it will pay 85 instead of 80 per cent of the Ontario Medical Association's fee schedule for all services rendered after last Aug. 1.

Subscribers who go to non-participating physicians will also be reimbursed at 85 per cent of OMA fees in the future. The remaining five per cent will be withheld to pay administrative costs.

Germans Build Large Air Base In Portugal

BEJA, Portugal (AP) — Behind a thick veil of secrecy, West Germany is building its largest air base on foreign soil in this Southeastern Portuguese town.

Officially, the $40,000,000 base has been called "Portuguese Air Base No. 11" and will be staffed and commanded by Portuguese officers on the flatlands of Alentejo province, the country's breadbowl.

In fact, the base is West German except in name. The Germans are supplying most of the capital, including money to build a housing project for 6,000 persons near the base.

German technicians drew up the plans for the largest jet engine test facilities in Europe, destined for Lockheed F-104 Starfighter jets. The runways, ramps and hangars, expected to house three squadrons of planes, compare favorably to Strategic Air Command bases in the United States.

Portuguese and West German officials are silent about the base, which fits into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization provision for bilateral defence agreements.

New Confederation of Two 'Nations' Theme of Quebec

OTTAWA (CP)—Quebec will step up its campaign for a new Confederation of two "nations," Premier Daniel Johnson told Thursday night after an inconclusive federal-provincial meeting.

Mr. Johnson's sweeping proposals to take over federal tax fields and spending programs in Quebec were attacked by some English-speaking premiers, but he repeated that they cannot and will be reached eventually.

"Our brief is not at all aimed at dismantling Canada," he told a press conference. "On the contrary, we want to increase autonomy between the two language groups."

The Union Nationale leader said a committee of the provincial legislature will be set up to study Confederation with objectives and propose a new constitution.

The committee would also be asked to recommend whether a "constituent assembly" should be convened in Quebec to draft a constitution replacing the British North America Act of 1867.

He was confident that if a referendum were called in Quebec on a "two-nation" constitution; 80 per cent of the voters would approve.

Mr. Johnson debated in a fight vein with Finance Minister Sharp, Premier Robarts of Ontario and Premier Manning of Alberta at an hour-long joint news conference.

Mr. Sharp said the federal government cannot afford to hand 200 per cent of personal income taxes, succession duties and resource corporation taxes collected in Quebec as proposed by the newly - elected Johnson government.

The Quebec premier replied that provincial needs are rising much faster than federal requirements. Direct taxes were the only ones available to the province under the constitution.

Mr. Sharp invited comment on Quebec's constitutional proposals, but said repeatedly they had to be discussed first at all during the two-day closed session.

Gemini Astronauts Will Fill In Experts on Remarkable Trip

CAPE KENNEDY (AP)—Gemini 11's astronauts fly to Cape Kennedy today to fill in the details of one of man's most remarkable space flights — an adventure that set guidelines for the moon, but which also raised questions about working in space.

Navy Cmdr. Charles Conrad Jr. and Lt.Cmdr. Richard Gordon planned to leave the carrier Guam this morning.

The astronauts, both 36, will remain at Cape Kennedy until Sunday night or early Monday, discussing the flight in general terms. Then they will fly to the manned spacecraft centre, Houston, Tex., for eight days of detailed debriefings. After which they'll hold a news conference.

Meanwhile, preparations were moving ahead here for Gemini 12, the last of the series. Space agency officials announced that the flight had been extended to four days from three in order that more experiments could be conducted.

Technicians planned late today to erect a Titan II rocket for the shot, scheduled Oct. 31.

Conrad and Gordon climaxed their spectacular flight Thursday morning as Gemini 11 splashed into the Atlantic 725 miles southeast of Cape Kennedy, just slightly more than two miles from the target.

Television cameras caught their descent by parachute and, via Early Bird satellite, relayed the thrilling scene to home viewers.

"This old world looks pretty good from the deck of this carrier," Gordon said. "I'll tell you right now else, it looks great from 850 miles. You ought to see it."

Their altitude mark of 850 miles was one of seven records

Congressman Wants to Move Americans Buried in France

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the powerful House Armed Services armed services committee lr ked by French insistence on U.S. military withdrawal, says perhaps the 60,351 American soldiers buried in France should be removed, too.

Representative Mendel Rivers (Dem. S.C.) added his angry comment Thursday to his subcommittee's report, recommending that France pay removal and replacement costs of U.S. facilities which are being withdrawn under order of French President de Gaulle.

Rivers declared that U.S. taxpayers had good will are being rewarded by the ingratitude of President de Gaulle and the people of France.

He said 60,351 "American

Perhaps we should make our removal from French soil complete by reinterring the bodies of these American men on American soil," Rivers added.

The subcommittee also said no surplus property should be sold to France and that termination bonuses should be paid to the 16,000 French civilians working at U.S. bases.

L. W. Brockington, 78, Dies of Heart Attack

TORONTO (CP) — Leonard William Brockington, 78, lawyer, administrator, government adviser, broadcaster, writer and orator, died of a heart attack in hospital Thursday night.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King appointed him adviser to the war cabinet in December, 1939. Mr. Brockington became a close associate of Mr. King and during the last few months of the prime minister's life helped him in the arrangements of his retirement.

During the Second World War and after, Mr. Brockington became almost the voice of Canada. He was heard on international radio networks in times of crisis and spoke at national and international celebrations in Britain, Canada and the United States.

Mr. Brockington became chairman of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's board of governors in 1936 and held the post for three years when, owing to pressure of private business, he resigned.

It was while he was chairman that the radio network began speakers to discuss controversial questions of domestic and international affairs was established.

He was a picturesque figure in the House of Commons. The Calgary client who couldn't remember his name referred to him as "the man who looks like Eighty cattle."

After the war, Mr. Brockington became active in theatre but him to undertake the organization of Odeon theatres in Canada. He became a director-vice - president and later president of the theatre chain.

His business interests included directorships in the Toronto Globe and Mail, Burns Foods Ltd., Calgary; the Dominion Stock Exchange, Toronto; the Sincoe Hotel Ltd., Toronto; Canadian Marconi Co., Montreal. He was also general counsel in Canada for British Overseas Airways Corp.

Born in Cardiff, Wales, in 1888, he came to Canada in 1912 and became a barrister and solicitor in Edmonton. He then went on to study law and was called to the bar in Ontario.

All Workers Back on Jobs At Beer Stores

Good news for beer drinkers. Brewers Retail manager Cecil Bonnetta reports all Belleville employees are back to work today.

"Every store is in operation and everything is back to normal again," he said.

The strike of the International Union of Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drinks and Distillery Workers began Wednesday and ended with a settlement last night which was subject to approval by union members today.

Sixteen members of Local 326, Belleville, had been off the job until today.

the sudden shortening of Gordon's space walk after 44 minutes when the workload exhausted him, causing him to breathe and perspire heavily, with sweat blinding his right eye. He was to have stayed outside 102 minutes.

He tired right from the start, first trying to get out of the cabin on his 30-foot tether. By the time he had mounted a camera, retrieved a radiation experiment and boarded up the 100 - foot tether between the Gemini and the Agena he was so tired Conrad summoned him back in.

At a post - flight conference Thursday, Dr. Robert Gilruth, director of NASA's manned spacecraft centre, said:

"It seems to me the problem goes beyond the (space) suit in this case. The work load that has been generated by a man . . . exceeds the work load that is reasonable to ask of a man.

"I believe it's a little over one horsepower, and since we're dealing with man and not horses, it's not reasonable to ask a man or expect a man to be able to work and think at this level in space."

Experts generally agree after four US. astronaut space walks that a man requires four to five times more effort in space than on earth to perform a task.

The defence also has witnesses to back up Steven's defence that he was in the act to get into a car with yellow license plates on the night of her death. The Crown has alleged that Steven would have been unable to see what he claimed he did from the point where he said he was at the time.

Dr. C. W. Dauby, assistant chief of medicine at Queen's University and Dr. Norman Wrong of the faculty of Psychiatric at the University of Toronto will be asked to give their opinions on wounds allegedly on Steven's penis on the night of the murder.

The Crown contended they were caused by intercourse or attempted sexual intercourse with a young girl. Defence witnesses will contend they were caused by a skin disease.

The defence also wants to call psychiatrists to give evidence as to the defence's mental estate of Truscott. They are Dr. R. C. A. Hunter and Dr. R. F. Mowbray of Queen's University, Dr. J. S. Pratten, superintendent of the Ontario Hospital, Penetang, and Dr. John Rich of Toronto.

The Crown's application notes that the defence is also relying heavily on Steven's calm demeanor and normal behavior when he returned to the schoolyard.

It said Dr. J. J. Hartford, Toronto psychiatrist to the Ontario Training School at Guelph, examined Steven three times and that his reports indicated "the appellant had a mental makeup that would enable him to appear calm in circumstances where an average person would clearly and obviously be upset."

Class Struggle Still Alive In Latin America Says ILO

By KEN CLARK

OTTAWA (CP)—The words of the delegates here at the eighth Americas states conference of the International Labor Organization indicate the class struggle is still a live in Latin America.

On the one hand, employers and government representatives tend to deliver the quiet, conciliatory speeches at a conference largely devoted to peacemaking. They stir few emotions.

Workers' delegates often exhibit no such inhibitions in dealing with South and Central American conditions. They tend to rail at a variety of social and economic ills.

Their targets are the ruling classes. They sometimes view the workers as the oppressed who must be lifted from their misery. Their phrases raise visions of the classic conflict between the traditional haves and the have-nots.

One worker's representative termed many Latin American workers the servants of the civilian and military regimes. Another said they are unions are being strangled in many areas.

MUST IMPORT WORKERS

In the eyes of some workers' delegates, employers are profiteers of gouge groups standing in the way of economic and social progress. The remedy, they must be brought into the economic planning process.

Some state demands that are obsolete by Canadian standards: union recognition, the right of collective bargaining, arbitration, the right of public service employees to organize into unions.

However, conditions vary widely in Latin America. The tales of the conference were sometimes balanced with stores of union progress and vitality.

But the disparity between the state of organization and power of labor in Canada and many in Latin America were exemplified earlier this month in the House of Commons chamber where the ILO conference is being held.

There, Parliament met in special session—while union representatives watched from the gallery—to pass legislation to end the national railway strike. The implication is that only the government is strong enough at times to deal with Canadian unions.

There are overtones of a class struggle in Latin America; they were strengthened by the words of David Morse, the ILO director-general, to the conference.

SETTLE CONTINUES

The American - born official told a man in the ILO, said the battle against underdevelopment and poverty is far from won in Latin America.

But he also talks of social ration, the building of the old social structure and the "disparities between the income levels of the different social and economic strata within each country."

To help solve these and other problems, the 25 countries at the conference are trying to chart economic and social security guidelines as a basis for practical action by governments.

With the first four days of the conference gone by, one delegate noted not a record of the 1966 Americas conference of the ILO. He added sadly the topics were much the same.

Quinte Crusade Choir Director Is Rev. D. Jost

An outstanding baritone soloist Rev. Donald Jost, of Calgary, will be the song leader and choir director for the Quinte Crusade for Christ with Evangelist Barry Moore, at the Memorial Arena in Belleville, Oct. 7-16.

His experience includes being pastor of churches in Wetaskewin, Alix., Bozeman, Montana, and Winnipeg, a total of 12 years. In Winnipeg he was director of Christian education and music in the Grace Memorial Baptist Church for five years. At various times Jost has preached in every age, he has served as choral director for inter-church functions in Alix., Red Deer and Winnipeg.

He is married and the father of four children.

Ninety - five Quinte district churches have decided to participate in this crusade. At last report 54 cottage prayer meetings were under way in the interests of the crusade in Campbellford, Deseronto, Madoc and Belleville. On Sept. 18 has been designated a Day of Prayer at the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Belleville, and Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, Belleville. Counselling classes begin Sunday afternoon, Sept. 18, at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

Sunday, Sept. 18, has been designated as Crusade Sunday in many area churches.

test at Britain's failure to take the sterner action against Rhodesia demanded by many of the Commonwealth delegates.

Another steel order is awaited an order for 8,000 tons of steel for Iroc Ore Company of Canada's plant at Labrador City.

U.S. Officials Believe Mao Still Firmly in Power in China But Communist Party Split

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top U.S. officials believe that Communist party chairman, Mao Tse-tung, still is firmly in power in China. But they think the party itself is badly split and that discord involves some of the men closest to Mao.

New evidence irreconcilable divisions among the Peking rulers was found Thursday in the disclosure that Chinese leaders now are trying earnestly to put the brakes on the massive Red Guards movement before it is even a month old. They may be trying to halt it altogether.

The decree of the student groups forming has been seen here as a calculated move by Mao to purge the surviving Communist party organization in mainland China of dissident elements. It has been identified publicly with Mao and with his recently-designated No. 2 man, Lin Piao, currently Chief of top military leader and strategist.

Despite this sponsorship, the Red Guards now seem to be ordered to suspend action in rural areas and avoid interfering with industrial production.

WAS ORDERED BY MAO

The new high command line given in an editorial in the official Peking People's Daily could not mean an unexpectedly sudden end to the frantic experiment apparently ordered by Mao himself to bring to culture China's 700,000,000 people with a new revolutionary zest.

So far the Chinese propaganda connection with what Peking calls a "cultural revolution" has been relatively free of the usual threats of war between China and the United States.

Officials recalled Thursday that such talk in China has been declining since early this year. Either Chinese leaders found it was not effective in helping them control their own people, or that it was not deterring the U.S. from its Southeast Asian course.

Or perhaps they feared they would lose control over such a war they do not in fact want.

The best top-level judgment in official quarters here today is that China has no current intention of getting into the Southeast Asian conflict as a belligerent.

MAO IS BOSS

Mao's role in the current crisis in China is considered by U.S. authorities to be that of supreme boss and mastermind. Despite his mysterious absence from the public several months last winter, an absence generally attributed to serious illness, U.S. authorities believe Mao's mind is clear and capable even though his physical condition generally is not good.

Still some authorities are beginning to wonder whether he may be suffering with delusions of various kinds, chiefly because of his prolonged campaign to deify himself.

Another set of issues has centered around the Chinese Communist break with the Soviet Union and the loss of assistance in military supplies.

There has been dispute, 30% over whether the Red Army should be primarily professional or primarily political. Some top generals have lost their job be. cause they would not yield to "Mao's thought." But Lin Piao follows the Mao line completely, so far as the outside world know.

Lin Piao emerged as No. 2 man only a few weeks ago in the midst of worldwide speculation about a struggle for power because of Mao's failing health. His position now appears to be entirely secure, but U.S. experts believe the power structure has been so badly shaken that new changes in top personnel could occur at any time and quickly.

Gem, Mineral Club Elects New Officers

A year of successful club activity was marked on Wednesday evening when the Quinte Gem and Mineral Club held their first annual meeting. An excellent crowd attended to start the second year off with a new slate of officers and plans for both indoor and outdoor activities.

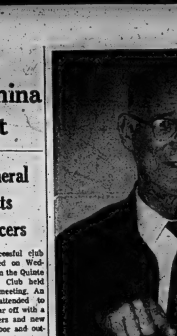
Interest in rocks, minerals and gemstones continues at a high level in the Quinte District, and more and more people from all walks of life are discovering this new hobby. The club is anxious for all interested people of all ages to attend any future meetings. Present club members are always eager to assist any newcomer in identifying specimens, helping with rock collections, or simply sharing experiences and information. Informality continues to be a club trade-mark.

The new executive for the coming season is: past-president, Percy Pickering; president, Gordon Alyea; 1st vice-president, Charlie Jeffs; 2nd vice-president, Mr. Alfred Arthurs; secretary, Lew And rews; treasurer, Howard Anderson; publicity chairman, Irwin Knight.

As the new officers took over, the past president's contribution to the club was noted, and his leadership has certainly been a key to the success of the club in its first year.

THREE FILMS SHOWN

Three films were provided for the club program through the courtesy of Union Carbide Co. Two of these films, titled "Gift of Kings" and "Method for Miracles" tell the story of the magnificent Star sapphires and rubies.



Throughout much of history, rubies and sapphires have been the prized gem of caliphs and kings. Of all the sapphires and rubies which have been found, the rarest have been those containing in their depths, a perfect six - pointed white star. These films trace the history of the stars, showing how man's first efforts to recreate them failed again and again.

The motion picture reveals how the Company discovered the secret of the Stars how to add perfect six pointed white stars to ruby red and sapphire blue. The camera goes behind the scenes in the plant to show how "Linde" Stars are grown in the special furnaces, and how they are then cut and polished to shimmering beauty. And the films present these Gems in magnificent collection of fine jewellery for both men and women, all mounted in precious metals.

The third film deals with Modern Gem Cutting, and it showed Club members some of the secrets of making a faceted gem, and the equipment which is used. The filmed demonstration of faceting shows the steps, starting with a rough semi-oval boule of Linde titania, through to an exquisite finished gem which is superior in the diamond for its brilliance.

400 Farmers Attend District Silage Corn Day at Sillsville

The advantages of spray weed control and cultivation in the row crop corn under dry weather conditions was graphically demonstrated at the Quinte District Soil and Crop silage corn day held yesterday at Sillsville, south of Napanee.

In the weed control section of the corn demonstration plots the yield of four tons silage and 18 bushels of corn where there was no spray or cultivation compared with yield of 11 tons of silage and 35 bushels per acre with 2,4-D chemical spray and cultivation.

The Sillsville area where the demonstration plots were located received only about one inch of rain the normal rainfall this year.

Close to 400 farmers from the Quinte district attended yesterday's silage corn day at the Harold and Don Hough farm.

FARMERS TOUR PLOTS

Mr. Jack Haggarty, soils and crop specialist with the Ontario Department of Agriculture at Brighton said he was well satisfied with the turnout and with the success of the day's program

During the morning farmers toured the demonstration plots and inspected the latest in corn growing and harvesting equipment. Then in the afternoon they listened to Mr. Dave Mowat, Department of Crop Science, University of Guelph, who stressed the importance of ensilaging high quality silage.

Also, Mr. George VanSickle, of Brantford, spoke on his 1965 experience as a corn grower.

Mr. Haggarty said that due to the abnormally dry season, the yield of corn at the demonstration plots was not exceptional although under the circumstances he was not disappointed. The highest yield reported was 12½ tons of silage per acre and 74 bushels of grain corn per acre.

VIET STICKERS VETOED

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP)—The Veterans of Foreign Wars ordered 1,000 stickers saying "Back the boys in Viet Nam." Michael Signorelli, post commander of the Washington Country Post, said Thursday only seven out of 30 business establishments would put up the stickers. The reason given: Fear of offending shoppers.

Temperatures Drop Close to Freezing Point

Cool air sweeping in from the northwest dropped temperatures in the Bay of Quinte area close to the freezing point last night.

The temperature at Belleville early this morning dropped to 38 degrees while a Trenton thermometer was reported to have fallen even lower.

At Sterling the mercury dipped to just above freezing, while at Killaloe, 100 miles north of Belleville a low of 28 degrees was reported.

Although reports of frost damage are not expected in the Belleville area, oil furnaces got their first workout of the new heating season and coats and windbreakers were much in evidence as school children and workers started out for the day.

But there is good news from the weatherman who forecasts warmer temperatures for tonight.

Canada May Have to Import Butter

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada will have to import butter at the present minimum price is maintained, a spokesman for the agriculture department said Thursday.

He said the decision to buy butter abroad should be taken right now and will certainly be taken within the next few weeks.

Present minimum wholesale price of butter in Canada, traditionally a butter export country, is 61 cents a pound. It was increased by two cents last Friday by Agriculture Minister Greene.

Y's Activities

The Belleville YMCA swimming pool has been reopened for use after being drained, thoroughly cleaned and a fresh quantity of 80,000 gallons of water processed to be crystal-clear in readiness for the busy fall and winter season of "Y" activities.

Swimming schedules have been adjusted to take into account the return to school of the boys and girls and to tie in with the gym programs and the availability of qualified leaders. The Y.M.C.A. is Belleville's centre for fitness programs, particularly for men and women alike. Additional fitness classes have been arranged.

Already underway are Monday, Wednesday and Friday noon fitness classes for men. Glen Mawthorne, the new Men's and Boys' program director, has just returned from a concentrated course on fitness classes and has the most progressive and polished as they work toward a better state of fitness in the noon-hour classes. A session in the steam room and a refreshing swim follow the fitness class which is becoming more and more popular with men who care enough about their health to make an effort to become more healthy.

TRADING UNDER WAY

Trading is the season when "Y" leaders are being recruited and assigned to groups and classes. Leadership training is under way with the girls' Leaders Corps holding their first meeting for the season on Friday at 5.30. They will be addressed by Flight Lieutenant R. B. Walker, Senior Recreation Officer, Armed Forces Base, Trenton. Mr. Walker is a former Y. M. C. A. staff man who is an outstanding trainer of leaders. The leaders of boys' groups will meet shortly for training. Qualified swimming instructors and life-guards interested in assisting with "Y" programs should contact Glen Mawthorne, or Miss Meta Kitchen at the "Y" or 962-9245.

Each year the "Y" loses some of its fine young leaders as they leave Belleville to attend universities. Younger leaders are always being developed but from time to time the "Y" staff learns of the presence in the city of top-notch aquatic or group leaders who would like to get in with young people and are willing to take part in "Y" leaders hip training. Several young women who are new to Belleville but are willing to give time to work with young people have volunteered their services. Any others in similar circumstances will be welcomed by the "Y" staff.

"Y" program folders for the coming season are being printed and will be available next week. The fall and winter "Y" program schedules are available in duplicate form at the "Y" office or will be mailed on request. Please phone 962-9245 for information.

ACTS ON CRASHES

RONN (Reuters) — Kai-Uwe von Hassel, West German defence minister, has given the Luftwaffe more power over civilians in his ministry in a move to cut the alarming crash rate of the Starfighter jet fighter-bomber. It was announced Thursday. Since 1961, 61 of the Luftwaffe's fleet of 700 American-designed starfighters have crashed, with the loss of 36 pilots.

Hearts of Irvins Protrude Into Each Other's Chests

TORONTO (CP) — Doctors will try Saturday to separate the McGee Siamese twins because of the deteriorating physical condition of the two girls. Medical authorities say the unusual position of the twins' hearts, which protrude into each other's chests, has dangerously increased the odds against success.

"The general condition of the McGee twins has become less satisfactory," the Hospital for Sick Children announced in a statement.

The girls, Sherry Ann and Crystal Ann, are both gaining weight at the present rate that took them to a combined 36 pounds and become tired more easily by such daily routines as baths and feedings.

They have separate hearts, encased in a common pericardial sac, but the hearts are located horizontally side-by side, with the heart of each baby protruding into the chest of the other.

Doctors thought the condition could be corrected until they talked with Dr. Bradley Allen of Indianapolis, who performed the only known previous operation on Siamese twins with a similar condition.

FEARS OPERATION

His evidence indicated that the condition "may be insurmountable at the time of the operation," the hospital said in a statement.

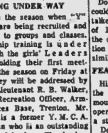
Doctors, who decided Thursday is perform the operation Saturday, say the attempt is necessary to save the twins' life.

It was indicated that the best hope lies in the 18 years of heart-surgery experience since Dr. Allin's operation.

The twins were born at Guelph June 2.

Since it was first determined that an operation was possible, two surgical teams have been studying, practising and standing by.

The twins are joined from chest to navel. They have separate hearts and separate lungs and circulatory systems. Although the livers are joined by a common bridge of tissue, doctors have reported that it is possible to make a separation.



Until the birth of the McGee twins, there had been seven other Siamese births in Canada in the last 15 years. They lived a period of a few hours to six months. Surgery attempted in three cases was unsuccessful.

Fun With Geography

Ever wondered about those strange geographical anomalies on the longest undefended border in the world — those isolated enclaves and islands that the United States and United States, the island is part of the state of Michigan. In this case the border is an imaginary line drawn halfway between the island and the Ontario-Minnesota mainland.

Viewed from the Lakehead, Isle Royale appears as a long thin line on the horizon, a sort of never-never land, remote and mysterious, where the Indians mined copper 3,000 years ago and which today is a national park frequented by wildlife and a handful of summer tourists.

In 1957, during Port Arthur's Centennial year celebrations, a party of Lakehead stalwarts set out for the island. They landed at Washington Harbor and planted a Union Jack, in a mock invasion symbolizing the earlier dispute when Canada held that the island's proximity to Ontario merited its annexation by this country.

Another curious situation involves Minnesota's Northwest Angle State Forest, which is separated from Minnesota proper by the southwest corner of Lake of the Woods, by the Canadian (Ontario) islands dotting the rest of the lake to the north and east, and by Manitoba for all points to the west. Again, it cross studies the dividing line, in this case through Lake of the Woods, one sees the rationality (or irrationality) of regarding this parcel of land as part of Minnesota.

The Alaska Panhandle is another geographical oddity. In this case the United States controls a large section of coastline and outer islands which might more reasonably be considered part of British Columbia. But that is a long story . . . !

Perhaps the strangest situation of all is Point Roberts, the southern tip of a peninsula due south of Vancouver, and due west of the U.S. border town of Blaine. Because it is just south of the 49th parallel, Point Roberts is U.S. (Washington State) territory. Hence, to get to school the youngsters living there must travel by bus through British Columbia and south again into Washington.

Back in our own part of the world there is one section of the Quebec-Derby Line, a community straddling the Quebec-Vermont border where the people are virtually citizens of both countries.

The state of Maine is another region which must have given mappers some sleepless nights, wondering where to draw the line as it is worn. The northeastern part of Maine pokes a melancholy finger into the province of Quebec and in the northwest the traveller could wander in and out of both countries without knowing it.

Want to get away from it all? Then go to Lac Frontiere, Quebec, or to Fort Fairfield, Maine, and start walking from one or the other. But be sure to warn the authorities first, in case you get lost!

Teen Recreation

The need to find accommodation for teen dances during the winter season has been occupying city council.

These have been popular events with the young people, attracting more than 1,000 weekly at Belleville Arena. With the winter hockey season just around the corner, however, the arena will no longer be available.

As Mayor Sid Ellis has pointed out, planned recreation is becoming more important than ever. He noted that Belleville has one of the lowest incidences of juvenile delinquency in the province and existing facilities obviously play a large part in the achievement of this healthy social climate.

However, with the growth of school population it will be readily appreciated that such facilities are barely adequate. This situation regarding the arena is proof of that. Naturally, hockey and skating must take precedence there during the winter and this leaves the problem of finding space for the teen dancers and other activities.

The Parks Board has a proposal for an outdoor rink at the fairgrounds which may lead ultimately to erection of a community centre. While this is all to the good the fact remains its realization is a matter of time and money.

Nevertheless, it may be seen that the provision of such facilities is an issue of some urgency, if Belleville youngsters are to have the recreational outlets they deserve and which are needed to maintain the substantially happy image they now present.

Its armies were crushed but the conservative element won out for independence in 1820 to secure their power, after a more democratic rule in 1824 was established in Spain.

Weed Bed

Brockville Recorder and Times

Scientists are quite certain in that part of the problem the wider growth of weeds is to be found in the widespread-use of detergents today. Detergents contain phosphate and this chemical is known to stimulate the growth of algae. Phosphates are not any present in barnyard run-offs.

Last year the Canadian government gave the detergent manufacturers a year in which to come up with a phosphate-free detergent. This action may be too late. It may be impossible to turn back the clock so far as the St. Lawrence river pollution is concerned. The beautiful river may be doomed to become a vast weed bed.

To Your Good Health
Worried Over Hubby Losing Hair -- at 20

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband is 20 and I am 18. Our problem is that he knows about a handful of hair every day, is self-conscious and is nearing a nervous breakdown as a result.

He bought a hairpiece to give him more courage; it failed. I love him very much and try to help him, but nothing does. If we visit relatives he keeps his hat on and we never go out with friends.

He has dandruff only on top where he is losing his hair. How can we get rid of it?

We have heard about transplantation. Is this good? Cost, etc? — Mrs. C. R.

It's tough to lose hair that young. But it has happened to others. However, with a loyal wife, I suspect that he'll settle down and make the best of the problem.

That reference to dandruff "only on top" makes me wonder. Could this be a seborrheic dermatitis — a skin a llment? If certainly we have him go to a dermatologist (skin specialist) to find out.

Today, transplanting technique appears to be helpful in some cases — when enough hair can be spared from one part of the scalp, and moved, a tiny patch at a time, to another area.

Obviously, the procedure runs into money if very much transplanting needs to be done. It is also important to make certain, first, that there is adequate circulation in the scalp to support the transplanted hair. The hairpiece may well be the "quicker and certainly less expensive answer. Your husband may be unduly sensitive about an inevitable situation. Male baldness is commonly accepted.

Dear Dr. Molner: Your article, beware of letting young children play with small objects, should be blazoned on the walls of parents' kitchens. I have only one criticism. Amend your statement that they should not be allowed to have "anything smaller than a child's thumb". I'd make it smaller than a 35-cent piece.

I had a two-year-old lie on the floor and swallow a button the size of a quarter. The doctor almost refused to operate because he couldn't believe it happened. — R. B. H.

I'll accept your amendment.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a small sore on the inside of my nose which has been troubling me for about two months. At times it seems to heal then become worse again. I had a nosebleed off and on for two weeks and it has cleared up, but my nose is sore when I rub it.

I felt silly going to the doctor about a sore in my nose that trouble me much. Should I? — Mrs. Fred Long.

Maybe your trouble is an ulcer, which can be cleared up quickly. I don't want to frighten you, but facts are facts — what about the Seven Rules for Cancer Safety, which includes "a sore that does not heal"? Examination of "any sore that does not heal"?

I'm not scaring you have a cancer, or that I even think you do. But your trouble fits one of the danger signs. Please call it by an you please, but there's only one smart thing to do. Let your doctor look and decide whether this is a little problem that can be fixed easily, or a big problem that can be fixed if you don't delay.

Note to V. L.: Yes, there is such a thing as stones in the prostate. If they cause no symptoms, nothing need be done about them. If they become troublesome because of size or number, they can be removed surgically. Otherwise forget them.

No Boost For Security

Wall Street Journal

One aim of a welfare state is to give everyone a sense of security, but even the power of the state can't provide for all contingencies.

Consider Norway, where the government has gone so far as to guarantee a four-week annual holiday for housewives. When a housewife gets fed up with her lot, she calls the local branch of Housewives Relief which sends over an "acceptable" substitute to fill in for her.

We're all for easing housewives' chores, one way or another, but in this case something seems to have been overlooked. Namely, what happens to the housewife's sense of security if hubby finds the substitute is not just acceptable but superior?

LIon Tamer

San Mateo (Calif.) Times

Three lions being flown in a cargo plane from Germany to London escaped from their compartment and broke into the cockpit. The pilot and co-pilot fled, then off with a fire axe until the plane could make an emergency landing in Brussels. The crew escaped through the cockpit emergency exit, which was quickly covered with a net.

While policemen and firemen stood guard with submachine guns, a zoologist, armed only with a broomstick and a net, calmly opened the plane door, went inside and coaxed the lions out into crates.

And who was this fearless hero? No hero, but a heroine, Agatha Gyan.

"When a century and a half ago, Sir Walter Scott asked "And dare'st thou then to beard the lion in his den," he couldn't have anticipated an affirmative answer from a woman. But Scott has happened in the world — and women — since Sir Walker's day.

Canadians—A Mobile People

Montreal Star

Canadians have always been thought of as a mobile people. So many were immigrants, or children or grandchildren of immigrants, so many were fresh off the farm, or had started life in another province that they did not need a long period of their willingness to move to improve their lot. But Vladimir Anderson, in a study prepared for the Economic Council of Canada, has come up with statistics that show that not only are Canadians willing to move, they are in fact one of the most mobile people in the world.

The figures show, too, that internal migration periodically from rural to urban areas, as well as the movement from one part of the country to another, has far overshadowed net immigration from outside the country, at least during the period of Miss Anderson's study which was from 1921 to 1950. Net immigration during that time was 1,400,000 or less than half the total of 3,200,000 who moved off the farm to urban areas. Net movement into non-farm areas, including immigration, totalled 4,000,000 during that 30-year period.

Undoubtedly the main reason for moving from the farm to urban areas was the difference in average income levels. Miss Anderson found that during the period she studied there was little change in the farm gap, except perhaps in Ontario, where the only significant increase in per capita farm income relative to non-farm income took place. Nationally, however, the gap has always been sufficient to twist the non-farm income.

The largest difference was in the Maritimes, where the average farm income was only 20 per cent of average non-farm income and this was reflected in the movement of population out of the area. Between 1921 and 1950, for instance, there was a net outflow from the Atlantic region of 110,500 persons and between 1941 and 1950, there was a flight of another 180,000.

Miss Anderson's study also turned up figures to prove something else that had always been accepted — that foreign born people tend to be more mobile than those born in the country, and that their children are far more like them in this regard than the children of Canadians who have been here two, three or four generations.

Economic Council's Study

Financial Times

The Economic Council's study on unemployment is interesting, coming on the trend which emerged as the principal theme of the council's second annual report last January. With the increasing pace of technological advance Canada is going to need more highly educated workers than our educational institutions are yet producing. The shortage of properly qualified labour, which industry is feeling already, will become worse. It threatens to become a limiting factor on Canada's economic growth.

At the same time the employment opportunities for young men and women who have not finished high school are decreasing, and that trend will continue lately. That is the projection of the 17 companies covered in the council's survey. It is true that though they do not repres ent Canadian employers as a whole the trend is the same direction everywhere.

Over the next five years industry will take a few more youngsters from vocational and technical schools, but mines their greatest opportunity is to the stage of at least high school graduation and opportunities are shrinking fast.

Another very significant change revealed by the compilation is the increasing number of high school graduates which they will be looking for. With 17 years ago it was commonly assumed that the scientific and technical revolution put a premium on scientists and engineers. The general arts graduate was regarded with some suspicion by many businessmen.

Today these companies expect to need 46 percent more university graduates in 1970 than were employed in 1956 and fewer graduates with scientific or technical degrees, but 45 percent more with degrees in humanistic disciplines. It is a pity that the study does not break these down. We have no way of knowing whether they will want economists or bachelors of commerce or engineers or chemists or what. But the implication is clear. The demand is going to be increasingly for people with the education and adaptability which should be the fruit of a good education in liberal arts disciplines.

Narrowly trained specialists are the first casualties of an age of discovery. The world changing so rapidly the greatest need is for men who have learned to learn and go on learning to the end of their days.

Strictly Personal
Writers Strive for Clarity

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Consider the torture of a painter who was forced to use only the primary colors — nothing but red, yellow and blue — in his work. The poor man would be mad in a month, just contemplating the frustration the whole spectrum of strange and beautiful hues and shades which he was not allowed to employ.

A professional writer is in something of the same fix. In order to observe the virtues of clarity and simplicity, he generally forgoes the use of any unusual words or phrases. Neither poet or a professor is permitted a certain amount of verbal obscurity.

Since words are the tools of a writer, he early in life equips himself with as many tools as he can — more than he will ever possibly use — for a conscientious craftsman wants to be ready for any emergency.

Like most writers, there are thousands of words I have dredged away in my storeroom, which lie there gathering dust over the years.

Nor do I ever use them in conversation, where they would seem pretentious and pompous. I write, as I talk, mostly in primary colors, for the basic job of a journalist is to communicate, not to coruscate (there, I won't use it).

But it does seem rather a shame — like a doctor who spends years amassing information about diseases and then devotes all his time to treating runny noses in children. And I suspect that occasionally the doctor secretly wishes for at least one case of battling malignancy.

Then, too, the temperament of a national culture enters into the picture. Take the German countries, for instance, the writer is allowed considerable latitude, and is respected for his broad command of language. The reader humbly looks up words he doesn't understand, and is grateful for the chance to augment his vocabulary.

American, on the whole, takes a dim view of any writer who does not talk their language, immediately suspecting him of being uppity or arrogant. The professor's epithet of "highfalutin" has lingered into the 20th century, pretty much in the same form as it was originally hooted upon as vaguely un-American.

They Can't Spell, Add or Subtract

Hamilton Spectator

Air Canada has performed a distinct public service by reminding Canadians that many accounts imagination just as much as quantity.

In a lengthy, detailed brief to an interprovincial conference on education, manpower in Montreal, the other day Mr. Crowe stirring briefly spelled out problems familiar to every person who has employed — or at least many high school graduates today can't spell, add, subtract, or think for themselves.

This is one of those curious situations that everyone knows is something, but does not seem to mentions because it seems vaguely unpatriotic amid the national scrambling to share out still more high school diplomas and still more university degrees. In a much needed effort to supply business and industry with more trained and competent people the country has collectively gone off base, tends to deify pieces of paper called diplomas and spends far too little time worrying about what they represent.

A person with a grade 12 certificate will get a job today ahead of someone who has only passed grade 8 but the real contribution to the national welfare is all if the Grade 12 graduate can't spell and so finds as a clerical job that his employer must spend valuable time and money to teach him.

The Air Canada brief goes even further. It charges that a high school system across the nation is delivering graduates with a lack of common standards, are we stepping up the number of high school and university graduates each year, many of them have studied the "wrong things."

The coincidental publication by the Economic Council of Canada of a study called Manpower Planning in Industry predicts a vastly increased corporate need for high school and university trained personnel by 1970. Requirements for university graduates will increase by 46 per cent and the 17 corporations used in this survey will want 37.3 per cent more high school graduates.

In its annual report some months ago the Council pungently illustrated the correlation between education and earning power. It quoted statistics to the United States, which already paces us in developing higher education.

Unfortunately, while they demonstrate need, reports like this do not always make us think in terms of graduation as an end in itself. They do not look upon as vaguely un-American.

MR. AND MRS. MARVIN V. REID

Reid – Francis

Bethesda United Church, Crookston, was the scene of a lovely wedding on Friday, September 9th, 1966, at 7 p.m., when Gloria Gail Francis, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas R. Francis, Crookston, became the bride of Marvin Vincent Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don L. Reid, Wanhoe.

The double-ring ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. O. E. Wagar, Belleville, assisted by the Rev. W. H. Stobbart, Jamesville. Mrs. Reg. Haggerty, church organist, furnished traditional wedding music. Mrs. Dale Benson was soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, entered the church wearing a toe-length bridal gown of ivory white peau-de-soie, with portrait neckline. The Empire waist was finished with an imported braid insertion. Sleeves were elbow length with a wide ruffle also trimmed with the braid. A matteau panel fell from shoulder to hem caught with a tailored bow. Her headpiece was a crown of pearls and crystals caught to a bouffant veil of tulle illusion. She carried a bouquet of pink and white mums mingled with roses.

The attendants were Miss Sharon Francis, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids Miss Mary Scerri and Miss Lorna Fitzgerald of Belleville. All three were identical toe length gowns of rare rose mogasheil. They were fashioned with portrait neckline and the Empire waist was trimmed with band made braid. A panel fell from the waist to the hem. Their headdresses were floor length capelets caught to tiered veils in a matching shade. Each carried a bouquet of pink and white mums.

The two flower girls, Shirley Francis and Bonnie Francis of Crookston, cousin of the bride, were toe-length gowns of apple green mogasheil the same style as the bridesmaids, with white accessories. Their headdresses were hand made braid. Each carried a basket of yellow baby mums.

Mr. Ellis De Clair of Kingston attended the bridegroom while Mr. Jack Francis of Belleville, cousin of the bride and Mr. Paul Reid of Ottawa, brother of the bridegroom ushered the guests.

The wedding reception was held in the church parlors where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a two-piece ensemble in mulberry mogasheil with matching silk velvet hat, black accessories and a corsage of pink miniature roses. She was assisted by the mother of the bridegroom, wearing a two piece gold double-knit suit with brown accessories and a corsage of bronze talisman roses.

For a wedding trip to New York State, the bride chose a three piece double-knit suit in moss green with black accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Successful Living

Would-be Worker Lacks Experience

DEAR DORIS: My husband has had two heart attacks, so I just have to get out and get a job. I seem to be having trouble. I am 40 years old. I don't look it; I dress well and neatly.

When I fill out the application and they see my grade and age they tell me I don't have the experience. Doris, I'm not afraid of work, and I'm alert and I know I wouldn't take long to learn.

So please tell me where is my mistake? I know my handwriting isn't very good. But I'm not that dumb. — TOO OLD AT FORTY.

DEAR TOO: Dumb? Not a bit of it!

You wrote to me, didn't you?

I'd suggest you upgrade yourself. Night classes could improve your writing, English and grammar. A volunteer assignment could give you experience.

And the ten-cent leaflet "Leveller With the Years," which I am sending you, can give you tips about turning yourself out looking as if you just stepped out of a bandbox.

Don't look dumb or dumpy when you next sally forth.

(Doris has studied human behavior and can guide you to the help you need. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Dear Susanna: Do any of your readers have a good homemade shampoo recipe? Our teenage daughter wreaks havoc on the budget with so many hair washings. Some help on this would be appreciated.

In a vastly different vein, I have a worthwhile suggestion for campers and hunters this fall.

Wife of New Premier Woman of Simple Tastes

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A woman of simple tastes stands behind South Africa's new prime minister, Balthasar Vorster.

Tini Vorster is fair-haired and blue-eyed. At election time her home becomes a virtual campaign office. She is her husband's most active supporter and has done everything from type letters to canvass for him.

At home she is a conscientious wife and mother to their three children. She lays out the clothes for Vorster, who is so unconcerned and absent-minded about his dress that he has been seen wearing unmatched shoes.

Vorster's assassinated predecessor, Hendrik Verwoerd, often said his wife Betsy was a source of great strength to him. Vorster feels the same way about Tini.

MET AT SCHOOL

Tini, then Martini Malan, met her future husband when both were studying at Stellenbosch University in the 1930s. He was studying law and she arts, specializing in social work. Hendrik and Betsy Verwoerd also met at this university.

The Vorsters started married life in 1941 at Port Elizabeth, where Vorster established a legal practice. Nine months later he was interned by the government of Jan Christian Smuts for his outspoken pro-German sympathies at a time when South Africa was fighting on the side of the Allies in the Second World War.

Mrs. Vorster, their income gone, joined a state welfare department, specializing in work in the children's courts.

When Vorster was released 17 months later, they went to Brakpan, 25 miles east of Johannesburg.

Mrs. Vorster, as her husband, is a fluent speaker in both the country's official languages, Afrikaans and English.

She has maintained her interest in social work. One of her greatest desires is to pursue research into the problems of alcoholic women and their rehabilitation.

She is an excellent cook and shares her husband's fondness of sport.

The Vorsters' daughter, Elsa, 21, gained her bachelor of arts degree last year and is taking her diploma in librarianship. Sons Willem, 18, and Pieter, 16, are pupils at a Pretoria Afrikaans sing Gymnasium.

Mr., Mrs. Clarence Hall Fifty Years Married

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hall of Plainfield recently celebrated their golden anniversary and so mark the occasion visited in Toronto with Betty Roy and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Lamb. Later they visited cousins, Mr. K. M. Dyson and Frances Sullivan at St. Catharines, who entertained at a wedding supper at the Welland Hotel. The couple also visited a nephew and his family, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Emerson at Fort Erie. Upon arrival back home they received a number of callers where a three-tier anniversary cake enhanced the coffee table, also displayed was a large number of congratulatory cards.

The following evening a group of neighbors surprised the couple at their home. After congratulations on 50 years of wedded life a number of songs were sung by Mrs. Arnold Dilts and Mr. Allan Gibson. At this time Mr. and Mrs. Hall were presented with a platform rocker. They were doubly surprised when on the next evening Mr. Hall's cousins arrived and following greetings and the singing of some old favorites Mrs. Gerald Swan read an appropriate address and presented them with an electric fry pan. Mrs. Jack Farley gave a reading to conclude a pleasant evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall were married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Collins by Rev. A. C. Huffman in 1916. The bride, the former Mary Collins, was attended by her sister, now Mrs. Blanche Emerson, while the "bridegroom" was attended by a cousin, Mr. Arthur Hall.

The couple lived in the Hall Settlement. Lot 28, Concession 7, where Mr. Hall was a successful farmer for 46 years. He sold out to Mr. Donald Bowers and moved to where his parents had lived on Concession 7.

Both are members of Trinity United Church at Roslin and for many years Mr. Hall served as secretary of the official board. He also was president of the East Hastings Cheese Board and a present chairman of the Victoria Cemetery Board.

Mrs. Hall has served in the Sunday School, the W.M.S. and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the church, as well as assisting with young people's work. She is still active in U.C.W. work and the Women's Institute.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall are held in high esteem by their many friends and neighbors who joined in wishing them many more years of health and happiness.

Reader's Friday Column — How to Cook Chefini Squash

QUESTION:

. . . how do you cook Chefini Squash . . . (. . . a new hybrid squash similar to zucchini)? P. E.

ANSWER:

Thank you for the three slices of chefini squash which you mailed in me. They are very similar to zucchini as you say. Consequently I cooked them as I do zucchini.

1) I cut the 6" chefini squash into strips 3 x ¼" and dipped them in salted beaten egg, then in fine crumbs and slowly fried them until golden in butter about 12 minutes. They could be egged and crumbed and fried in hot deep fat also. I tasted zucchini squash cut in strips and fried in deep fat this way on my recent trip to Calfornia. The 6" zucchini are so young and tender they cook in a few minutes.

2) The 8" zucchini I washed and sliced. I pared half of the slices thinly and left the remainder unpared. I cooked these in a small amount of salted water until barely tender, then drained and served them in a medium white sauce to which I added a generous amount of parsley. I decided that paring the second half was unnecessary as the skin is so soft and tender.

3) The 12" zucchini was the size and shape of a medium vegetable marrow but green all over. Half of this I sliced very thinly and pan-fried slowly in butter until just tender. Our family, especially my brother, thought this was delicious.

3a) The other half I cut into 6 even pieces and without removing the fine seeds I inverted them on a well buttered shallow baking dish. I added a little water to the pan, buttered the upper outside skin and baked them at 375 deg. Fahr. about 35 to 40 minutes. This baking time would depend on the size of the pieces of chefini squash. Bake until tender and serve with butter as you would baked acorn squash halves.

United Church Council Accepts Principle of Anglican Union

By NEIL LOUTITT

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Union with the Anglican Church was considered by commissioners to the 22nd general council of the United Church of Canada as the most practical way to add to them during the nine-day meeting which ended Thursday.

The principles of union with the Anglicans, the report of a joint Anglican - United Church commission on unity, was overwhelmingly accepted by the 400 policy makers of the United Church.

Its acceptance was considered a major step toward union of the two churches which have been unofficially speaking of union for the last 20 years.

In a press conference at the close of the council, church moderator, Rt. Rev. W. C. Lockhart of Winnipeg, said the next step toward union is finding a better way for joint commissions to work together.

Dr. Lockhart felt a major concern is to insure commissions are well-established and organized in such a way they can work efficiently.

DIVERSE NEW IDEAS

"We must devise different patterns and strategy for commission meetings," the United Church leader said. "Commissions must get together and work for days at a time, not a day here and a day there as they have in the past."

In the resolution approving the principles of union it was stressed the principles are not a formula for a new church but a basis to negotiate.

Most church commissioners agreed they were several obstacles to work out and they don't expect a union will be achieved for at least 10 years.

The Anglican Synod approved the principles of union last year.

Union with the Canada Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren Church was also approved during the council. There are about 10,000 EUB followers in Eastern Canada.

It will be the first Canadian church union in Canada since the United Church was formed in 1925 when the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches united.

CATHOLICS ATTEND

Dr. Lockhart said the ecumenical atmosphere of the council was further marked by the unprecedented attendance of two Roman Catholic clergy observers at the sessions.

The general council also asked for revision of Canada's abortion and divorce laws, approving the idea of therapeutic abortions.

A break-down of marriage was endorsed as the sole grounds for divorce in Canada rather than additional marriage violations. This broadened term includes adultery and several grounds.

The council urged the Canadian government to make further statements opposing escalation of the Viet Nam war and decided to send food and medical aid to the people of North North and South Viet Nam.

The 23rd general council will be held in Kingston, Ont., in 1968.

Dr. H. W. Vaughan, secretary of the United Church's board of colleges, blamed a minority opinion over a stained glass window for charges of heresy against Dr. Arthur Phelps of Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B.

Dr. Phelps Johnson, 39, a retired minister now living in Merritt, B.C., drew a geometric design representing the Trinity which he wanted made into a stained glass window for the chapel at Mount Allison, Dr. Vaughan said.

He said Dr. Ebbutt, head of theological studies at the university, had doubted the design was valid.

Dr. Johnson laid a complaint against Dr. Ebbott on grounds of heresy while four more members of the Moncton presbytery.

The presbytery executive committee dismissed the charges and an appeal by Dr. Johnson before the Maritime conference was also dismissed.

The United Church's general council agreed Thursday that Dr. Johnson had until Nov. 1 to file a complaint which could be considered by a judicial committee of the council.

In Sackville, Dr. Ebbutt said as far as he was concerned the Maritime conference now is the defendant because it threw out the earlier charge.

Provinces

said, became Ottawa's presence there is unconstitutional. The British North America Act gave direct tax fields to the provinces.

Faced with the need to increase services in many fields, Quebec had no alternative. "This is the only deal open to us."

Premier John Robarts of Ontario didn't seek the whole income tax field. But his provinces need immediate increase in the slice of these taxes it now gets.

Premier Duff Roblin of Manitoba was especially vocal about the soaring cost of education and his province's need for more revenue to meet this. He said the federal government was ignoring this aspect."

Several provinces were ruffled by the federal proposal to withdraw from such shared-cost areas as hospital insurance and national health grants and the Canada Assistance Plan covering welfare, old age pensions and blind and disabled allowances.

TUNE CHANGED?

At the press conference, Mr. Sharp said Ottawa had been accused of paternalism for fostering such programs. But now it is the provinces that have. He found the provinces weren't eager to shoulder the responsibility for the programs despite the tax slice they were offered to pay for them.

Mr. Johnson said provinces object to federal intervention into their jurisdiction with programs that have ready-drawn terms.

There had been no prior agreements with the provinces when Ottawa introduced a national medical care insurance program on a cost-sharing basis as a "fait accompli."

"We would have liked a say on medicare," he added.

Mr. Roberts said he objected to Ottawa moving into provincial fields and then saying in effect: "We're really not involving, we're only offering money."

Equalization grants went down fine with those provinces — Quebec and the Atlantic provinces except Prince Edward Island—that stand to see their shares given a good boost under the plan proposed next month.

THATCHER MIFFED

Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, whose province would turn immediately to a "have" from a "have-not" in the new setup, was miffed despite an Ottawa proposal that his current payment be phased out over five years.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia said the whole principle of equalization payments should be changed because it hadn't worked. Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta said some way should be found so that residents of richer provinces aren't asked to carry too heavy a tax penalty to support the poorer areas.

Both provincers are in the "have" category.

Mr. Manning, Mr. Thatcher and Mr. Roblin all suggested that the situation be too modified at the moment to start drafting a new five-year agreement and instead extend the ruling for the Carter royal commission report on the whole tax structure as a guide, skipping an interim one-year agreement in the meantime.

Mr. Sharp told the press conference he hadn't found much enthusiasm for a straight extension of the present agreement on its present terms.

AGAINST FORCES PLAN

HALIFAX (CP)—Gerald Regan, Nova Scotia Liberal leader, says he opposes the unification of Canada's three armed forces. He told a news conference Thursday he will present a resolution to the national Liberal party conference in Ottawa next month calling for the retention of the separate designations of the army, navy and air force with separate uniforms for each service.

Here Is What Might Happen If H-Bombs Dropped on Canada

By CARMAN CUMMING

OTTAWA (CP) — Suppose, for the sake of argument, that the atom started winging its morrow and nuclear weapons hit Montreal and Winnipeg.

Most Canadians ignorantly would rather not think about it, but it could happen.

If it did, would the country disintegrate into complete chaos? What would be the main problems and what would have to be dealt with?

Most minds boggle at questions like these. Yet a number of Canadians are employed full-time to plan and prepare for just such a situation.

Officials of the Emergency Measures Organization are the first to admit that there aren't any firm answers on what might happen in a nuclear war. There are just too many "ifs."

But some assumptions have been made for planning purposes.

Among these are these:

—If an attack is launched against Canada, there won't be much warning—perhaps 15 minutes or less. But there might be some advance warning of the possibility of attack through a buildup in international tensions.

—Civil production facilities would probably cease for a time.

—Nuclear fallout would be the main threat for most Canadians, and communities along the U.S. border would face the greatest threat.

—The "more likely" civilian defence units in Canada would be Halifax, Quebec City, Beauharnois, Que., Montreal, Ottawa, Ottawa-Hull, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Ont., Hamilton, Windsor, Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria.

MOVE GOVERNMENTS

With these assumptions in mind, a flexible skeleton plan has been worked out to keep basic public services going.

War should break out, this is what the planners figure would happen:

Many government personnel in Ottawa and the provincial capitals would be advised by a chain - alert system and would move out quickly to relocation centres.

The federal government would be set up at several prepared sites in the Ottawa Valley and light weapons basis, with EMO personnel acting as guards.

Certain departments would take responsibility for emergency planning in these areas, as set out in the government's "war book." Other departments such as national revenue, would virtually disappear until the crisis was over.

For administration purposes, the country would be divided into 10 regions, with the same boundaries as the provinces and 22 zones. Headquarters of the zones would be set up in "holes"—protected shelters built mainly underground to provide accommodation for 275 to 325 people.

SIX SHELTERS BUILT

Six of these structures already have been built, at Debert, N.S., Valcartier, Que., Camp Borden, Ont., Shilo, Man., Penhold, Alta., and Petawawa, B.C. Headquarters are not yet constructed in the other four zones.

The question of who is to run these headquarters has not been settled, but provincial premiers appear to be likely candidates. If the premier did take charge, EMO officials say, he would be directly responsible to the national headquarters in such vital areas as manpower, transport, resources and communications.

But a degree of vagueness hangs over the entire area of federal-provincial or national-regional responsibilities.

A federal-provincial conference was held on emergency planning last summer and a communique afterward said the meeting "agreed that during the initial stages of a nuclear war each provincial government should be capable of individual operations and should be given necessary authority to ensure the proper control of policies and resources."

It added that there "seemed to be a consensus that the prime ministers and premiers would be a logical choice to become regional commissioners."

EMERGENCY LINK

While the leadership is still a matter of debate, it has been agreed that the regional headquarters would be staffed by both federal and provincial officials as well as military and civilian men.

The national and regional headquarters would be linked by an emergency communications system. A similar system would also go into operation and all broadcasting stations would come under a CBC-controlled network.

Planning and last year announcements prepared by EMO would be broadcast automatically as the start of the emergency.

With passage of an already-prepared War Measures Act, a shadow organization called the war supplies agency would difficulty come into being, with massive powers to control production and allocate supplies.

This agency has been set up in its shadow form by the prime ministers and premiers branch of the department of defence production. In wartime it would absorb the whole department and would also draw in experts from private life and from other government departments and agencies.

NAMES WITHHELD

The private citizens, most of them connected with some of areas of production or supply, have already been chosen and most have received some training, but their names have not been released.

The supplies agency would operate on all levels, from municipal to national. In some cases the higher levels businessmen would be brought in with specialized knowledge of one area, such as fuel or drugs.

Others, at the municipal level, would control the entire supply system for the area.

Even the mayor and council would have to bow to the decisions of the federal officers, in matters of supply, although in other areas local officials would continue their usual functions.

G. E. Wordside, director of the emergency supplies planning branch, says essentially the aim is to find people from any area or profession who would be needed to keep the country operating.

"The real concern here is to put together integrated teams that could cope with the terrible problems facing us."

He said he could not guess how the situation would develop after the first period of chaos—"but if we don't survive, everything else is academic."

Centennial Park Real Community Project

DESERONTO — Proof that the Centennial Park is a bona fide community project was brought out throughout the meeting of the committee Tuesday evening. The Mayor and at least two of his councillors, the P.U.C., the Firemen, the Fish and Game Club, the Lions Club, the Business and Professional Men's Club, the women's organizations of the churches, the Girl Guides, the White Elephant Store, the Deseronto Sports Organization were all in the picture. The Department of Lands and Forests, the County Health Unit, and the Provincial Parks organization have all helped with advice or are to be consulted.

A letter from the P.U.C. advised the committee that eight 500-watt lights and the labor for installing them would be donated to the park project.

Ralph Lawlor, superintendent of works for the Commission, pointed out that lights of this type might not be suitable for the trailer park, and suggested that pole lights be established later. He was given authority to act in this matter.

Work is to concentrate on two steps in the project now. The trailer camp is to be levelled, and a load of fill secured. Underbring in fill, with Mr. Lloyd supervising.

The Fish and Game Club has volunteered to bring in large trees for immediate shade, and Don Kimmett suggested consulting the Department of Lands and Forests regarding the most suitable variety for shade, a suggestion received approval.

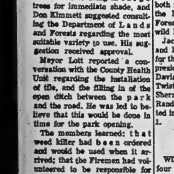
Mayor Lott reported a conversation with the County Health Unit regarding the installation of the, and the filling in of the open ditch between the park and the road. He was led to believe that this would be done in time for the park opening.

The members learned: that weed killer had been ordered and would be used when it arrived; that the Firemen had volunteered to be responsible for seeing that the new seeding was kept watered; and that the chairman was negotiating with the Provincial Parks authorities to try to secure some of their unused fireplaces.

Present Plaque To Lions Club Past Governor

DESERONTO — Sig Westman, past district governor of the Lions Club, was honored at the meeting in Deseronto Monday evening for his many years of distinguished service with the club. He was presented with a plaque in recognition of his outstanding contribution to the work of the organization.

The deputy governor of this region, Carman Babcock of Verona, made the presentation.



Nine members were presented with buttons signifying perfect attendance for one or more years. Mr. Wessman, who now lives in Belleville, has not missed a meeting in 19 years. Gerald Lott, treasurer, and Eric Gustafson, the secretary, come next with 18 years of perfect attendance, and William Crabbe with 10. The others were for shorter periods: Merrill Shoeman, Peter Morris, Jack Hamilton, Leonard Wilson, and Jim Barlow.

James Moors and James Ivey, both from the Napanee office of the Department of Lands and Forests, showed two films on wild life.

BLESS NEW BELLS

WINNIPEG (CP) — A peal of four new bells is being hung in the tower of St. Paul's College on the University of Manitoba campus at Fort Garry. Cast in Holland, the bells will be blessed at a special ceremony before installation.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

AROUND THE SPORTS CIRCUIT:

After a rapid and truly impressive growth especially since World War Two, one of the largest yachting and pleasure boating bodies in the country is the Canadian Power Squadrons. This is a non-commercial body of skippers and navigators which has as its primary object teaching men and women how to handle and navigate boats safely and to study the science of boat operation.

Without exception, unit squadrons hold instruction courses of study lasting over a period of weeks. They are open to men and women and upper teen-agers. After learning the rudiments of small boat-handling, rules of the road, the compass, the sextant, aids to navigation, yacht etiquette etc., many take a final examination and apply for formal admission into a squadron. There is no compulsion to join and some do not.

"The operation of a power craft or yacht demands as much care and caution as that of the automobile" a veteran member of the Bay of Quinte Power Squadron told me. "Every boat owner or operator should be well-trained in the rules of navigation and safety. These courses promote not only safety afloat but good fellowship among enthusiasts of both power and sail."

The Bay of Quinte Squadron, raised one of the best in the country in holding its annual courses with registration night set for Monday, September 26th at the yacht club, according to Commander Reg. Edwards.

The courses get under way during the first week of October. New members will take instruction in piloting and seamanship while those with the courses in junior navigation advanced piloting, navigation elective, weather, engine maintenance, sailing and marine electronics.

Boat owners and operators who sail or drive at their leisure and do so with-ally are well-advised to take advantage of these courses. Common sense is a great factor in any form of craft or motor operation, but it will be greatly enhanced by a mind trained for the proper handling of vehicles whether on the road or the water.

Potential students should contact Power Squadron officials at the Yacht Club for further information.

BRIDGE AHOY

Some three or four years ago mixed bridge went into the sunshine of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Squadron as a pronounced success. Now, the club secretary Jack Carson informs me, there will be a revival of the popular pastime this winter.

"It will be a Yacht Club league" says Jack "but not confined to members. Any couple, man and wife or Jack and Jill friends can join. They do not have to be experts or professionals. The league will be based on a friendship motif, something for players who play for fun and the game alone."

As of now the bridge is planned for Wednesday nights with the opening playing date being Oct. 26.

For further information call Jack Carson at 968-5150.

Women golfers of the Bay of Quinte Country Club wind up the official season tomorrow with their closing field day. Ontario senior weightlifting championships are being held at Quinte Secondary School tomorrow afternoon and evening . . . Blind bowlers are enjoying the sport at the Bowl-O-Drome every Saturday . . . Don't be surprised to see Hilroy "Hilmie" Menard in a Mo-Hawks uniform this winter . . . Next Wednesday the Bay of Quinte Country Club golf boss Ted Arnold Eastern Ontario Pond Gold Tournament with three big trophies up for grabs. Upwards of 170 "fooditers" are expected to tee off . . . BOOS FOR THE CHAMP

LIMA, Peru (Reuters)—Raymond Ceulemans of Belgium won the world three-cushion billiards championship Thursday for the fifth straight time. He beat Humberto Suguimitsu of Peru 60-32 in 32 breaks in the final game of the match, watched by spectators in the packed National Stadium dropped bottles from the stand and booed the Belgian.

BALFOUR'S BACK

GALT (CP) — Earl Balfour will be back for his third season as playing coach of Galt Hornets of the Ontario Hockey Association senior series this year.

A former National Hockey League player with Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks, Balfour has a record of 41 goals and 31 assists in two seasons as a senior.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ferguson Jenkins was only 12 when he made the trip from Chatham, Ont., to Miami, Fla., to start his first season of professional baseball.

Despite his age and the fact that few Canadians ever make baseball's big time, the gangling six - foot, five - inch righthander compiled a 7-2 record in 11 starts in the Florida league that winter.

His 0.97 earned run average was also impressive enough to earn him a job with Buffalo Bisons of the International League during the regular summer campaign.

For the next two years Jenkins wandered around the AAA leagues until getting his call to Chicago Cubs late in the 1965 season.

Now it looks as if Jenkins has blossomed into a full - grown major leaguer.

The 22-year-old Canadian won his third straight victory Thursday night leading the Cubs to an 8-2 National League victory over Atlanta Braves.

During the nine complete innings he allowed four hits, one earned run and two bases on balls while striking out four batters. His season record is 5-7.

The Cubs sent 10 men to the plate in the six-run seventh inning after pitcher Tony Cloninger had retired the first 18 men he faced.

In the only other two games played, San Francisco Giants walloped New York Mets 10-4 but remained three games behind the league - leading Los Angeles Dodgers, who edged second - place Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3.

The Pirates are now 2½ games behind the Dodgers.

Two home runs by Tito Fuentes and another by Jim Hart led the Giants to victory. Fuentes' first homer ignited a three-run rally in the first inning. His second of the night, in the fifth inning, scored winning pitcher Bob Bolin.

The Dodgers collected all their runs in a first - inning outburst. Don Drysdale checked the Pirates on three hits, including successive home runs by Roberto Clemente and Willie Stargell in the sixth inning.

Drysdale, whose record is now 10-18, needed final-inning relief help from Phil Regan.

Imlach Silent?

Leafs Mystery "Who Is Signed"

PETERSBOROUGH (CP) Forward Peter Stemkowski was one of the saddest players around Thursday as the Toronto Maple Leafs started their National Hockey League training camp.

Most of his clothing was stolen from his car after he had driven in from Winnipeg. The thieves left one suit and four white shirts and Stemkowski wandered around in a hotel lobby wearing a sweat shirt and slacks.

Another sad player was Andre Champagne, a 22-year-old forward from Ottawa who was told by team doctors that he has a defective muscle in his left leg and must return to Toronto for further examination.

The medical staff also expressed concern over Alan Stanley, the 40-year-old defenceman who missed last season's playoffs and underwent an operation to remove cartilage from his right knee.

"He's still getting reactions from the operation," said Dr. Hugh Smythe, Leafs' team physician.

REMOVE FLUID

Stanley was worked at the hockey school in Pension Falls this summer, said the knee felt all right but some liquid had to be removed.

Punch Imlach, Leaf coach and general manager, said he intended to find out how sound the knee was as soon as possible. "Stanley will play regularly at once," he said. "There will be no taking it easy for the first month."

The traditional pre - season guessing - game of "who's signed the contract" remained a mystery Thursday except for Tim Horton, who confirmed he had already signed.

Imlach did not release terms and declined comment on what other players had been lured to the camp.

Players missing at the opening Thursday included defencemen Marcel Pronovost and Marc Reaume and forwards Norm Armstrong and Larry Jeffrey.

All were given permission to skip the first few days of work-outs.

Says Imlach

'Brewer Won't Play For Leafs'

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — (CP) — George (Punch) Imlach, manager-coach of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League says ex-Leaf Carl Brewer will never play for him again.

Imlach also said the mere mention of Brewer's name has been banned from Leaf's training camp which opened here Thursday, two days ahead of other NHL teams.

Brewer, 27, a defenceman, left training camp last fall and last week announced he is seeking reinstatement as an amateur to play for Canada's national team in the world hockey championships in Vienna next March. Not to be reinstated he must be removed from the League's suspended list where he was placed when he quit the team a year ago.

"If he wanted into camp today and said he wished to sign a contract and be reinstated as a pro, I would look him which of the other five National Hockey League teams he wanted to play for," Imlach says.

"Then I'd attempt to make a deal for him."

Imlach said Brewer has walked out on the Leafs three times — first to play football for McMaster University in Hamilton, then out of last year's training camp and for the third time, this summer.

"This summer he walked into my office and offered me a contract," Imlach said. "Then I offered him one. Next I read in the paper he had decided to play for Canada's national team."

Imlach said he may have to remove Brewer from the student's inactive list now that he has completed his studies for a bachelor-of-arts degree at the University of Toronto.

"I will have to move him to our reserve list if the other NHL teams make the request," he said. "But his status remains the same. He's a suspended player."

Switch Mann Cup To Arena

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—The Canadian Lacrosse Association announced Thursday night the fourth game of the best-of-seven Canadian senior lacrosse finals will be played Saturday in the Peterborough Civic Arena.

The venue was changed after Bob Marsh, coach of the Vancouver team, and Bob Allan of the Peterborough Petes, said they would not play another game of the Mann Cup series in the city's Memorial Centre.

Both coaches complained that ground checks covering the ice surface made the floor slippery.

The ice was laid earlier this week for the Toronto Maple Leafs' National Hockey League training camp.

A CLA official said the Civic Arena has a maximum capacity of 2,000 compared to 3,000 in the Memorial Centre.

Peterborough defeated Vancouver 6-5 Wednesday night to take a 2-1 lead in the series. More than 3,000 fans attended.

Jockey, 60 Refuses to Hang Up Tack

SCARBOROUGH, Me. (AP) — At 60, Canadian-born jockey Claude Hooper isn't about to head down the homestretch to retirement.

"I'll stop riding when I feel it's time to quit," said Hooper, a native of Windsor, Ont., who last month was presented a trophy at Scarborough Downs for his long racing career.

Hooper has been riding since 1906. He got his first taste for thoroughbred racing when as a youth of 16 he saw the Man O'War-Sir Barton match race for $1,000 at the old Kenilworth Park in Windsor.

Hooper also has been taking money in Maine at Rockingham Park in New Hampshire and Green Mountain Park in Vermont.

The five-foot-one, 112-pound jockey has some observations on workouts for thoroughbreds.

"Horses today are not given enough time to loosen up before being asked for their best," he said. "All your ball players get a certain time of exercise before being down."

Riders, Argos Hope To Conquer West

Quarters Have Problems

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One of the harshest facts of life confronting a quarterback is that you can't set up an effective passing game unless you have the ground attack to keep the defence honest.

The point is being brought home painfully to the two youngest signal - callers in the Western Football Conference. Pete Liske of Calgary Stampeders and Randy Kerbow of Edmonton Eskimos.

Liske probably didn't need reminding after spending his rookie year with the powerful Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference last season and being thrown for a league - leading 301 yards while attempting to pass.

Things looked brighter for him this season when he was traded to the Stampeders, a team that built its running attack around the versatile Lovell Coleman and the speedy Ted Woods. But his hopes disappeared when Coleman and Woods were knocked out for the year with injuries in Calgary's opening games.

Kerbow's bulwark against the enemy pass rush was Jim Thomas' Edmonton's deceptive halfback who leads the WFC in rushing and is equally adept at picking holes in the middle and around the defensive flanks of the ends. But Thomas has been out one since Sept. 2 with a charley horse and if gone much longer, Kerbow is in trouble.

PASSES INTERCEPTED

In two games without his safety, Kerbow has had a total of six passes intercepted, bringing his total to a WFC-leading 12 for the season.

Liske will get another taste of that backfield protection, or lack of it, Saturday when Winnipeg Blue Bombers visit Calgary, but Kerbow will have to wait until Monday when Ottawa Rough Riders go to Edmonton.

The other weekend WFC action, Ottawa plays B.C. Lions in Vancouver Saturday and Toronto Argonauts take on Saskatchewan Roughriders Sunday in Regina.

The Ottawa - B.C. game will be televised both East and West by the CBC while Sunday's game in Regina will be televised both east and west by CTV. Saturday's game in Calgary will not be televised.

As far as the Calgary management is concerned, Liske will have a pretty good backup. Coach Jerry Williams says Jerry Keeling will be used as quarterback "if it's needed."

The Stamps will be re-joined by Bob Lueck, a 22-second defensive guard cut earlier when numbers caught up with the club.

UNSURE OF INJURY

Williams didn't know whether linebacker Jerry Campbell's banged knee would be healed enough for him to play but it's safe for sure that offensive tackle Lanny Boleski will sit out the game with a charley horse that has bothered him for some time.

George Hansen will move into Boleski's spot and Ron Atchison will play defensive tackle if Lueck is activated.

Coach Bud Grant doesn't plan any changes in the Bombers' lineup because "there aren't any changes we could make, if we wanted to."

That puts Neal Dunford in tight and for sitting Farrell Funston, who is nursing a knee reinjured last Sunday when Saskatchewan downed Winnipeg 27-24.

Toronto will be out for blood in Regina Sunday as the Argos try for their second victory of the season.

The Roughriders don't plan any lineup changes and linebacker Wally Dempsey may see action again after a 45-day lay - off with injuries suffered earlier in the season. But coach Eagle Keys says it's a bit early to decide whether Dempsey will play.

Ed McQuarters, 6-foot, three-inch lineman from St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League, hopes to see action. He's currently on a five-day tryout with the Roughies.

Meet Picton In Finals

Cats Eliminate Trudeaus 4-1

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Lem Mowat's sixth-frame double snapped a 1-1 deadlock and sent the Bobcats on their way to a 6-1 triumph over Trudeau Motors in hockey weather at Alemite Park last night.

The victory boosted the Bobcats into the Belleville and District Softball League finals against the Picton Kinsmen.

Bobcats ousted Trudeaus in the semi-final four games to one.

Trudeaus found the frigid temperature less to their liking than did the Bobcats from the start. Errors gave the winners a 1-0 lead and only a perfect throw by Larry Soule, from left field to the plate, prevented a higher score with six-batting ending double play.

The losers tied it in their half of the frame. Pirate singled, advanced on sacrifice bunts by Plane and Muirhead and scored on Mawby's single.

A walk and Trudeau's fifth error set the stage for the Cats' three-run rally in the sixth. Mowat delivered his - brand double to plate one and Dr. La Sage singled to deep short. Weston hurried throw on the play went for another error and a 4-1 score.
